Council Cuts Only $2,000

Budget $165 Million, More Needed

By MARILYN JACKSON

The city council unanimously approved a $165.58 million budget for fiscal year 2000, $7.3 million higher than last year, but that won't be the bottom line.

Questioned by Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley, School Superintendent Eugene Creedon and George Umscheid, director of business, said that the contractual agreements with the Quincy Education Association will require separate appropriations.

Mayor James Sheets had included $1.4 million in the school budget to cover the balance of the unpaid 1999 teacher salaries as well as a percentage increase for the year 2000. Because the negotiated percentage increase agreed upon was higher, Sheets said he will have to submit an appropriation to the city council in September for between $800,000 to $1 million.

"The $1.4 million won't be enough," said Umscheid.

"We haven't cost it out," Sheets said Tuesday.

The school department's budget, as presented, of $53.27 million — an increase of slightly more than 5 percent or $2.6 million — was approved by the city councillors with little debate.

In other financial matters, the councillors appropriated $1.9 million for hospital and city expenses incurred during fiscal year 1999. Auditor Robert Foy said that the hospital's FICA expenses, along with unemployment, workman's compensation and stop loss insurance normally would have been paid by hospital revenues which are not there.

The appropriation came from $1.6 million in free cash and a one-time payment of $272,000 as a result of deregulation of electric industry.

In addition, the councillors transferred the $405,206 in free cash and $2.9 million in reserves to the stabilization fund. A sum of $2.25 million was earmarked for hospital costs.

The councillors also restored two budget cuts they had previously approved.

Council President Peter Kolson, who serves as chairman of the city's millennium committee, suggested restoring the $50,000 in funds for the city's celebrations.

After the mayor had agreed to include $500,000 in the city's budget for sidewalk repairs, Kolson said there was no longer a need for the cut.

"If we put back the $50,000 and the $57,000 for the trenches, we will have cut $2,000 after three meeting nights," said Councillor-t-large Paul Harold.

"That's not my idea of legislative deliberations," he said. "I would have written a check for $2,000 and stayed home."

Harold suggested that the celebrations line item was an appropriate place to ask the businesses to contribute. McCauley added that the city has been good to business and perhaps business should "pony up more."

Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill said the Corrections Center Partially Opened

By MARILYN JACKSON

The new community corrections center at 14 Revere Road is partially open for business, a spokesman for Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti confirmed this week.

During the winter and early spring, inmates from the Dedham House of Correction renovated the yellow brick building. Last year, Bellotti's predecessor, John Flood, had secured a $700,000 grant to establish the facility which, when fully operational, will serve between 100 and 200 non-violent offenders.

James Harder, public information director for Bellotti's office, said the building was being opened in stages to make sure the facility is functioning appropriately.

The first component of the new center is to provide urine testing for those individuals who are on probation and require drug screening. He said the Willow Street Medical Center, a state-certified agency, is conducting the testing.

The biggest component of the community corrections program will be the resources to be offered to probationers.

Bellotti is reviewing three proposals from potential vendors to offer GEDs (general education diplomas), job development and alcohol and substance abuse programs. He expects to make a recommendation to the county commissioners within the near future, said Harder.

Neighbors Complain Of Early Morning Hours

Board Cracks Down On Junk Yard

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

"Nobody wants to live near a junk yard" said License Board chairman Joseph Shea at the start of Tuesday's meeting regarding complaints about Sugarman's Junk Yard on Centre St.

He added he was "acutely aware of the most recent concerns of neighbors who said David Sugarman was conducting his business in the wee hours of Sunday.

Sugarman was given a warning that he would have to comply with the city ordinance and not open before 7 a.m. barring a "national disaster".

Police Chief Thomas Frane also said "under no circumstances" can Sugarman operate his business in the early hours and would have to restrict noises and operation of machinery before 7 a.m.

Following complaints from neighbors about the dust and noise and the operation of the yard beginning sometimes at 1 a.m. on a Sunday Frane told the abutters to contact the police department if Sugarman does not abide by the rules set by the board.

He added that in the event that any violation is brought to the police department's attention, "stronger action" will be taken.

Norman Goyette, an aide to Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said the councillor wants to attain a "people friendly atmosphere", but wanted Sugarman to promise he would "abide by city rules". Sugarman said he had not met with D'Amico, but was promised by

Liquor Store Next To Roche Brothers Gets Board's Go-Ahead

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted unanimously Tuesday for the transfer of the retail all alcoholic package store license formerly held by Mary G. Gaquin, to Flynn Liquor, Inc. who will open at Roche Bros. Supermarket building on 101 Falls Blvd.

The liquor store will be next door to Roche Bros. and will be separated from the supermarket by a solid interior wall. The store will be accessible only through a separate entrance from the sidewalk adjacent to the main parking area and through a separate rear delivery door.

Chairman Joseph Shea said Roche Bros had requested the license three years ago, but it was defeated by a 4-1 vote and had at the time many abutters. He noted that Tuesday, there were no abutters

He added that the "great supermarket chase for liquor licenses is over" and said with the issuing of liquor licenses to Shaw's and Stop & Shop, he "supported this request" because he said he "felt bad when the other markets got it" ..

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman expressed concerns over cars parking in front of the liquor store because of designated parking for Roche Bros. and utilities, such as a sprinkler system in the liquor store. He said they would have to be defined and separated from the supermarket.

Atty. Dennis Harrington, representing Flynn said parking was arranged and that they would abide by the rules and parking spaces set by Roche Bros.

Flynn, who lives in Bridgewater, is also the owner of Stephen's Liquor Mart in Waltham and Raynham Wine & Liquor in Raynham. He will manage the Quincy store

The store, which will have 6,000 square feet of floor space will open in a couple of months.

Mary Gaquin, who sold her liquor license to Flynn, owns The Yacht Shop at 542 East Squantum St.

The City of Quincy has one other package store license, held by Dollar Savers on Quincy Shore Blvd. They are looking for another site.

Health Department Begins Water Sampling Program

Quincy Health Department has commenced its summer water sampling program.

Water samples will be collected every Monday now through Aug. 30, at 10 beaches, one to two hours before high tide. Results will be analyzed for fecal coliform counts by a certified private laboratory, and will be made available to media throughout the summer.

The MDC will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. Sample results will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Friday of each week.

Quincy will utilize a standard of 200 or greater fecal coliform colonies as an indication of potential health risk. Beaches with counts of 200 or greater will be resampled and posted with signs which read:

"Warning -- Beach Unacceptable for Swimming per order of Quincy Health Dept."

Such beaches are considered unsafe for swimming and the signs will remain in place until water samples show fecal coliform counts below 200.

If a period of rainfall occurs after water samples are taken each Monday, such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality which will be reported on Fridays. Sewerage can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains that contain overflow wastewater in combination with rainwater after 1/4 of an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day.

The health department recommends that people from refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water.

The city has been involved in a bathing water quality improvement program over the past several years. The program detects and repairs problems within sewer and storm drain pipes which adversely affect Quincy Bay. The program, administered by the Quincy Public Works Department, continues today with ongoing, routine maintenance practices such as street sweeping, drain cleaning and tide gate inspections.

'WE'RE GOING TO fight to keep the plant open," Senator Ted Kennedy told workers from the Quincy Raytheon plant at a rally Friday outside City Hall. Management has indicated it might close the plant. Among those ringed behind Kennedy from the left, are City Councillors Paul Harold and Frank McCauley, U.S. Commerce Secretary William Daley, former Councillor Michael Cheney, U.S. Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater, IBEW Local 1505 President Stanley Lichwala and Mayor James Sheets flanked by Raytheon employees Gloria McCall and Rose Marie Hayden.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM DELAHUNT told the crowd of about 250 at the rally "there is no valid reason to close the plant" and promised his support to keep it open.

Political Leaders Rally Behind Workers

Decision Awaited On Raytheon Plant's Fate

The fate of Raytheon's Quincy plant appeared still uncertain Tuesday with the jobs of an estimated 600 employees at stake.

A decision on whether to close the South Quincy electronics producing facility or keep it open was still awaited from company officials.

The workers and members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 1505 had a lot of political thump on their side at a rally Friday outside City Hall.

"We're going to fight to keep the plant open and keep these important jobs right here where they belong," Senator Edward Kennedy told a cheering crowd of about 250 workers and union members.

"The 600 jobs at this plant are vital to our national defense and vital to Quincy. We're proud of you. No one does it better than all of you and I'll continue to everything possible to save these jobs."

Congressman William Delahunt of Quincy declared: "There is no valid reason to close the plant in Quincy.

"Let us know," he urged company officials, "what you want to build, what you want to design, what you want to manufacture because we can do it here in Quincy."

He asked company officials to sit down and discuss the matter with union leaders.

Also lending their support were U.S. Commerce Secretary William Daley and U.S. Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater.

Mayor James Sheets hosted the rally with City Council President Peter Kolson and both vowed to do all they could to keep the plant open.

Other political figures attending the rally included state Senator Michael Morrissey, City Councillors Paul Harold, Frank McCauley and Patrick McDermott and former Councillor Michael Cheney.

Officials of Local 1505 which represents about 3,300 Raytheon workers in Massachusetts say they want a definite answer on whether the Quincy plant is closing. And, if so, they

Who Will Have To Go?

At least one of them is going to have to go.

Will it be Tim Cahill, Paul Harold or Frank McCauley?

Or, Peter Kolson?

You just can't cram four councillors into three council at-large seats.

Cahill, Harold and McCauley are the present occupants. And although they already had some opposition, they seemed to be sitting fairly comfortable as incumbents up for re-election.

CAHILL

HAROLD

KOLSON

Until Kolson suddenly and unexpectedly placed a thorn under the three seats.

Just about everyone who follows Quincy politics knew that Kolson would give up his Ward 1 seat to run for Harold's at-large seat if the latter challenged Jim Sheets for mayor.

But few--if anyone--thought he would run at-large if there wasn't an open seat to shoot for. Ward councillors just don't do that. Not in recent years anyway.

But he's running at-large. And with no open seat, he's taking on three hefty vote-getters. One of them a former mayor (McCauley) and the other two potential mayors.

Why?

Kolson, like Harold and Cahill, also has mayoral ambitions. The best stepping stone to the mayor's office is a council at-large seat. Although not always. Sheets stepped from the Ward 4 seat 10 years ago and Walter Hannon from Ward 5 in 1971.

The council presidency has also long been considered a springboard to the mayor's office.

In his case, this year, Kolson thinks it can take him to a council at-large seat.

He is in his fourth and last year as council president. This means it is his last opportunity to take advantage of the extra political exposure a council president gets.

As an example, he got to co-host with Sheets the Raytheon workers rally held outside City Hall last Friday.

He was up there in the spotlight with Senator Edward Kennedy, Congressman William Delahunt, U.S. Secretary of Transportation Rodney Slater and U.S. Secretary of Commerce William Daley.

Cahill, Harold and McCauley and other political figures were there but more as part of the crowd.

Kolson feels he has had a lot of exposure outside of Ward 1 as council president and as acting mayor when Sheets has been out of state on missions to Washington, attending national conferences or on vacation.

When you think it's time to make a move, you make it is the way he apparently sees it. And feels this is the time for him to make the move.

His entrance makes three Ward 1 candidates in the at-large field. Harold and McCauley are the other two.

There could be vote splitting there that could hurt one of them. If so, that would benefit Cahill.

Cahill is sure to carry the Highpoint area because of his outspoken opposition to that controversial proposed development. That conflict of interest complaint against him has made him a political martyr in the eyes of some in the Quarry St. area.

Two years ago, Harold topped the field with Cahill second and McCauley third.

Which would seem to make McCauley the one most threatened by Kolson's bid.

"Well," says McCauley, "I think we area all going to have to work our butts off."

There are four other candidates in the picture at the moment: Dave McGillicuddy, runner-up two years ago; Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, Kevin Worley and Paul Holland, Jr.

Their chances of winning a seat may be on the slim side but in a tight race they could have an effect on whether it's Cahill, Harold, McCauley or Kolson who has to leave.

FORMER COUNCILLOR Leo Kelly was tempted to come back but has decided not to run for the Ward 1 seat Peter Kolson is vacating.

KELLY

Kelly, who was elected to six terms and served two years as council president, says:

"I gave it some thought over the weekend. But, I've been there. Give someone else a chance."

Kelly certainly would have been a strong contender and the one the others would have had to beat.

His decision means that for the present there is no Houghs Neck candidate which is unusual. A candidate from that part of Ward 1--a close knit community--always is a serious contender.

Observers think there may be one yet. One name being mentioned: Russell Patten, Jr. of Babcock St., who recently took the Mass. Bar Exam.

QUINCY'S UNCLE SAM Rounseville is featured this week on a special Roche Brothers Fourth of July cake.

ROUNSEVILLE

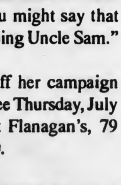
The cake normally would go for around $21. But in keeping with the spirit of the holiday, Roche Brothers has come up with a special price with a patriotic ring to it: $17.76.



Rounseville, who legally changed his name to Uncle Sam a few years ago, quipped: "You might say that this is really putting the frosting on being Uncle Sam."

CHRISTINE CEDRONE kicks off her campaign for re-election to the School Committee Thursday, July 8 at a 6 to 9 p.m. fundraiser at Pat Flanagan's, 79 Parkingway. Suggested donation $20.

BILL WEED, who was the first candidate to announce for the Ward 1 council seat in February, will take a short breather from the campaign trail July 13.

WEED

Just for the day. He has two of the hard-to-get tickets for the All-Star game that day at Fenway Park.

Weed has week-end season grandstand seats which gave him a shot at the All-Star seats. Only he had to settle for the bleachers--at $50 per.

"I've been offered $600 for each of them," he says. "But I'm not selling. I'm going to the game."

Weed says this will no doubt be the last All-Star game at Fenway because of the plans to build a new park.

"I'm going to be there for sentimental reasons," he says.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1934 postcard view of Wollaston Beach. Squantum is in the distance where you can see the old water tower. Also in the middle of the picture, a cluster of swimmers are standing on one of the outfall pipes that were favored places for diving and jumping. Based on the large number of people in the water you have to assume that if there was any pollution at the time it was not obvious. Yet the natural conditions now being blamed for Wollaston Beach's problems haven't changed much since 1934. The current pollution conditions now being blamed for Wollaston Beach's problems haven't changed much since 1934. The current pollution conditions remain a puzzle.

READERS FORUM

Thanks School Administrators For Attending Safety Forum

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing to thank the administration of the Quincy Public Schools for attending my recent school safety forum.

This conference was an opportunity for school superintendents, principals and administrators to gather together for special presentations on early intervention, conflict resolution, and legal protocols. The agenda was designed to address a broad range of prevention-related issues and concerns that had been brought to my attention over the last several months.

Although the month of June can be a particularly hectic and demanding period for school officials, top Quincy administrators made time to attend the forum. Their participation helped make the event a success, and confirmed once again the proactive commitment to school safety that I have come to know in Quincy.

A Tribute To Laura Asci

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently I was informed that Ms. Laura Asci had retired as guidance counselor at North Quincy High School, after many years of service. She assisted many, many seniors with finding scholarships and colleges for seniors to attend.

As a parent, I will always be grateful to Ms. Asci who was a noble academician. When I dealt with her on behalf of my children, she was a considerate and compassionate person. I wish her the best in her retirement and golden years. But her gift to all the seniors that she had helped over her career, shall not be forgotten by any of them.

Thanks To Tim Cahill

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

My name is William Patrick Gilcoine. I have lived on the same street in Quincy for over 50 years. I am an abutter of the Highpoint Project. My mother and brother also live on this street and feel the same as I do. We are adamantly against this project.

I think it is wonderful to have a politician stand for his constituents rather than big money. I would like to thank Tim Cahill for his courage. Many politicians would have caved in under the circumstances presented to him. I would stand in front of a judge and state the truth, that Tim Cahill is standing up for me and my family. He is doing a great job!

I have been a member for a field construction union for 26 years. My union belongs to the South Shore Building Trades, however they do not represent me on this issue. I feel this project will destroy this city.

Heartfelt Thanks From Quincy Crisis Center

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Quincy Crisis Center sends a heartfelt thank you to all those who participated in the Letter Carriers Food Drive that was held on Saturday, May 8th. The Response from all those involved was overwhelming.

Thank you in the letter carriers of Quincy for their participation in this annual food drive. As we picked up the food we sensed a genuine spirit of community and caring from the postal workers and even though they had an extra responsibility added to their day, they went the "extra mile" with a smile on their face. Thank you letter carriers; we, and those who access our food pantry, are reaping the benefits of your hard work and efforts.

Thank you citizens of Quincy for the way you responded so generously to this food drive. Your response was incredible and your generosity is going a long way in helping those who are in need. By looking at the volume of food that was donated it is evident that this city rose to the occasion and made this food drive a huge success. We thank you.

Thank you to the volunteers who helped us pick up and sort the food that day and also to those who have been coming in to help us sort and stock the donated food. You are our back bone and your partnership with us in invaluable.

Again, thank you to all who responded so generously and worked so hard for this food drive. As we pack and deliver this food we are reminded that it came because generous and caring individuals responded to the need. Thank you so much for partnering with us in our mission of advancing a culture of compassion.

Rent Control In City Ends

July 1 - 7
1954

By PAUL HAROLD

The Quincy Rent Control Board "waked" the death of rent control in the city at a dinner meeting at the Howard Johnson restaurant in Quincy Square.

Ralph Lakin, executive secretary, noted that since its inception in 1942, the board held 42 meetings and handled 3,211 cases. It was first established under federal control and later by local control.

Rent control ended with the city council failed to extend its life.

The office on the Parkingway was scheduled to close within the month with the lay off of all personnel.

BY 4-3 VOTE CJHS TEACHER FIRED

The school committee, by a vote of 4-3, fire a Central Junior High School teacher for his failure to clarify his past connection with the Communist Party.

Voting with Della Chiesa were Paul Duffy, Alice Mitchell and Ethel Wiley. Voting against the dismissal were vice chairman Wendell Clark, Dr. Joseph McDermott and Dr. Charles Djerf.

Declaration Of Independence Programs To Be Presented By National Park Service

The National Park Service will present three special Fourth of July programs on the holiday to celebrate the passage of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress July 4, 1776.

The public is invited to play a part in one of the nation's greatest dramas. In this "Independence Day" program, members of the audience will assume the roles of delegates to the Continental Congress and represent their colonies in a debate that will determine the fate of a nation.

Led by John Adams, "the Atlas of Independence," the debate becomes heated before the final vote is called. Afterward, each delegate signs his or her name to the document, rings the Liberty Bell and receives a copy of the Declaration of Independence. Afterward, slices of Liberty Cake will be served.

Performances will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., from 2 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Carriage House.

Following the evening program, a candlelight parade will begin from the Old House on Adams Street to the United First Parish Church.

At the church, there will be an official reading of the Declaration of Independence after which bells will proclaim liberty throughout the land.

All patriots will be invited to replenish themselves with cake and beverage at the Adams National Historic Park Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St.

The programs are free of charge but have a limited capacity and will be reserved on a first-come, first-served basis. Kolson Makes It Official: He's Running At-Large

City Council President Peter Kolson, who has served as Ward 1 councillor for the past 10 years, 'is a candidate for councillor-at-large..

PETER KOLSON

"I have the knowledge, a proven record of accomplishments and the leadership ability to guide the citizens of Quincy through the maze of government," Kolson said.

"Being the Ward 1 councillor for the past 10 years has given me a unique perspective on which direction the city of Quincy should be moving in the next millennium," he said, adding he wants to continue working on the many issues and programs he has been involved with as council president, such as the future of Quincy Hospital, the shipyard and the city's finances.

"When I first ran for office," Kolson continued, "I said I wanted to improve the quality of life for all the constituents that I serve in Ward 1. I will bring that same type of commitment to all the citizens of Quincy."

Quality of life issues have been a mainstay of Kolson's political career, working to replace miles of seawalls, revitalize wetlands and rezone acres for open space.

"I have had a long-standing reputation protecting our environment, and one of my first priorities as a councillor-at-large would be to establish a landbank to protect and acquire open space," he said.

Even before he entered public office, Kolson had led the Quincy Coalition to stop the placement of a toxic waste incinerator near his neighborhoods.

In Ward 1 he pushed to have abandoned properties replaced with structures the community can be proud of, pointing to the River Bay Club which became one of the South Shore's first assisted living facilities and to the former abandoned Dutton's restaurant which is now the Custom House restaurant..

Kolson worked with state and local officials to save Hurley's Boat Rental Facility so that the public would have access to the water for generation to come and was instrumental in establishing with the Federal Emergency Management Agency reduced costs for flood insurance for coastal residents.

He continues to fight for lower water and sewer rates and serves on the National Committee of Environment and Energy for the National League of Cities.

Public safety has been important to Kolson as well. He promoted community policing and brought back the K-9 and horse patrols to ensure public safety.

"I worked hard to secure $75 million in bond authorizations for rehabilitating and building new schools and for another $3.5 million bond to renovate and/or build new playgrounds and basketball courts for the entire city," he said.

And, not to forget the senior citizens, Kolson added, "I feel we need to do more for the elderly who are living on fixed incomes by way of property tax relief so they can remain in their homes as long as they wish." He said he would like to expand the senior transportation programs as well so the elderly do not feel housebound.

"The city of Quincy will be making some tough financial decisions in the next few years, and I do not want to see the neighborhoods bear the burden of those fiscal constraints," Kolson said.

"People choose to live in Quincy because of its neighborhoods. It is important that we continue to find the funding sources to make the needed infrastructure and safety improvements to protect our greatest asset — the neighborhoods," he said.

Kolson, director of facilities for the Quincy Housing Authority, is a former 18-year member of the Local 133 and three-year member of the Quincy Shipbuilders Union and a Viet Nam-era veteran.

He and his wife, Judith Butler-Kolson have been married 28 years and have five children and a grandson.

Like her husband, she is active in the community, serving on the board of directors of both the Manet Community Health Centers and the Maria Droste Counseling Center and on the Keep It In Quincy Commission.

Cheney To Head Hanley Campaign In Ward 1

Gregory Hanley, candidate for the Ward 1 City Council seat, announces that former Councillor Michael Cheney will serve as his campaign manager.

"Mike's experience and organizational skills will be a real asset in this campaign," Hanley said.

Cheney has served as both Ward 1 and councillor at-large.

Hanley's brother, Matt, will be the campaign treasurer.

Hanley also announced the precinct coordinators for his campaign:

Precinct 1, Michael and Noreen O'Connell of Chickatobot Rd.; Precinct 2, Anne Marie Hanley, his wife, Shed St.; Precinct 3, Mark and Lorie Peccee of Putnam St.; Precinct 4, Rob and Cheryl Glynn of 482 Sea St.; Precinct 5, Joseph Monahan, Madeleine St.

Hanley said he has also added more than 150 people as campaign volunteers.

"I am so fortunate to have a great committee and so many good people behind me in this election," he said.

Hanley said he has knocked on doors in over half of Ward 1 and has received a warm reception.

"I want to hear each person's opinion on how they want me to represent them," Hanley said.

He invited anyone wishing to help in the campaign to call him or his wife at 472-1005.

D'Amico To Seek Third Ward 4 Term

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico is running for a third term.

In making his announcement at the Common Market restaurant, D'Amico said his ongoing efforts have secured more private and public funding for infrastructure improvements in the city's history.

He cited Crown Colony as an example of what responsible development has meant under his watch. "In today's Ward 4, developers know that their proposals must serve the people's interest above all else.

"We've made sure that this community is served well by Crown Colony where thousands of professional jobs have been created and hundreds of new homes have been built," he said.

"And because of our plans for constructing for a connecting access ramp to the Southeast Expressway, not only will Crown Colony not impede traffic flow, the property will actually lend itself to making travel easier for the multitudes of motorists who use Centre Street every day," said D'Amico.

MICHAEL D'AMICO

Another development to which he points with pride is the Quarry Hills 27-hold golf course and recreational facility off Ricciuti Drive. "We should all be glad that a once-blighted landfill is well on its way to becoming another Quincy Jewel," he said, noting that more than half of the fill needed is in place to make the project a reality by 2002.

He said the neighborhood golf course task force he commissioned played a major role in minimizing the project's impact on the surrounding vicinity and vowed to keep street sweepers on the job "day and night if necessary" to control the dust generated from the construction site.

D'Amico also noted that three full-time police foot patrol units are now on duty because he fought for community-based policing before most anyone else and credited a 200-plus member community crime watch group for nurturing a positive relationship among neighbors and the law enforcement community.

As chairman of the city council's education committee, D'Amico said he has worked to see that the schools are being refurbished. More than $150,000 in private and public money have been earmarked to renovate everything from the gymnasium and auditorium to the cafeteria and classrooms at Sterling Middle School, he said. At Lincoln-Hancock, new landscaping and new playgrounds are slated.

"It's not enough to tell kids they need to care about their education; we need to give them reasons why they should," he said.

He concluded his remarks by observing that ordinary people in Ward 4 have been empowered to help make tough decisions affecting their quality of life and vowed he would continue to hold neighborhood meetings and answer phone calls to keep the residents informed.

Rosemary Wahlberg Announces For Ward 1 City Council Seat

Rosemary Wahlberg, who is retiring Sept. 1 as executive director of Quincy Community Action, Inc., after 26 years, is launching a new career at the age of 68.

She announced Monday that she is running for the City Council from Ward 1.

"I have 26 years experience as the manager of a large agency," said Wahlberg. "I think that gives me the experience to be of some help to the community.

"Now that I have retired and the family has grown and left home, I am ready to compete for a position I have long been interested in.

"Much of my time at QCAP was spent visiting and understanding the Quincy Council and the Great and General Court in order to insure that their performance would be providing care to the city of Quincy."

ROSEMARY WAHLBERG

The Council seat from Ward 1 is currently occupied by Peter Kolson, a 10-year veteran of the Council, who has served notice that this year he is going to run for one of the three Council-at-large seats.

She and her husband, Archie, have lived in Ward 1 for 42 years, 14 of them in Germantown, since moving to Quincy from Dorchester.

She was service director of the Germantown Center before taking over QCAP in 1973 and moving her family, which numbered seven children, to a new home at 264 Southern Artery, Merrymount.

Wahlberg, whose name is well-known throughout the city, said she chose to run as a ward councillor because she knows the people and problems of Ward 1 intimately.

"All my life in Quincy I have lived in Ward 1," she said. " I helped to start so many things in the ward and I would like to see them through. Many of them have become models for the rest of the city.

"Housing is a number one problem in the city. I have 15 years experience, 13 as chairman, on the Quincy Housing Authority.

"Any parent of a child would consider education important. With seven children, I have always been active in parent groups. Now many of my 21 grandchildren are in Quincy schools.

"Early childhood education is critical. I was a charter member of South Shore Day Care. About 50 per cent of the work of QCAP has been in early childhood education."

Wahlberg has never run for public office before, although she won a mock election for the state senate in 1948m while she was living in Dorchester.

"It only lasted one day," she said. "It was to try to get young people interested in the political process. The war was over, the men were coming home from the service and everyone had deep patriotic feelings.

"It's sad to see that many young people still are not interested."

Wahlberg said her appointment as a commissioner on the Quincy Housing Authority by Mayor Frank McCauley in 1981 had all the trappings of an election to public office.

"When I became commissioner, the tenants had an opportunity to listen to the interested parties and then vote on them," she said. "It is important that you stand before the people you serve."

The mayor, of course, was the appointing authority and Wahlberg was reappointed twice to five-year terms.

She also served on the Quincy Hospital Board of Directors but the press of work at QCAP caused her to leave after four years. She was one of the founders of the Manet Health Center in Houghs Neck.

But Wahlberg has been active in politics most of her life.

She and Archie have been members of the Ward 1 Democratic Committee since 1976 and she was a delegate to the convention of 1988 which nominated Gov. Michael Dukakis for president.

The Wahlberg family is not only enthusiastic about Rosemary's new career, but Archie will serve as her campaign manager. John Kane, former president of the Shawmut Bank of Wakefield will be finance chairman.

Paul, Marilyn DeBesse Lucky 'Blue Bin' Grand Prize Winner

Montclair Couple $1,000 Richer Thanks To Recycling

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS and City Council President Peter Kolson present the $1,000 "Blue Bin" Instant Win recycling program grand prize to Paul DeBesse of Hamilton Ave. in Montclair. At right is Sally Owen, chairperson of the Quincy Recycling Commission.

Paul and Marilyn DeBesse of Hamilton Ave. in Montclair won the $1,000 grand prize as part of the city's "Blue Bin Instant Win" recycling incentive program.

The DeBesses were among 200 eligible residents who, accompanied by family and friends, who filled the Council Chamber of City Hall last Wednesday hoping for that 1 in 200 chance of reaping $1,000 for participating in Quincy's curbside recycling program.

The eight-week Blue Bin Instant Win program, which ran from April 26 to June 18, was designed to stimulate participation by financially rewarding Quincy residents for recycling. Forty random Quincy recyclers shared $4,000 in prize money during the program's eight weeks. Five nights of the $100 winners were selected for the $1,000 grand prize drawing.

The vast majority of the residents eligible for the drawing attended, creating the need to use City Hall's second floor conference room in addition to the City Council Chamber. The conference room had a closed circuit cable television hookup sop people in that room could see Mayor James Sheets draw the name of Mr. and Mrs. DeBesse.

As he pulled the winner's name from the basket, Sheets joked, "This is where I make one friend and many enemies." Just before the drawing, the mayor spoke and reminded the audience that we should remember that America has been blessed to have the great abundance of natural resources in the world. He said that recycling is our obligation so that we can pass this natural endowment on to future generations.

Also speaking at the event was City Council President Peter Kolson, one of the original members of the Quincy Recycling Committee that designed Quincy's recycling program. Kolson told the attendees, "Recycling is one way that you, that we, can make a difference. And just remember, tonight everyone is a winner."

Public Works Commissioner David Colton told the crowd, "Quincy's program is strong today and the credit belongs to you."

"You could feel the excitement in the room," said Sally Owen, chairperson of the Quincy Recycling Committee. "We tried to make recycling exciting to people and I think we succeeded. This incentive campaign, and the people who participated, gave recycling a shot in the arm.

"We expect that it will raise recycling levels, minimize our impact on the environment, and save the city budget some money. It was a real win-win situation," she added.

The Blue Bin Instant Win Sweepstakes was sponsored by the City of Quincy and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. Prize money was donated by the following local businesses: Caryn's Corner; Law Office of Cosgrove, Eisenberg, and Kiley; CVS; East Coast Petroleum; Law Office of Graeber and Davis, Inkspot, Osco (Granite St. and North Quincy), Meredith and Grew, Quincy Sun, Roche Brothers, Roseann's, Mayor James Sheets, Star Market, Stop & Shop, and WJDA. Assistance was also provided by MassRecycle and the Recycling Initiative Campaign.

For information about Quincy's recycling program, call the Recycling Hotline at 770-BINS.

NEVER TOO LATE

It is a mistake for seniors to assume it is too late for them to adopt healthier habits in the belief that the damage has already been done. While it is certainly preferable to start healthy habits early and to sustain them for a lifetime, it is almost never too late to take steps that reverse decades of neglect and abuse. For instance, five years after people of any age stop smoking, they have nearly the same cardiovascular risk as those who have never smoked. Their cancer risk declines as well, at a somewhat slower rate. And, seniors who begin aerobic exercise can raise their cardiovascular fitness by the same 10% to 30% as younger people can.

Current medical research is always changing, which is why it helps to have medical professionals nearby that you trust to give you their evaluations and suggestions on how to best care for your health. At Marina Place, a senior living residence, we offer assistance with medication management, an individual wellness program including fitness classes, and social and cultural programs. For gracious living in scenic seaside location, visit Four Seaport Drive. Many apartments have views of the Boston skyline, harbor, and salt marshes. Phone: 617-770-3264.

Maintaining or improving your health and vitality is simple at Marina Place. A team of experienced healthcare professionals deliver personal care assistance. You can rest assured knowing someone is here for you 24 hours a day, every day of the week.

Victory Taking Over Shaw's N.Q. Supermarket

By MARILYN JACKSON

Victory Supermarkets, a family-owned food chain based in Leominster, will acquire the North Quincy Shaw's Supermarket within the next 30 days for an undisclosed sum.

Victory Supermarket president Arthur P. "Jay" DiGeronimo Jr., said he has not yet decided whether he will close the almost new supermarket on Hancock Street for renovations or keep it open and "put our personal touches on the store."

Victory is acquiring five supermarkets as part of the Federal Trade Commission's divestiture order it issued when it approved the $476 million sale of the Star Market chain to Shaw's Supermarkets' parent company, J. Stainsbury plc of London.

The only other nearby stores Victory is acquiring in the divestiture are the Star Market in Norwell and the Shaw's Supermarket in Norwood.

DiGeronimo would not disclose the purchase price. Foodmaster Supermarkets of Somerville will acquire two markets, and three have yet to be divested.

"One of the attractions [of acquiring Shaw's in North Quincy] is that it's a new 54,000-square-foot store," said DiGeronimo. He said the changes at the store would not affect the adjacent Osco store.

He said the North Quincy store would be modeled after the Kingston store, which Victory acquired when Stop and Shop purchased the Purity Supreme market chain and was required to divest several stores.

DiGeronimo said the new acquisitions should push up their annual sales volume from $275 million to $400 million, "but that pales to Shaw's acquisition which will push their volume to $4 billion."

DiGeronimo plans to introduce the same successful format used in Kingston, called Market Square at Victory, incorporating a coffee counter, a sushi bar, a sit-down area for fresh soups, salads, pizza, pasta and stir fry and placing all perishables in one aisle.

Asked about providing new jobs, he said his company "typically hires a higher percentage of full-timers than most other supermarkets." The workers are not unionized, he said.

Victory Supermarkets was founded in 1923 by two brothers, James and Louis DiGeronimo. James' sons, Arthur and James Jr., and Louis' son, Joseph, the second generation, are still actively involved in the business. Jay DiGeronimo said he was the oldest among his three brothers and three cousins, all of whom are involved associated in the business, and there is a fourth generation coming along.

Shaw's spokesman Bernard Rogan said Shaw's formally notified its employees this week that Shaw's would be sold on or about July 17 as part of the deal to acquire the Star supermarket chain.

Meanwhile, Shaw's is committed to spending $70 million in capital improvements at the various Star Markets it has acquired, including the one on Granite Street, said Rogan.

However, he could not comment further about what changes would occur.

"It's too early to discuss any plans," said Rogan. "Since last November [when Shaw's announced its acquisition plans], we could not go into the stores to survey them."

He said the Quincy Star Market had a great location and had room for expansion.

As for the Quincy Avenue Shaw's Supermarket, Rogan said that is slated for closing by the end of the summer. That store, he said, was not considered as part of the divestiture requirement because negotiations to sell the property were already under negotiations before Shaw's announced its acquisition plans.

After the divestiture, Shaw's will own 46 Shaw's, 41 Star Markets and four Wild Harvest stores, for a total of 91 supermarkets in Massachusetts. The purchase will strengthen Shaw's position as the second largest food retailer in New England, with 169 stores throughout the six New England states and more than 32,000 associates, of which 9,825 are full-time.

In Massachusetts, the number of sales associates, both full-time and part-time, total 19,002, of whom 9,002 work for Shaw's.

By comparison, Stop and Shop, the largest supermarket chain in New England, generated a total of $6.2 billion in sales.

The company has 196 stores in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York and employs about 19,000 in Massachusetts alone.

Foot Notes

Surgeon-Podiatrist

MORTON'S NEUROMA

If you suffer from a fiery pain in the ball of your foot that often travels to your toes, you could have a Morton's neuroma, a swollen nerve between the metatarsal bones. Named after the U.S. surgeon who first described it, T.G. Morton, the condition usually causes a specific, localized pain. It most often occurs between the third and fourth toes. In severe cases, the toes become numb. Pain usually subsides if you are barefoot and worsens with tight shoes. The simplest treatment involves modifying your shoes, which diminishes the irritation and swelling around the nerve. Anti-inflammatory medication or cortisone shots may also be prescribed. If these steps fail to relieve the pain, surgery may be recommended.

If you suffer from sharp pain, numbness, or a burning feeling in your feet, a nerve condition may be the cause. These can result from wearing tight shoes, being on your feet too long, or general medical conditions. Nerve conditions can be hard to detect, but here at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, we're trained to identify them, relieve any pain they cause, and correct them whenever possible. There's no need to suffer . . . we can help. For an appointment, please call 617-472-3466.

P.S. It is important to wear shoes with enough width in the area of the ball of the foot. This helps keep the bones from squeezing the neuroma.

New Parochial Vicar At St. John's Church

For Father William Mullin It's Like Coming Home

By NANCY MANGANELLO

For Fr. William Mullin being assigned a parochial vicar at St. John's Church was like coming home.

"It's almost like a minor miracle that a clam digger from Houghs Neck made it to St. John's," he laughs.

Fr. Mullin, who is 60, grew up in Houghs Neck and has been a priest for 34 years. He assumed his new duties at St. John's June 1.

He succeeds Fr. Richard Moran who left St. John's last June. Because of the shortage of priests it took a year to replace him.

Fr. Mullin is outspoken on that shortage. He strongly believes in allowing married men to be ordained to the priesthood.

"Let's go back to that original practice," he said. "Ordaining married men. It's a church law that can be changed tomorrow."

"There are parishes now that don't have masses during the weekdays because they just don't have the priest power to do it," Fr. Mullin said.

"We would have a whole new resource of priests. I am urging Cardinal Law to consider it seriously."

Fr. Mullin also believes that women should have the right to be ordained but is skeptical about that happening.

"Married priests possibly," Fr. Mullin said about that likelihood. "Female priests I don't know. We'll have to keep praying about that."

Fr. Mullin was also a strong early advocate of allowing girls to serve as acolytes which they now do.

He is excited about his new assignment at St. John's.

HOMECOMING -- Fr. William Mullin, who grew up in Houghs Neck, is happy to be back in Quincy as new parochial vicar at St. John's Church.

"It is very encouraging the way they celebrate the liturgy here," Fr. Mullin said. We have music at almost all liturgies which is good for me because I like to sing. I'm not very good at it, but I like to sing."

"They also have the reputation for being an aggressive parish here and that is encouraging."

In addition to celebrating mass, he will assist Rev. Peter Quinn with weddings and funeral masses. He is also interested in Christian service work and social action.

At his last Parish, St. Francis of Assisi in Braintree, he worked with several local churches to raise $55,000 and build a Habitat for Humanity home for a family in need.

During the 1970's, Fr. Mullin served in Roxbury at St. Mary's church and St. Francis de Sales/St. Philip's. He remembers when Roxbury began to bus children to schools to give minorities an opportunity to get a better education. Many children suffered during the desegregation, he recalled, because they were poor and because of the color of their skin.

"It was pretty scary to see all those armed policemen lined up along the streets to protect the kids," he said.

"If you really want to make a difference you got to go to the suburbs and try to get the suburban communities concerned about the poor," he said.

He served at St. Robert's Church in Andover from 1983-1987. While he was there, the church adopted a Cambodian family and welcomed them into the community.

Fr. Mullin attended the Atherton Hough school, Central Junior High and Arch Bishop Williams High School while he grew up. He attended the Most Blessed Sacrament Church in Houghs Neck with his family.

He went to Boston College for two years and then transferred to St. John's Seminary where he spent six years. He was ordained at St. Ann's Church in Quincy on Feb. 9, 1965.

His sister, Gerry, lives in Milton and works as a nurse. Fr. Mullin also has two brothers; Peter, an assistant US Attorney living in Milton and Patrick, a Colonel in the Marines in San Antonio, TX.

Fr. Mullin says Quincy has changed since he last lived here. "(There is) quite a mix of Asians, Hispanics and blacks, which is all healthy and good." But his native Houghs Neck hasn't changed much.

He said Hough's Neck was a close neighborhood and there are people still living there from back in his childhood.

"I have a lot of good memories of Houghs Neck," Fr. Mullin said.

Fr. Mullin plans to carry his good work over in Quincy for a long time.

"Jesus said to help others and we're trying to carry that out," he said.

A BLESSING OF the animals was held recently at United First Parish Church by Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister.

Realtors Support Repeal Of Formaldehyde Disclosure Law

The Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR) has expressed support for legislation that would repeal the commonwealth's Urea Formaldehyde Foam Insulation (UFFI) disclosure law.

In recent testimony before the legislature's Joint Committee on Health Care, MAR officials called the existing statute an outdated and unnecessary requirement on the state's homeowners, and urged lawmakers to eliminate mandated UFFI disclosure since the shaving cream-like insulating product has not been used in residential applications in the U.S. for nearly two decades.

Under current law, residential property owners in Massachusetts are obligated to investigate for and disclose the use of UFFI in the home to real estate agents and prospective buyers, regardless of their age, experience or familiarity with the product. The statute was enacted in 1986, at a time when public concern over UFFI was at a peak due to scientific research that showed the formaldehyde found in the product was responsible for emitting potentially harmful vapors into homes.

"The disclosure requirement seemed appropriate at the time it was passed," said MAR President James Dougherty, "but studies conducted in later years have revealed that this product no longer poses a public health threat." In fact, extensive government testing has determined that formaldehyde levels produced by UFFI typically return to ambient house levels within several days of the form insulation being applied.

"Since the sale of UFFI was banned in 1982, and few, if any homes have been found to contain dangerous levels of formaldehyde gas in many ways, we believe there is no longer a need to require a disclosure that the passing of time has for all intents and purposes cured," MAR Chief Executive Officer Robert Nash said.

While encouraging the repeal of the only UFFI disclosure law in the country, the MAR remains fully supportive of the prohibition against the sale of UFFI as an insulating material, as well as the disclosure of material defects in all property for sale, Nash added.

Cancer New Cases, Deaths Expected To Fall This Year

Fewer Americans will die of cancer this year in the U.S. than last year, according to the American Cancer Society's newly-released 1999 Cancer Facts and Figures, a publication which tracks trends in cancer diagnoses and deaths.

Approximately 563,100 deaths are expected to occur in the U.S. in 1999, down from the 1998 estimate of 564,800. In Massachusetts, 14,200 deaths are expected.

The cancer incidence rate -- the rate at which new cancer cases occur -- is also expected to decline. Nationally, an estimated 1,221,800 cases are expected to be diagnosed in 1999, compared with 1,228.600 in 1998. In Massachusetts, 30,700 cases are expected this year, compared to 31,500 in 1998.

Both drops are indicative of hopeful trends which began in the earlier part of the decade, and are attributed to the cumulative effects of factors like quitting smoking, checkups to find cancer in its earlier stages, and improved treatments, During 1990-1995, the cancer incidence rate decreased on average 0.7 percent per year and cancer death rates decreased 0.5 percent per year. The cancers which decreased in incidence were those of the lung (males only), prostate, colon/rectum, urinary bladder and leukemia. Death rates declined in female breast, prostate, colon/rectum for both men and women and lung cancers among men.

"We're encouraged by the progress we're beginning to see in the fight against cancer," said Dr. Charles McDonald, national president of the ACS. "I am optimistic that these trends will continue. Without even one more discovery in the lab, so many of this year's cancer cases and deaths can be prevented, if we simply put into practice those things we already know can save lives, like quitting smoking and making health choices each day."

While cancer affects millions every year, the survival rate is increasing steadily. The relative five-year survival rate for cancer now stands at 60 percent -- up from 58 percent last year, and 41 percent in the early 1980s.

Lung Cancer remains the number one cause of cancer death in the United States. Although mortality rates in men have been decreasing, largely due to their decreased smoking rates, those in women are still increasing. However, since the national prevalence of current cigarette smoking among high school students was 32 percent high in 1997 than in 1991, mortality rates for both sexes are expected to climb.

"Tobacco use among youth remains one of our biggest health problems," McDonald said. "Nationally, 3,000 children begin smoking each day, with as few as four cigarettes enough to addict a young child. As adults, they develop cancer and heart disease and die an average of 15 years prematurely."

After lung cancer, invasive breast cancer is the second major cause of cancer death in women, with 175,000 new cases expected. Fortunately, early detection and improved treatment have resulted in a significant decline in mortality rates, especially in younger women.

Numbers listed in Cancer Fact and Figures are estimates, based on actual data for 1979-1995. For more information, on cancer statistics call 1-800-ACS-2345.

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide community-based voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy and service.

CORNS AND CALLUSES

One of the most common conditions we see as podiatrists are corns and calluses. Corns and calluses are actually your body's way of protecting you. Because of increased pressure or friction, the body responds by producing layers of dead skin cells, therefore producing corns and calluses.

Corns tend to occur on toes and the lesions are more discrete in size, whereas calluses are more diffuse. Changing shoe gear can often give some relief from the symptoms, although they do not usually prevent the lesions from occurring.

Self care in the form of a pumice stone can be used for very mild calluses, but very often it is necessary to see a podiatrist for treatment due to the severity of the corns and calluses.

If you are experiencing symptoms from corns or calluses, see a podiatrist to find out the treatment options available to you.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Smoking Cessation Programs Tax-Deductible

The Internal Revenue Service has added another benefit to the value of programs to help people stop smoking: the cost of these programs counts as a medical expense for taxpayers who itemize deductions.

Citing reports of the Surgeon General from 1988 to 1996, the IRS noted that scientific evidence has established that nicotine is addictive and that smoking is detrimental to a smoker's health. In light of this, the IRS revoked a 1979 ruling and said that taxpayers may count the unreimbursed costs of smoking-cessation programs as deductible medical expenses, even though they have no specific ailment or disease.

Taxpayers may also deduct expenses for prescription drugs designed to alleviate nicotine withdrawal. However, the tax law does not allow a deduction for over-the-counter medications, such as non-prescription nicotine patches and gum. The law also limits the itemized deduction for unreimbursed medical expenses to the amount by which these expenses exceed 7 1/2 percent of adjusted gross income.

"Taxpayers who paid for smoking-cessation programs in recent years may get a refund by filing an amended tax return," said IRS District Director Steve Daige. :"Those who already had enough medical expenses to deduct them should amend their returns to include the smoking program costs."

Other taxpayers should check their returns to see if these added expenses would give them enough medical expenses to itemize. A person may generally file an amended return on Form 1040X until three years from the due date of the original return.

"Taxpayers who have questions on claiming medical expenses or amending their tax returns can call the IRS toll-free tax assistance phone line at 1-800-829-1040, 24 hours a day, seven days a week," added Daige.

Quincy Native Taken 32nd By Stanley Cup Champ Dallas Stars

NHL-Draft Pick Ryan Follows His Own Script

By CHRIS POISSON

When he was in sixth grade, Michael Ryan had a dream like most youngsters - he wanted to play professional hockey.

And in an essay he wrote for english class, he mapped out the route he was going to travel to reach his goal. First stop was to attend Catholic Memorial, a school known to breed hockey talent. Then he would move on to Boston University and don the scarlet and white for legendary coach Jack Parker. Finally, he would be drafted in the third round by the NHL's Detroit Redwings.

Well, it's time to see how Ryan's master plan panned out. Instead of going to CM, he played at Boston College High School. Rather than lacing it up for the Terriers, he'll be skating for Northeastern University this fall. And last Saturday at the NHL's entry draft at the FleetCenter, the 19-year-old Milton resident, and Quincy native, was selected No. 32 by the Stanley Cup champion Dallas Stars.

"He did that essay in sixth grade and I recall it because I was over talking to Jack Parker when he was being recruited and I was telling him about it," says John Ryan, a Quincy police sergeant. "He got a kick out of it.

MIKE RYAN
1999 NHL Draft Pick

"In the back of his mind I guess he had that goal. Fortunately he fulfilled it. He's on the right track."

"I don't really remember writing that. It might have been my little brother. I don't know," says Ryan, as he starts to laugh.

Although Ryan had dreams of being an NHLer, he never really thought of it as a possibility until his senior year at BC High, where he racked up 20 goals and 24 assists in 21 games. In just one year, Ryan had gone from just trying to get into a college program to becoming a top NHL prospect.

"I knew my senior year was going to be important," says Ryan. "My junior year was important in terms of college and getting a scholarship. After that worked out, I knew that going into my senior year the NHL was definitely going to be watching."

Before his final year at BC High, the Central Scouting Bureau, which rates draft eligible prospects, had Ryan as the 99th best North American skater. By season's end, he catapulted to No. 38.

"To tell you the truth, I didn't look at the ratings a lot, which I think helped me the most," says Ryan. "I didn't get caught up in where I was or where I thought I should've been. I just put that aside and kept playing."

And the center played his heart out, carrying his team with a separated shoulder through the tournament to the state Super 8 hockey final, where BC High lost, ironically, to Catholic Memorial.

Ryan didn't play well in the loss, but the NHL scouts noticed the gritty effort made by the slim 6-1, 170-pound kid.

"It was a minor shoulder separation and I didn't think it was going to hurt my chances," says Ryan. "My teammates didn't really

Morrisette Hopes Win Over Weymouth Boosts Confidence

LEGION BASEBALL

From the poor fielding, wild pitching and weak clutch hitting to a failed sprinkler system, things just don't seem to be working for Morrisette so far this season.

After four straight heartbreaking one-run losses, Morrisette (3-7) embarked on a five-game stretch and had mixed results as it picked up two wins. Its last game, a 9-7 win over second-place Weymouth at Libby Field Monday night, might be a confidence booster, however.

Chris Bregoli, in his first start of the season, pitched five innings and left with a 9-6 lead. He picked up the win when Matt McCann shut Weymouth down over the final two innings.

Adam Goodrich stroked two doubles, one which was a two-run job with the bases loaded and Billy Walker chipped in with a pair of hits to lead the attack.

"It was a great win because they had beaten us in the first game by one run," said manager Ray Cattaneo. " I think the four losses by one run kind of got us a little discouraged. It brought the kids down a little bit."

With five of the nine teams in the division making the playoffs, Cattaneo feels his team still has a legitimate shot at the postseason.

"We're striving to get into the playoffs right now," said Cattaneo. "If we can get in there, I think we can

BEGINNING TO FADE?

Contaminated brake fluid is one of the most overlooked (and preventable) causes of brake fade. It is important, therefore, to flush and replace the brake fluid, typically every two years or 30,000 miles. Why? Conventional glycol-based brake fluid absorbs water, thereby helping to prevent condensation from corroding the brake system. When the brake fluid eventually absorbs all the moisture that it can hold, problems arise. Unabsorbed moisture can begin to collect in the system to corrode braking components, or to cause seals to swell and deteriorate. In addition, the boiling point of the fluid drops below recommended levels, meaning it will boil sooner under hard braking conditions to reduce performance. Flushing the brake system helps avoid these problems.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck, including your brake system, our ASE Certified service technicians have the skills to handle it. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Count on us for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Silicone-based DOT 5 brake fluid is not compatible with either DOT 3 or DOT 4 and should never be used to top off systems that use DOT 3 or DOT 4.

Three Quincy Boys Lead Archie Jvs To 9-6 Season

Three local ballplayers have just completed a very successful season for the Archbishop Williams Junior Varsity baseball team.

Williams, which finished the season with a 9-6 record, was led by 16-year-old sophomore catcher Mark Gibbons, and a pair of 15-year-old freshmen: pitcher/first baseman Patrick Jaehnig and third baseman Patrick Duff.

Gibbons provided tremendous leadership for a young JV squad from his catching position and batted .315.

His most outstanding performance came at Austin Prep when he was 2-for-3 with the game-winning RBI while throwing out two base runners in a 7-4 Williams victory.

He is currently playing summer ball for the Quincy Legion.

Jaehnig finished the year with a 4-0 record to lead the Archies' p[itching staff. He also batted .410 and was second on the team in home runs and RBIs.

He had his best day against arch-rival Bishop Fenwick at home. He blasted two long homers and a sacrifice fly good for seven RBIs. His sixth inning grand slam erased a three run Fenwick lead and sparked Williams on the an exciting 11-10 comeback victory.

Jaehnig plays summer ball for the Sons of Italy in the Babe Ruth League.

Duff was a solid defensive third baseman/left fielder who finished the season batting .300.

He saved his best for last as he knocked in the winning run to give Archies a 5-4 win over Duxbury in the last inning of the last game. He made several excellent defensive plays at third base as well.

He is playing for Golden Print in the Babe Ruth League this summer.

Dallas Huggins had the game-winning RBI single in the seventh.

Coach Jimmy Abdou protested the hidden ball trick.

"I'm sure that there are many more things you can teach the players in a half hour other than the hidden ball trick," he said. "Time was still out, anyway. I guess the umpire didn't realize time isn't back in until the pitcher takes the rubber."

In the opening round of the playoffs, Imaginative Insurance turned in an impressive 28-5m win over SSGA with Camia striking out 10 batters for the ninth time this year.

Camia also had two hits, Adam O'Hara had four runs batted in and Dave Grogan and Mike McGuire had three hits apiece.

know about it, but I think a lot of the scouts knew about the injury. I really didn't have a choice. I only had a few games left at BC High and, in my mind, I thought I had to play."

Up until the last few years, people thought Ryan's size was going to be a problem. He was a skinny kid who hadn't yet reached six feet. There was no way he was going to survive college and the NHL, forget about it. But Ryan had a late growth spurt and he shot up to over six feet, even though he didn't put on the weight to match his frame.

"I thought the size would be his Achilles' heel and hold him back," says his father. "But he had that growth spurt and I think that's what attracted these colleges and pro scouts. It's just a matter of filling out more."

"I heard about [my size] while I was growing up," says Ryan. "But over the last year, all the teams I've talked to never really said I was too small. There's definitely room for growth. It's going to take a few years to put on the muscle."

"He has the height, the skating ability and the skills," adds his father. "I think the big factor, too, is I got to speak to a Dallas person and they really liked his character."

The Dallas organization found out what type of kid Ryan was in an interview back in April, which Ryan said lasted longer than any other ones he had, giving him a feeling they might pick him in the draft.

"I spent pretty much the whole day with them," says Ryan. "It lasted quite a few hours so they got to know me a little better than other teams off the ice."

And there's a little twist to Dallas' selection. Public relations director Larry Kelly, a Quincy native who's father, Larry Sr., and brother, Steve, are also on the Quincy police force with Ryan's father, already knew some things about the player they coveted.

When Ryan was five-years-old and just beginning to play in the Quincy Youth Hockey Association ranks, Kelly, who at the time worked at Coleman's Sporting Goods in Quincy Center, would pick out his hockey equipment. He was a friend of the family and knew about Ryan's character.

Ryan has been around hockey practically his entire life. It began in the Quincy youth leagues and other various local leagues and all-star teams, where Ryan played with the likes of 1999 draftees Tim Connolly (5th pick and first American drafted, New York Islanders) and Jeff Jillson (14th, San Jose Sharks).

And he still plays in a local league, Thursday night Top Gun in Hingham, which is comprised mostly of Division I college players mixed in with a few NHL players with local ties, such as Ted Donato and Scott LaChance.

"He was pretty well focused as a kid," says his father. "He used to watch hockey on TV and analyze it. He was always dedicated."

Right now, Ryan will stick to the second part of his sixth-grade scheme - college hockey. Come fall, Ryan will be skating for Bruce Crowder's (a former Boston Bruin) Northeastern Huskies.

"I have a lot of filling out to do," says Ryan. "So I'm going to go there right now."

But he hasn't shut the door on possibly leaving school early to join the Stars' organization

"After a few years, if I feel like I can make the jump and play at the next level, I'd sit down with my family and coach and see where I'm at," says Ryan. "If I felt comfortable and ready then I'd do it."

Ryan's recent success has been somewhat nerve-wracking for him and his family over the last few weeks up until the time his name was called early in the second round of last Saturday's draft. A year ago, no one had pictured this.

"You always hope your son, or any local kid for that matter, becomes successful," says his father. "If you asked me a year ago, I would've said just getting into college is one thing."

For Ryan, that wouldn't have been good enough. His fantasy would've been left behind in his sixth-grade english class.

Council Votes $75,000 To Preserve City Records

By MARILYN JACKSON

The city council Monday unanimously approved a $75,000 appropriation request as part of a five-year project to preserve the city's records from its earliest beginnings.

The first installment will come from fiscal year 2000 revenues.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said the New England Historic Genealogical Society has agreed to provide a $234,000 matching grant for the city to microfilm not only the vital records but the minutes of the earliest selectmen's meetings, dating back to 1625.

Shea said working with the late H. Hobart Holly, who had served as president of the Quincy Historical Society for many years, they had begun to preserve Quincy's historical records. She said he took $400 or $500 from his election book to preserve one or two books.

Shea said it was a chance encounter meeting Jim Larkin of Greenwich, Conn., who was doing genealogical research at city hall, and learned that the genealogical society provides matching grants.

Larkin, said Shea, is a Quincy native and a member of the board of directors of NEHGS, which has headquarters on Newbury Street in the Back Bay.

NEHGS representatives have spent about 50 hours already at city hall, looking over the historic gold mine. He said it would be a devastating loss if fire or another catastrophe destroyed these original records.

Shea said only the first volume of the town's earliest records is not stored in Quincy.

It is in Braintree, he said. Before Quincy separated from the town of Braintree in 1792, it was known as the North Precinct of Braintree. Quincy did not become a city until 1888.

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold, a history buff, noted that the birth certificates of two of Quincy's patriots — John Hancock and John Adams — are also housed at the Braintree town hall.

Added Mayor James Sheets: "It's critical to have this work done in order to preserve our archives for the future. These are important documents; we have such historical roots."

Sheets added he hoped at some point in the future, Braintree can do what Quincy is doing and perhaps share copies of the first volume of Quincy's history.

"Unfortunately," he added, "we have no control over the documents, even though they are important to our history."

Although Monday night's vote will allow the preservationists to begin work July 1, realistically, said Shea, they probably won't begin until Aug. 1.

He said Quincy's records of birth, marriage and deaths are also on microfilm or microfiche are stored by the commonwealth as well.

Pet Adoption Days At Animal Pound

The Quincy animal pound will hold a pet adoption day every Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m. to noon in an effort to place the numerous dogs, cats and kittens available for adoption.

The pound is located at 56 Broad St., off Southern Artery, near the Quincy police station. For more information, call Chrissie or Beverly at (617) 376-1364.

The shelter is run entirely by volunteers. Presently, it is full, with nine dogs, 14 cats and 28 kittens.

do something because we have three strong starters this year."

On June 22, Morrisette extended its losing skid to five games with a 14-9 loss to Cohasset. The game was actually suspended in the sixth inning because the sprinkler system at Cohasset High School went on and would not shut off. The game was completed the next day at Adams Field before the two teams were to square off again.

In the second game, Rob Celata led the way as Morrisette snapped its losing streak with a 7-2 victory. Celata (2-1) went the distance, allowing no runs on just two hits while punching out nine batters.

Celata, who is batting over .500, went hitless in that game for the first time all season.

"He's our top hitter," said Cattaneo. "He's a good spray hitter. He hits the outside pitch to left and the inside pitch up the middle. He's very cool and calm up there. He's done a great job pitching, too."

Goodrich went 3 for 4, Shawn Manning 2 for 4 (two triples) with three RBIs and Bregoli 2 for 2.

Morrisette fell, 7-3, to West Roxbury in its next game on June 24. Joe Flynn picked up the loss despite pitching pretty well. He pitched the whole game, yielding six hits and four earned runs. The offense just couldn't muster enough hits off the West Roxbury starter.

On June 26, Morrisette suffered a crushing defeat to Canton at Adams Field, losing 11-1. McCann got the starting nod but couldn't find his control. He walked seven, hit a batter and threw three wild pitches.

McCann didn't get much help from his defense, though. Morrisette made two errors in the first inning as Canton scored five unearned runs and never looked back.

Celata had two hits and Goodrich had a hit and RBI.

Morrisette played two games while the paper was in print (Randolph Tuesday night and Braintree Wednesday night) and will play West Roxbury tomorrow night at Adams Field.

"We have a tough week ahead of us," Cattaneo said Monday afternoon. "We play all the top teams."

CRITIC'S CORNER

NOTTING HILL: This delightful comedic romp has elements of a fairy tale. In fact, at times, I was reminded of the romance of the then Lady Diana Spencer, a child-care worker, and His Royal Highness Prince Charles.

Julia Roberts stars as Anna Scott, a superstar actress who is internationally known and celebrated. Here, art imitates life. Julia is the highest-paid star in Hollywood. Hugh Grant co-stars as William Thacker, a regular shlub who runs a bookstore in the West London neighborhood called Notting Hill. The fun begins when Anna goes into William's bookstore to buy a book. In one full swoop, both their lives are changed.

So flustered is poor William, he spills orange juice on Anna's shirt. He apologizes profusely and offers her his nearby flat as a place to freshen up. This is, of course, an inauspicious beginning to their romance. And, sure enough, it's an on-again, off-again situation (well, mostly off).

To complicate matters even more for the young lovers, the paparazzi won't leave them alone. For his part, William has some loony friends who don't help at all, particularly his crude roommate, Spike (Rhys Ifans). Things go from bad to worse when Anna's overbearing ex-boyfriend shows up. (This is an unbilled cameo for Alec Baldwin. Why he took this bit part, with no credit yet, is beyond me!)

Despite being somewhat uneven and contrived, the movie is a winner. That's because whenever the story's headed into a ditch, the two stars rescue it. Their chemistry is beyond captivating. In fact, as sacrilegious as it sounds, they almost compare to Tracy and Hepburn in their heyday.

Don't miss this one!

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A steamy romantic interlude has the capacity to change the way you view the world. Just make sure you're not seeing matters through completely rose-tinted glasses.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20) Others may be inspired by your forward-looking attitude. A practical assessment of your co-workers' skills wins everyone a place on the team.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Others may be channeling events along a course that is not in your best interest. This is a good time to be selfish about your needs.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your natural enthusiasm for life can carry you through a trying period. But add a touch of humor for a little light comic relief.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Become a part of something rather than turning it into a part of you. You have absolutely no tolerance for other people's foolishness.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Believe it or not, that little voice inside your head really does have an off switch. Try to stop worrying long enough to enjoy that which you've recently gained.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your movements are efficient, and your stride is filled with purpose. With such force and dedication behind you, success is inevitable.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An old habit may become too expensive to continue. A change in your domestic sphere bodes well for the future.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Time flies when you're having fun, but remember to stop for a rest at some point. Make sure that you're not neglecting any important responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You are cursed with the task of explaining jargon to someone who has a literal mind. Take a deep breath and try to stay calm.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The subtleties of other people's emotional states are obvious to you. Make your own statement with flowers and an apology if necessary.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be patient or you will only generate more hysteria in the midst of a complex situation. If you feel unable to move forward, why not try backing up a few steps.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: People who try to understand you on a rational level generally fail miserably. You are an intuitive, sensitive and creative creature who operates on a different realm. Many gravitate to your theatrical talent and dramatic flair, only to be put off by your temper tantrums.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Every generation in America owes a debt to the past. This is a country of freedom only because the men and women who lived in the past had the courage to fight and the will to sacrifice. They won and held the freedom we enjoy. Without their vision, their hard work and their savings, we would not have our great industries, our unmatched standard of living, our vast system of universal education and our desire for better living. Because of this debt to the past, every generation in America has an obligation to the future. It is to pass on to those who follow us the freedom and opportunities we inherited. No generation has the right to live for itself alone. No generation has the right to squander the earnings of the generation yet unborn. It is not right for the present to rob and enslave the future. Rather, if there is such a thing as a natural moral law, every generation must pay to the future the debt that it owes to the past . . .

On this most important day - the fourth of July - let us be thankful for our past, be aware of our responsibilities of today, and pledge our obligation to the future . . .

Quincy Cultural Council To Receive $47,335 In Grants

The Quincy Cultural Council will receive $47,335 in grants to fund 41 cultural programs in Quincy.

Announcement was made jointly by State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin.

The funds are distributed by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency that supports public programs and educational activities in the arts, sciences and humanities.

"The grant program helps enrich the lives of young and old alike and helps maintain Quincy's quality of life," said Morrissey. "The money will be used for a wide range, which includes cultural events, subsidies for students, literary workshops, live performances, and First Night events."

"More than $4.2 million will be distributed by local cultural councils in 1999 totaling more than 7,000 grants statewide," said Tobin.

"Approximately $2 million will be distributed to support educational activities for school children" noted Mariano.

Of this amount more than $600,000 will be distributed in the form of the PASS Program, which provides subsidies for young people to attend cultural events.

The Cultural Council is part of a grassroots network of 335 local councils that serve every city and town in the state. The Massachusetts Cultural Council Program is the largest of its kind in the United States.

"The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, which then allocates funds to each local council," said Morrissey. "The decisions about which activities to support are made at the community level, by the local cultural volunteers."

"The Quincy Cultural Council members, Arthur Keough, chairman, Kelly Cobble, Janet DiTullio, Edward Fitzgerald, Eleanor Nelson, Maryellen O'Brien, Yolanda Paglierani, Yolanda Romanelli, Kristen Williams, and Carl Winderl, make this project work by volunteering their time and energies towards this important project;" said Ayers. "The Cultural Council should be commended for their continuing interest and involvement to support the arts and cultural activities in the City."

Allied Insurance To Offer Registry Of Motor Vehicles Services At Quincy Office

Waiting in long lines at the Registry of Motor Vehicles will soon be a thing of the past for many customers of Allied American Insurance Agency, Inc., as the agency gears up to offer a magnitude of registry services in the near future.

Customers coming into the Allied American office at 382 Quincy Ave., Quincy will soon be able to acquire personal and commercial plates, register new, used or leased vehicles, transfer existing registrations and make vehicle and title inquires. Allied American is one of 10 agencies to take part in this pilot program designed to shorten lines at the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

"Instead of having our customers go to the registry, we bring the registry to our customers," says Meg Somerville, personal lines marketing manager of the Quincy office.

Allied American Insurance Agency President Hope Aldrich says the added services will become a permanent part of what Allied American offers its customers.

"It's a win-win situation," she says. "The registry benefits because they will have shorter lines, we are able to provide some very valuable services to our customers, and our customers can get a new car on the road with one visit, as well as many other services."

Somerville says the program will start when computer software allowing access to the Registry of Motor Vehicles' computer database is installed at the end of July.

Registry services provided by Allied will be available during the same hours the Quincy branch is open, from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays.

Bank Of Canton, Marshall School In Community Partnership

Present at the signing of the partnership were Bank of Canton Vice President of Operations Peter Shea and Assistant Vice President and Branch Manager Michelle Higgins, School Principal Philip Connolly, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, and Executive Director of the Quincy School-Community partnership. Arthur J. Keough.

The Quincy School-Community Partnership Program connects businesses, community service agencies, and institutions of higher education with individual Quincy schools, to form mutually beneficial relationships for participating businesses and schools. The objectives of this particular partnership include acquainting students with the banking industry and the recent technological advances that have been made in the industry, teaching students the importance and basics of money management, and providing both parents and students with a better understanding of the bank's services.

Beginning in the fall, planned activities may include bank officers visiting selected fifth grade classes, field trips to the to the Bank of Canton and the implementation of the Saving Makes "Cents" program.

The Saving Makes "Cents" program is designed to teach children the basics of money management through a well-planned curriculum. With a parent's permission, The Bank of Canton will open joint passbook accounts for all participating students. Bank representatives will collect deposits, make appropriate passbook entries, and return the passbooks to the classroom teacher for safekeeping. want to know what will happen to the 600 Quincy workers.

Last month, Daniel Burnham, chief executive of Raytheon, said the company is considering selling or closing the Quincy plant.

Union leaders say closing the plant would be against an agreement with the union that helped Raytheon receive an $8 million tax break from the state.

The union says it expected Raytheon to add more jobs to the state in exchange for its support. Instead, the union says, the company layed off 1,200 workers and closed the Waltham plant.

Raytheon contends it made no promise regarding any specific number of workers in Massachusetts. Officials say they promised to maintain the payroll at 90 percent of the 1995 level and indicate they have.

Three Harbor Express Employees Honored For Rescue At Sea

Three Harbor Express employees were recently honored by the U.S. Coast Guard for a rescue at sea.

The awards were presented during the Port of Boston's annual maritime dinner sponsored by the Propeller Club of Boston.

On Sept. 14, 1998, Capt. Andrew Geagan, in command of the Harbor Express, high speed ferry "Flying Cloud" and crew members Matthew Dillon and Kate Wall were preparing to depart the Quincy terminal of Harbor Express when they received a call from the attendant stationed at the Fore River Bridge. According to the attendant, an elderly man had just fallen from the top of the 65 foot high bridge.

Capt. Geagan maneuvered the vessel in close to the bridge pilings while Dillon and Wall spotted the man clinging to the bridge abutment in 46-degree water. Geagan maneuvered in close while Wall rigged the emergency gear and set up communications.

Dillon then climbed onto the bridge structure and down to the water level where he was able to get a hold on the man, keeping him from sinking. Within minutes, the Weymouth fire department was able to launch a small rescue boat with rescue drivers and paramedics on board who relieved Dillon. The man was transported to the beach and on to the hospital where he recovered.

For placing himself at potential risk in effecting the rescue, Dillon received the coveted U.S. Coast Guard Public Service Award. Geagan and Wall received letters of commendations for their efforts.

This is the second year in a row that Harbor Express employees have been honored by the U.S. Coast Guard. In 1997, a different crew onboard the Flying Cloud rescued passengers off of a vessel operated by another ferry company, Boston Harbor Cruises.

The Boston Harbor Cruises vessel had suffered an engine room fire and was left drifting in the pre-dawn commuter hours. In this case the Harbor Express employees maneuvered the Flying Cloud along side the burning vessel and safely evacuated all of the passengers then stood by with fire-fighting equipment until relieved by the U.S. Coast Guard. All three crew received the Public Service award.

Four New Restaurants Moving Toward Opening

There will soon be more choices on where to eat in Quincy as four new restaurants updated their progress at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

At the onset of the meeting, Chairman Joseph Shea said the board would be "breaking for the summer" and required all the restaurants to give updates before the break.

John Boyd, part owner of Louis' Cafe on Sea Street, now being called Louis' Crossing said the building is secured and most of the electricity and plumbing was completed. He said the shingles and staining were next and that "everything" is on schedule.

Boyd said he hoped for completion and opening in late August.

Shea said he had seen the new building and that it was in "keeping with the neighborhood, and very attractive."

Shea read a letter from owner of the X and O European Trattoria, 1384 Hancock St. in which Marianthi Gregoriades, owner said the renovations should be completed in July with an opening in mid-August.

Roger Wallin, building inspector said the X and O had not taken a certificate from the Historic Commission for the signage or a permit for the awnings.

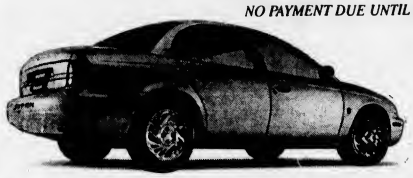
Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said the restaurant is 85 to 90 percent completed and looks "completely changed". She said the problem with the signage is that the names of the company cannot be mentioned in the sign more than three times, and there were too many X's and O's on the sign. She added "too many hugs and kisses."

Atty. Edward Fleming, representing Joseph Crugnale, owner of the Naked Fish on Adams St. barring no major delays, there were planning to open the restaurant July 26.

Shea, who said the restaurant business in the city was "going through lots of changes" said he was "excited at the complete make-over" at the former Hollow Restaurant and said when he visited the site, it was "entirely different."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman explained that when they were tearing down the walls, consstructural defects from a previous fire changed the whole scope of the renovation

Shea read a letter from Dan Flynn, owner of Walsh's Restaurant who said that because of some managerial problems, the establishment would not be open until early September.



Gorman said all other restaurants 'seem to be on track" and requested that Flynn appear at the July meeting for another update.

council would be setting a dangerous precedent by not appropriating money for the various parades and other celebrations.

"The parades are one way to get people into Quincy, to shop, to see the beauty of the city, the events in the park. It's money well spent."

Cahill, who is chairman of the finance committee, said the mayor presented a tight budget, with no positions to cut. "Basically it's the same budget [as last year's] with cost of living adjustments."

He suggested that if the cut was to prevail, the councillors could make up the difference by contributing from their own campaign funds or from their own pockets.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said he had previously voted against the cut because the celebrations focused on the city's diversity and history and embraced hundreds of volunteers.

In an effort to close out the city's books, the councillors appropriated another $605,000 for various expenses. The sums were transferred from several other departments.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy

To John Hancock, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, Quincy was home. It was that "remarkable spot" John Adams referred to when he wrote to Abigail from Europe.

Standing on Penn's Hill with her son, John Quincy, watching smoke from the Battle of Bunker Hill, Abigail Adams may have sensed that this "remarkable spot" would produce national leaders and have an impact on American History for centuries to come.

With twenty-seven miles of seashore on the East and nestled into the beautiful Blue Hills on the West, Quincy, with its peninsula communities, has the character of a town and not a city.

Visit the Adams National Historical sites, including the birthplaces of two Presidents and their summer home. Enter the beautiful United First Parish Church where the two Presidents and their wives are entombed.

Truly, John Adams was correct when he said of Quincy, "It is a most remarkable spot."

I welcome you to the City of Quincy. Enjoy its beauty and history.

Sincerely,

James A Sheets

Just The Way Abigail Wanted It

John Adams Birthplace Has Original Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna lived there.

It took on that "as it was" look after a painstaking six-year reconstruction project in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

The house is well-furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife and probably reflected her taste. They are furnished not elaborately, but sufficiently to have a lived-in look.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979 after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace reopened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table and drinking a cup of tea.

JOHN ADAMS BIRTHPLACE

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

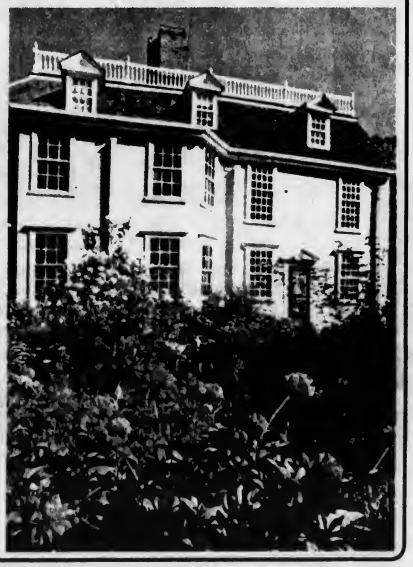
The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, the model on which the U.S. Constitution was based.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copies from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.



The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. Last full tour leaves Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

The Adams Cottages

Our Only Father - Son Presidents Born Here

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monatiquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9 1/2 acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735. (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abagail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

The junction of Franklin St., Independence Ave., and President Ave. in South Quincy is the only place in the country where the birthplaces of two presidents stand side by side in the same city.

The precise age of the two cottages at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was retorted by the Daughters of Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1861 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size In 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. The Presidential Trail

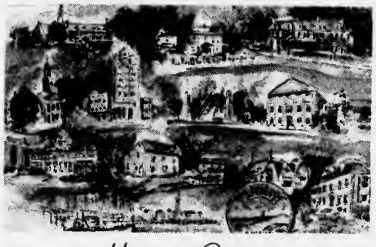
The Adams Birthplaces are an important stop on the newly designated Quincy Presidential Trail, a 10.5 mile route that takes the visitor through the 17th and 18th Century locales associated with the lives of the Adams family.



Historic sites along the trail include the Adams Mansion, Quincy Homestead, Adams Academy, First Parish Church, Adams Crypt, City Hall, Hancock Cemetery, the Adams Birthplaces, Abigail Adams Cairn, First Commercial Railroad, First Ironworks, Col. Josiah Quincy House and Moswetuset Hummock, most of which are described in this supplement.

The Quincy Presidential Trail is a National Recreation Trail, the seventh in the state of Massachusetts and the 625th in the nation.

HISTORIC QUINCY

As the City of Quincy comes to the end of this century, it is one of the most historic and significant places to live in Massachusetts and, indeed, in the United States. We look back with reverence at a century of unparalleled achievement - grateful to our forefathers - for their vision, their foresight and their success.

Our forefathers and the residents of the City of Quincy, went forward on this historical spot to change their community, their country and in some cases, even the world. From the founding of the settlement in 1625 to present day, Quincy has strived to maintain a high quality of life. Citizens are, indeed, proud of the high caliber of this municipality with a superior school system and public service on all levels being responsible to the needs of the people. It is no wonder why people love to call this vibrant City of Quincy their home. We value our rich heritage and all the magnificent natural resources that exist.

On behalf of all the members of the Quincy City Council and myself, having served the last four years as Council President, we look back with great pride and we look ahead with great enthusiasm to the next century.

THE ADAMS MANSION

'The Old House'

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tuffs of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site at 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

THE FIRST PARISH CHURCH

TOMBS OF PRESIDENTS John and John Quincy Adams and their wives in First Parish Church.

United First Parish Church, 'Church Of The Presidents'

Where 2 Presidents, Their Wives Are Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56-which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate-and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

An active Unitarian Universalist Church, it is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. mid-June through mid-September. Admission is $2; under 16 admitted free. For further information, call 617-773-0062 or the church office at 617-773-1290.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 16 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 16 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Quincy Was Almost Hancock

If some of the early settlers had their way, you would be living in the city of Hancock today instead of the city of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Colonel John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great-grandfather.

JOHN HANCOCK

John Hancock, who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but-deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741, 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888.

But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

Spring Cleaning in Quincy, circa 1920

In 1918 the Pentecostal Collegiate Institute of North Scituate, Rhode Island became EASTERN NAZARENE COLLEGE and moved to the beautiful Wollaston campus of the former Quincy Mansion School for Girls. Each spring classes were dismissed for "Campus Day" when students and faculty worked together to spring clean the parklike campus that had become home to ENC. Today the campus is graced by over 75 varieties of trees and plants, some original to the Josiah Quincy estate and some rarely found elsewhere in the U.S.

Eastern Nazarene College is a four-year, liberal arts, Christian college, offering more than 50 traditional undergraduate programs, a degree completion program for adults (LEAD), and 13 graduate programs.

Wife, Mother Of Two Presidents

Abigail Adams: A Unique Distinction

Abigail Adams has a unique place in history as the only woman to be the wife of one president and the mother of another.

And, she nearly became the grandmother of a vice president.

Her husband, John, was the second president from 1797 to 1801 and her son, John Quincy, the sixth from 1825 to 1829.

A grandson, Charles Francis Adams, ran unsuccessfully for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

Sadly, Abigail did not live to see her son become president. She died in her 74th year Oct. 28, 1818 seven years before.

Although she is traditionally remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another—an honor shared by no other woman—she was more than that.

She was a remarkable woman on her own and one ahead of her times.

ABIGAIL ADAMS

Born in neighboring Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister and Elizabeth Quincy Adams, she had no formal schooling.

But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well-known writer of letters that have served to help chronicle American history.

She was an early advocate of women's rights as attested in one of her famous letters to her husband who was often away. She wrote:

"In the new code of law which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire that you remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

And, she strongly added:

"Do not push such unlimited powers into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

She was a brave woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for the children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of the fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When Adams took office as the second president succeeding George Washington, March 4, 1797, Philadelphia was the nation's capital. John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800. It was called the President's Palace at that time.

No fancy airs about her. She won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room. She was being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer and better ones for drying wet clothing.

Adams and Thomas Jefferson were close friends and worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. But they had a falling out and became political enemies.

Jefferson ran against Adams in his bid for re-election to a second term and defeated him. Adams was so bitter he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural in 1801 and came home to Quincy.

ABIGAIL ADAMS and her son, John Quincy Adams–the future sixth President–look out over Quincy Square from beside historic First Parish Church. The handsome bronze statue depicts her at about age 32 and him as a 10-year old. It was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Little.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and thanks to her efforts the two former presidents reconciled in their later years.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

Unlike Abigail, Adams lived to see his son, John Quincy Adams, elected sixth president in 1824.

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy union despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind two men—a husband and son who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

She, her husband, her son and daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine are entombed in the crypt at United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail and John Quincy was erected last year just a few feet away.

It was created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie and commissioned by the Quincy Partnership, a group of active community business leaders.

The statue depicts Abigail at about age 32 and John Quincy at age 10 with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly touch.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Sq. is where she walked when the area was an open field.

At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock's Declaration Of Love

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later Vice President of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Thomas Crane Public Library

A Romanesque Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young man hood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy saw of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1936, that now houses the stacks and the children's section.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Saturdays during July and August.

DOMED CEILING of the United First Parish church, cut with classic Greek lines, emphasizes the size and beauty of the church. The dome and the crypt of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives combine to make the "Church of Presidents" one of the most awe inspiring sights in Quincy.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR visited historic United First Parish Church July 25, 1951 after his recall by President Harry Truman. Shown on the steps of the church with him are Mayor Thomas Burgin and Mrs. MacArthur. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine."

Adams Academy

On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

ADAMS ACADEMY, now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

By modern standards, the board ing house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time exept by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed larege enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Sts., site of the birhthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

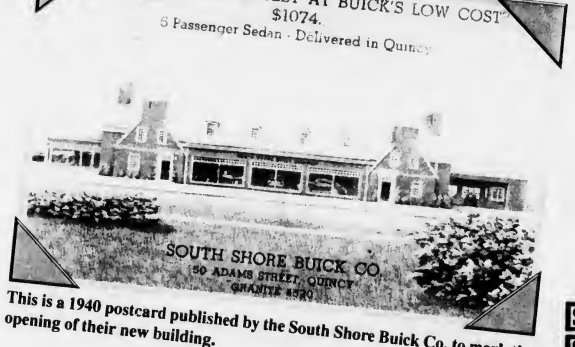
The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did and on June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.



The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For Saturday hours, call 617-773-1144. Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin St.) meets Viden Rd. atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

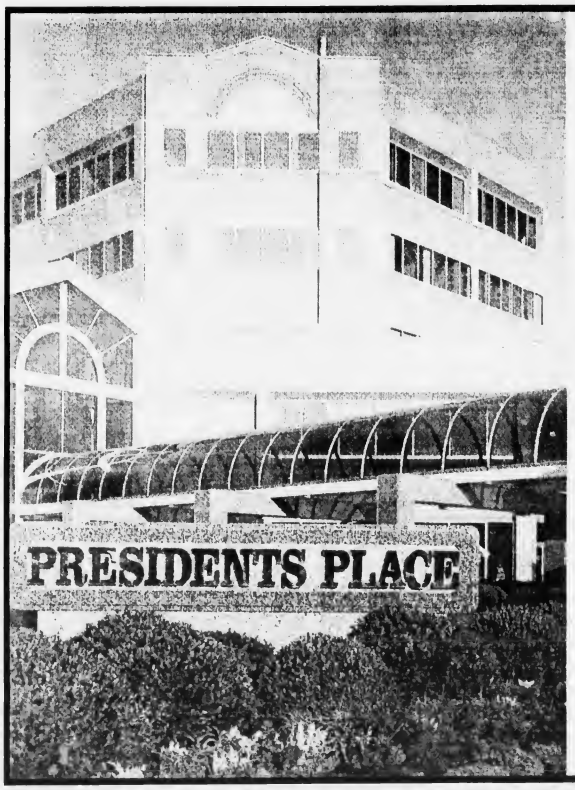
The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josephs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE



The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston is open to the public from June 5 to Oct. 15, Saturdays and Sundays 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tours are conducted on the hour and the last tour begins at 4 p.m. Visits may be made at other times by appointment. Admission is $2, children $1, and seniors $1.50; children 5 and younger free. All Quincy residents and SPNEA members are admitted free.

How Many Miles From Boston?

Stone mile markers across Hancock Street from each other indicate that the traveler is both 7 1/4 and 10 miles from Boston. And both are correct.

The 10-mile marker was placed on the Old Coast Road, one of the oldest highways in the United States still in existence, which went from Boston to Plymouth in 1639 by way of inland Milton.

The 7 1/4-mile marker was raised after the first bridge over the Neponset River was built in 1803, creating the Neponset Turnpike, which is today Hancock St. in North Quincy and Wollaston.

First Iron Works

Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called, "the Woods." It left is name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony [Did someone cry "Nepotism?"], went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a thousand pounds of capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of whom ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America. Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the iron workers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, the sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dram thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy iron ore proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured in the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England, cheap labor in an effort to make Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

The remains of the John Winthrop Jr. Blast Furnace are located in Hall Cemetery on Crescent St., West Quincy.

John Quincy Adams:

The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17th of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day .. How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation.

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom; John Tyler [the President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home .. "

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 155 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 155 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard-who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months-the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a 3 and one half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

The YMCA is a great place to go for any kid.
For some kids, it's the only great place to go.

The truth is, because of family problems or low incomes, a lot of kids can't afford the opportunities to go places and be with adults who can give them the caring attention that they need.

That's why the YMCA is so important. We give kids the positive experiences they need to grow up prepared for happy and productive lives. But we always run out of money before we run out of kids.

Support the place that supports kids and families. The YMCA

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in the law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He had arrived home only seven days before on the French frigate La Sensible after nearly 18 months in Paris helping to negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France. He was in such a rush to get home that he apparently landed the day before La Sensible reached Boston by rowing ashore from Nantasket Roads.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

"One was angry, another was full of Greif, and the third with Melancholy, so that I burnt them all," he wrote to her from Passy on Dec. 18, 1778, listing his complaints with her most recent letters. "If you write me in this style I shall leave of writing intirely, it kills me.

"Am I not wretched Enough, in this Banishment, without this? What Course shall I take to convince you that my Heart is warm? I beg you would never more write to me in such a strain for it really makes me unhappy."

"How lonely are my days?" she wrote on a Sunday evening, Dec. 27, "How solitary are my Nights? How insupportable the Idea that 3000 leigues, and the vast ocean now devide us—but devide only our persons for the Heart of my Friend is in the Bosom of his partner."

Somewhere on the vast ocean the two letters passed each other.

Paris and the dissolute court of Louis XVI held small appeal to the Puritan in John Adams, even when his closest everyday companions were Dr. Benjamin Franklin, still with an eye for the ladies at age 73, and the swashbuckling Capt. John Paul Jones, half patriot, half pirate, who had just taken command of the leaky old East Indiaman he had renamed Bon Homme Richard.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war. Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

"I cannot avoid sometimes repining that the gifts of fortune were not bestowed upon us, that I might have enjoyed the happiness of spending my days with my partner," she wrote, "but as it is, I think it my duty to attend with frugality and economy to our own private affairs; and if I cannot add to our little substance, yet see to it that it is not diminished."

She abstained from drinking black market tea, allowing herself one tiny complaint: "I should like a little green (tea), but they say there is none to be had here. I only wish it for a medicine, as a relief to a nervous pain in my head to which I am sometimes subject."

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution of the United States.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw." Quincy Adams Birthplace, Franklin St., Quincy.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

The Granite Railway

First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The old Railway incline has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Hancock Cemetery

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

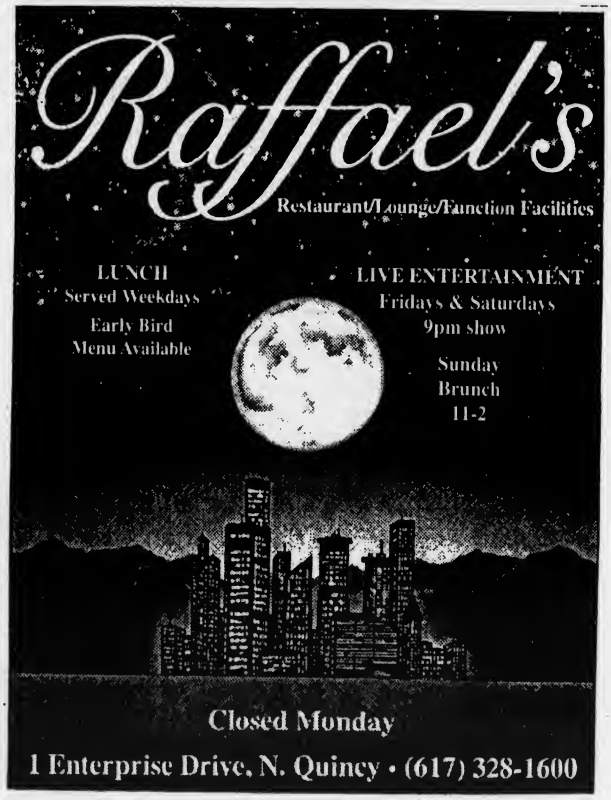
"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."



The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

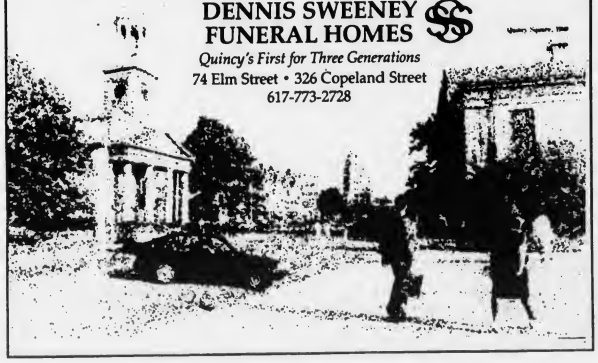
A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.



Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

USS Salem: The Newest Tourist Attraction

The USS SALEM is one of Quincy's newest tourist attractions.

Built at Quincy's renowned Fore River Shipyard, she became the Flagship of the United States Navy's Sixth Fleet during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

The SALEM is over 700 feet long and carries the heaviest automatic main battery guns in any warship of any navy's cruiser class. As the most powerful gunned warship in the fleet, she was a bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and the Caribbean Seas.

She carried a crew of over 1,600 men and traveled at a top speed of 35 knots. Today, visitors can tour the Main Deck, Number 3 Turret, a 5-inch mount, Admiral's and Captain's Bridges, and other sources of interest. Scheduled guided tours by today's crew will take guests through the Second Deck where they can see how the SALEM's crew lived and worked.

Of special note are the crew's gallery and bake shop, the barber shop, where one could get a haircut when the barber was on duty and the machine shops where the actual work is done to restore the ship. Real sailors will want to see the CIC (Combat Information Center), the nerve center of the ship where she was controlled and fought from; Engine Room 3 , where her powerful battleship class propulsion system drove her through the sea; and her berthing compartments, where Sailor and Marine lived their lives. A well-stocked Museum Shop is on board in the ship's store where Salem hats, tee shirts, souvenirs and gifts can be purchased.

Senior citizens, school groups, and Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts as well as other organizations are welcome and can reserve tour times in advance if desired. The ship is available for overnight encampments and special activities.

The main deck and other large spaces aboard the ship can be rented for parties, corporate meetings, dinner functions and other uses. An Operations Specialist can arrange for catering and other amenities to make the SALEM a great place to have a function. Tours are available daily, but large groups (20 or more) should make advance arrangements.

There will be period Motion Picture Films and the ever-present "training films" showing on board.

Spring, summer and fall are the sun times aboard the ship, and with her awnings rigged, you will be transported to some of the SALEM's many ports of call. The museum's archivist will be open for research and viewing its extensive collection of armaments, uniforms, and memorabilia.

USS SALEM

The SALEM at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is a wonderful family experience for all. Visit history-rich Quincy, home of two U.S. Presidents, the Granite Industry, and the First Commercial railroad and have a memorable time.

The U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at the Fore River Shipyard on Wharf St., Quincy. (Access is the same as Harbor Express boat). The SALEM is open Sunday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (last tour at 4 p.m.) Admission is $6 for adults, and $4 for senior citizens and children. Children ages 3 and younger are free. Flat-heeled shoes or sneakers are recommended. Parking is free.

The museum features a military archive, model shop and exhibits on the USS Salem, USS St. Paul, and Cruiser Sailor Association.

'First Ladies Of The Skies'

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Had Quincy Ties

Abigail Adams is not Quincy's only "First Lady." The city also has ties to two "first ladies" of the skies: Amelia Earhart and Harriet Quimby.

Earhart, the country's most famous aviatrix, who disappeared in the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937. Her disappearance is still an intriguing mystery more than a half-century later.

Quimby, although not as well known, actually was the first woman to earn a pilot's license. She flew here and died here in a tragic Airmeet crash.

A resident of Medford at the time, Earhart was one of five stockholders in the Dennison Airport established on a nine-acre marshland tract at Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum St., North Quincy.

The Beechwood Community Life Center is now located on part of the site across from historic Moswetuset Hummock where the Moswetuset Indians settled and from which the name Massachusetts is derived.

Earhart flew on the first official flight from Dennison Sept. 30, 1927. She took flying lessons here and flew regularly here throughout 1927 and 1928.

She demonstrated the Kinner aircraft and was a strong advocate of women in aviation.

She later bought a Fokker monoplane from Commander Richard E. Byrd—who would become the famed North Pole explorer—and flew it across the Atlantic, the first woman to accomplish that feat.

Byrd was stationed at the Squantum Naval Air Base which adjoined the Dennison Airport and today is the Marina Bay area.

Quincy's first Aeromeet held in 1910 marked the beginning of New England's aviation history. The 1910 meet coincided with the country's first air show held in California. Other Quincy meets followed in 1911 and 1912.

Harriet Quimby, the first woman to fly the English channel in 1911—the weekend the Titanic sank—came to Squantum to compete in the third Aeromeet in 1912. And met a tragic death.

HARRIET QUIMBY

AMELIA EARHART

On July 1, she took off from the Harvard Aviation Field on East Squantum Street for a 27-mile demonstration flight out to the Boston Light. As her Bleriot turned around the Light and headed back, the plane nosed down and plummeted into Dorchester Bay. As a horrified crowd watched, Quimby's passenger, William Willard, manager of the Aeromeet, and then Quimby, fell from the plane into the harbor waters. The plane nosed over on impact. And was undamaged. Both Quimby and Willard were killed.

Fifteen years later in 1927 the Dennison Airport, Quincy's first and only commercial airport was founded with two 1,800-foot strips. It had a brief life span of 14 years on marshland leased from the U.S. government by Harold T. Dennison, a Quincy architect.

The airport's stucco hangar and office building became a landmark until it closed in 1941. It is now the site of the Aviation History Info Center at the Beechwood on the Bay.

In an era when most women were not employed or career-oriented, Earhart and Quimby were quite unique.

Both were educated, employed, and self-sufficient with multiple community, career and public roles. Neither were suffragettes or active feminists, but both were gifted, courageous and tireless women—promoting and demonstrating equal rights for women. Both were published journalists and photographers. Both met timely and tragic deaths.

The historical significance of our site has prompted study, information gathering, research and collections of early aviation photos and artifacts. Quincy's Aviation History Info Center evolved from three years of community meetings and wonderful help from aviation history buffs, journalists, aviation historians, and interested community folk. Our understandings, learning, activities and events focus upon the history of our site where aviation in New England began.

Aviation History meetings are open to all and held at 7 p.m. Aug. 10 - First Aeromeet Aircraft: Wright's & Bleriot's. Sept. 15 - Squantum Air Station: The First Years. Photography Display.

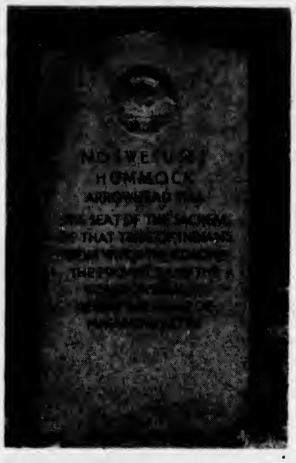
BEAUTIFUL VIEW of Boston's skyline is from Squaw Rock area of Squantum. At right is the Myles Standish Cairn erected in 1895 to commemorate his visit here Sept. 30, 1621–the first recorded visit of white men to this locality. He was guided across the baby by Tisquantum or Squanto who became the early settlers' friend and benefactor. Squantum was named after him.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'



The Indians saw it was a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrow head (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with the Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plaque.

MOSWETUSET HUMMOCK

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and we was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock is the oldest state park in Massachusetts and is on the National Registry.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Neighbors Had A Nickname

Duchess Of Windsor Once Lived Here

The Duchess of Windsor is a name in Quincy's more modern history.

She lived here in Wollaston while married to a young Navy lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum in 1917.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia had a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as an air training school.

Assigned the head of the air school at the site which later became the Squantum Naval Reserve Air Base was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield who later would become the Duchess of Windsor when King Edward VIII abdicated his throne in 1936 "for the woman I love"—a woman twice divorced.

Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937.

While here, she and Spencer lived in a second-floor apartment on Davis St. in Wollaston.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Legend has it that her Wollaston neighbors thought she was somewhat snobbish.

They nicknamed her "The Duchess" never dreaming that one day she would really be one.

The Nimitz Connection

Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz, of World War II fame, is another name with a connection to Quincy's modern history.

Nimitz, who directed the U.S. Naval operations in the Pacific after Japan's sneak attack at Pearl Harbor, was married to a Quincy girl.

Catherine Vance Freeman and Nimitz were wed April 9, 1913 at her family's home at 40 Grand View Ave., Wollaston. Her father, Richard, was a former city council president.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, who was minister of the then Wollaston Unitarian Church on Winthrop Ave., performed the ceremony.

Nimitz was 28 and Catherine 21 on the day of their wedding which he recalled years later as "the happiest day of my life."

It was the first marriage for both. They apparently met while Nimitz was in Quincy waiting for the submarine to which he was assigned to be outfitted at the Fore River Shipyard.

Nimitz's name was one of the most famous of World War II as a commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet.

Under his leadership, the Navy staged a spectacular comeback after the disaster at Pearl Harbor, winning such strategic battles as Midway, the Solomons, the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, the Marianas, Philippines, Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Nimitz was aboard the USS Missouri with General Douglas MacArthur as a signer for the United States in the Japanese surrender ceremonies Sept. 1, 1945.

Nimitz died just before his 81st birthday in February, 1966 in San Francisco after suffering a stroke.

Catherine, a daughter and a grandson were at his bedside.

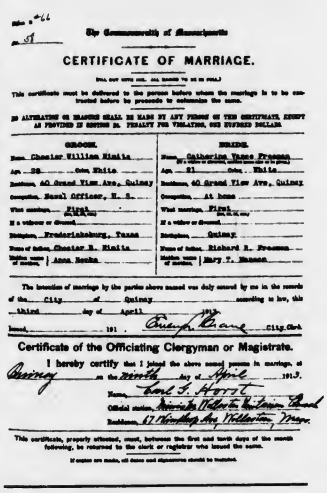
The Admiral Nimitz Museum was established in Frederisburg, Tex. where he was born.

According to the museum, there were four children. three daughters and a son. The latter followed in his father's footsteps and became an admiral.

The museum says Mrs. Nimitz died "several years after" her husband's death but the children are still living, although it doesn't say where.

Nimitz and Quincy had another connection.

Many of the great fighting ships that played a major role under Nimitz in the final victory over Japan were built here at the Fore River shipyard in his wife, Catherine's, hometown.



A total of 227 Navy ships of all sizes were built here during the war, among them battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers, destroyer escorts and LSTs.

And, among them were such famous names as Massachusetts, Lexington, Wasp, Quincy, Boston, Canberra, etc.

And not to forget that tough old battlewagon, the Nevada, commissioned here in 1916 and still going strong at the outbreak of World War II.

outbreak of World War II.

She was at Pearl Harbor, that day of infamy, Dec. 7, 1941 when the Japanese planes sneaked in. Though bombed and damaged, she was the only battle able to get underway that fateful day during the attack.

She lived to fight at Normandy and went back to the Pacific for the bloody battles of Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

She was a symbol of Quincy shipbuilding know-how.

Her career came to an end as a "guinea pig" for the Bikini atoll atom bomb tests in 1946.

But not without a final display of her Quincy-built ruggedness.

She survived two atomic bomb blasts during the tests, the 16-inch guns of the battleship Iowa and repeated attacks by Navy dive bombers.

Finally, torpedoes from the planes did her in and she went grudgingly to her rest. Gone, but like Nimitz, not forgotten.

Accent On Stations And Services

Gorman Cites Modern Needs For Fire Dept.

By MARILYN JACKSON

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman had some sobering news for the City Council last week.

Quincy needs to address the capital needs of the fire department and its ability to deliver services.

"There's no question, Engine 5 Company is one of the busiest stations in the city," said Gorman. That station, located at 182 Copeland St., handles all the calls from the Crown Colony office park, which has expanded considerably during the past decade — and is still growing.

The busiest station is the Central Fire Station, or Engine 1, at 40 Quincy Avenue, but Engine 4, the Wollaston station at 111 Beale St., is very active as well.

Altogether, there are eight stations — Engine 2 at 311 Hancock St., North Quincy; Engine 3 at 615 Washington St., Quincy Point; Engine 6, at 1082 Sea St., Houghs Neck; Engine 7 at 86 Huckins Ave., Squantum, and Engine 8 at 126 Doane St., Germantown.

"Over the next 10 years, the city will have to take a hard look at the locations [of the stations] and the buildings" themselves," said Gorman.

Many of the stations, he said, physically cannot accommodate the new fire apparatus which is being manufactured today. The stations were built before World War II of precast cement, almost like bunkers, and any modifications means "a major undertaking."

"The stations were built in the horse-and-buggy days," Gorman told the councillors. Many of the engines are 20 years old, said the chief.

City Will Cooperate

New Site Sought For Juvenile Court

By MARILYN JACKSON

The state's Division of Capital Asset Management again is seeking space to house a juvenile courthouse and related offices.

. The state wants to lease 19,400 square feet of usable space in either Quincy, Braintree or Weymouth.

Under the 1992 court reform bill, Juvenile Court was separated from the Trial Court.

Last year, after the Executive Office for Administration and Finance issued a request for proposals, the state selected the former Grant's building at 152 Parkingway, as the future site of a juvenile courthouse.

However, residents and officials alike objected to the proposal, citing the lack of parking and the proximity to senior housing as two principal reasons for not locating such a facility there.

At the time, Mayor James Sheets said the proposal did not fit into the city's plans for the downtown business district

Sheets said Tuesday he was pleased to see that the state had issued a new request for proposals. Proposals must be submitted to the Division of Capital Asset Management by 2 p.m. Aug. 18.

"Trying to locate [a juvenile courthouse] on The Parkingway was not acceptable, and we had asked a number of times during the past six or seven months that the state reopen the bid process.

"We felt that that would be the fair way to do it," he said.

Public Meeting July 15 On New QHS Site Cleanup

GEI Consultants Inc. will hold a public meeting at 7 p.m. July 15 at the Roche Brothers Supermarket community room, 101 Falls Blvd. to discuss the cleanup of land which has been designated as the site of the new comprehensive Quincy High School.

In addition to a portion of the city-owned property, land belonging to Atlantic Development Corp. Also is slated for capping the land.

GEI Consultants, a Winchester-based environmental and civil engineering firm, was hired by Bethlehem Steel Co. To determine what work needed to be done at the site.

The former C.J. Partnership property is located at the rear of 221-227 Quincy Ave. and had used during World War II by Bethlehem Steel to dump asbestos when the Fore River Shipyard was producing warships in record numbers.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton said GEI Consultants plans to recommend covering and capping the asbestos with clean material.

"That's the appropriate way to deal with this contamination," said Colton. He said asbestos does not decompose. It becomes a problem when it becomes air-borne, he said, adding that to his knowledge there have been no complaints of air-borne asbestos.

Last May, the site was designated as a "public involvement plan site, after a petition from nearly two dozen residents asked to participate in the decisions regarding the remedial action for the site.

Copies of the proposed remedial action will be distributed at the meeting. For further information about the meeting, residents may write to Anne Leifer, assistant project manager at GEI Consultants, 1021 Main St., Winchester 01890 or call her at (781) 721-4000.

Zoning Appeals Board Seeks Dept. Heads' Highpoint Comments

STOP & SHOP Companies CEO Bill Grize gives a "thumbs up" for the Jimmy Fund as he is about to get a dunking at a recent fundraising barbecue on Quincy Center Plaza in front of Stop & Shop Companies headquarters.

The Zoning Board of Appeals has asked all city department heads to submit comments on the new Highpoint apartment complex proposal by Aug. 1.

Developer Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, filed a new housing plan for his 75-acre Quarry Street site for 1,641 apartments and seeking a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board. Under this plan, 25 percent of the apartments would have to be set aside for affordable housing. If Stratouly were granted permission to construct all the units as proposed, that would mean dedicating up to 410 apartments for affordable housing.

Much of the material requested of the department of public works, the planning department and the health department is data presented previously to the city council, which sat as the special permit granting authority when it reviewed Congress Group Ventures' first proposals.

After several hearings and discussions, the council voted 7 to 1 to deny Congress Group Ventures' application.

The developer has appealed the decision.

Meanwhile, Stratouly has lined up financing for the project but first must secure numerous permits and approvals.

Thirteen years ago the site had been approved for an affordable housing development under a comprehensive permit but the project did not go forward. During the 1970s, another developer had obtained permits to build a 2,500-unit complex.

During the past year, residents objected to the density and the size of the proposed development.

The new design calls for constructing 15 eight-story buildings which would contain the mixed-income apartments and preserving more than 50 acres, about two-thirds of the site, as open space.

Recreation facilities would include a swimming pool, tennis courts, exercise rooms and a meeting space for the residents.

The new Highpoint application calls for constructing 20 percent of the development as three-bedroom units, 40 percent as two-bedroom units and 40 percent as one-bedroom units.

D'Amico Schedules Neighborhood Forums

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico has scheduled two neighborhood forums in the coming weeks to provide residents with an update of ongoing issues.

At 6:30 p.m. July 15, at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., Public Works Commissioner David Colton and a representative from Quarry Hills Development will discuss the West Quincy golf course. A timetable as well as mitigation efforts to minimize the impact of the project will be detailed. And, a model of the 27-hole course will be on display.

In addition, Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, Police Chief Thomas Frane and members of the Safe Quarries Advisory Committee will attend this meeting to provide a status report on the quarries.

D'Amico said the committee was formed last year as a way to encourage concerned parents of teenagers to become involved in preventive efforts to avoid tragedy.

On July 21 at 6:30 p.m. at the community center, the Ward 4 crime watch cookout will be held. D'Amico has invited Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon to discuss a master plan for South Quincy traffic. Also, some of the city's community officers who serve in South Quincy and West Quincy will be on hand to demonstrate law enforcement's latest technology in use today.

A live band will entertain during the evening.

D'Amico reminded residents of two summertime concerts as well.

Dave Burbank and the Emanons will perform at 6:30 p.m. July 27 at the Granite Workers Memorial at Shea Park. Rain date is July 28.

And, the fourth annual Arts in the Parks musical extravaganza, featuring a swing band, will be held at 6:30 p.m. July 29 at O'Rourke Park.

SMELLING A RAT?

Recently, the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence surveyed over 16,000 automotive technicians about their experiences. One of the more curious tidbits of information to emerge from the survey was that snakes, rodents, and other animals are responsible for more car problems than the average person would ever imagine. Whether rodents nesting under the hood were responsible for mysterious electrical malfunctions or mice hoarding food inside tail pipes prevented vehicles from running, animals were found to be at work on vulnerable automotive systems. One of the most common problems involves shorted wiring due to nibbling of wire casings. With this in mind, car owners may want to garage their cars rather than leave them parked outside.

For most of your car's maintenance needs, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. 'Drug Court' Planned At Quincy Court

The U.S. Justice Department has awarded a $17,400 planning grant to Quincy District Court to establish a special "drug court" for less serious drug crimes.

Judge Charles Black, the presiding justice at Quincy District Court, and Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating jointly applied for the grant.

The new program could begin by late next year or in early 2001. The state's share of the cost will be a percentage of Judge Black's time that he will spend to help develop the program. The grant will cover any travel, training and/or administration costs.

"National studies have shown that special 'drug court' sessions can dramatically cut the recidivism rate for low-level drug crimes," said Keating.

"Some courts have seen three-year recidivism rates down from 40 to 45 percent down to 28 percent and even as low as 5 percent in some jurisdictions," he said.

Judge Black said he was "thrilled for this new opportunity to address the issue of substance abuse, which is so prevalent among the defendants who appear in Quincy District Court."

In 1996, the court handled 1,071 cases involving controlled substances, and in 1997, the most recent year for which statistics were available, that number increased to 1,332.

In addition to being more effective in preventing repeat offenses, the intense intervention that comes with the drug court program is also more cost effective.

"The cost of the increased treatment, supervision and support given defendants through drug court programs is actually more than offset by the savings realized by not putting them in jail," Keating continued.

The U.S. Justice Department last year released a report estimating a net savings of $5,000 per defendant who goes through the drug court program rather than serving a jail sentence for his or her crime.

The drug court will convene weekly in the Quincy District Court building on chestnut Street. Specially trained prosecutors, along with the presiding justice and Chief Probation Officer Michael Walsh will use the drug court to place drug addicts accused on nonviolent crimes into long-term treatment and recidivism prevention programs designed to break their addiction.

"Drug courts use the threat of incarceration as leverage to disrupt the cycle of addiction, said the district attorney, adding that "addiction is an illness that proper treatment can arrest [but] incarceration alone only delays."

Berry St. Now Residence B Zone

The City Council last week approved a zoning change in Ward 2 which turned both sides of Berry Street, off Quincy Avenue, from a Business B zone to a Residence B zone.

Two lots on the northeasterly side of Quincy Avenue, were excluded from the original rezoning proposal and remain in the business district.

City councillors Timothy Cahill and Stephen Durkin recused themselves from voting on the matter.

In early May, attorney Lawrence DiNardo told the councillors he supported rezoning the property along Berry Street but opposed changing 48-50 Quincy Ave. to Residence B because the rest of Quincy Avenue, from Elm Street to Scannell Street, already consists of businesses.

In addition, his client had executed a purchase-and-sale agreement to sell the property to Anthony Falco, a Quincy attorney, who wants to move his office with five lawyers to the new site.

Falco still needs a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals .

Another location suggested at the time was a building on Broad Street, opposite the George F. Bryan VFW Post, said the mayor.

"There may be other sites in Quincy as well," he said.

"We're not obstructionist," continued Sheets.

"Quincy will work to find an appropriate location. The juvenile court has to be in the right location for everyone," Sheets said.

Quincy Will Still Be No. 1

No reason for Quincy to be concerned over its unique place in history if Texas Gov. George W. Bush is elected president.

Bush, of course, would create a tie in the father-son presidential honors department.

It would mean two sets of father-son presidents: our own John Adams and John Quincy Adams. And, George W.H. Bush and George W. Bush.

JOHN ADAMS

JOHN QUINCY

GEORGE W. BUSH

But Quincy would still hold onto the unmatched honor of being the birthplace not only of two presidents, but father-son presidents. GEORGE W.H. BUSH

Former President Bush was born in neighboring Milton June 12, 1924. George W. was born in New Haven, Conn. July 6, 1946.

John Adams (Oct. 19, 1735) and John Quincy Adams (July 11, 1767) were not only born here in Quincy in side-by-side cottages but grew up here and lived here all their lives except for the times they were off serving their country in Washington, D.C. and overseas.

And, of course, they are now forever here, entombed with their wives side-by-side in the crypt in United First Parish Church in Quincy Sq.

Former President Bush was born in a 15-room Victorian house at 173 Adams St., Milton, just down the street a way from the Adams Mansion on Adams St., Quincy, which served as a summer White House for the two presidents and where four generations of that illustrious family lived.

Bush lived in Milton only six months and has paid little attention to his birthplace.

But, he was on hand Aug. 12, 1997 when Milton dedicated a plaque on a granite stone to mark the house as his birthplace.

During the brief visit, he toured the home with present owners Dean and Nina Graves and peeked into the second floor room where he was born.

He later candidly acknowledged to the estimated 1,000 attending the dedication that he had no memories about living there.

But, he noted with pride and a smile:

"I was potty trained in six months, however, right here in this house. It's a remarkable historical fact that will live on forever."

Unlike the Adams roots which are still deep in Quincy, the Bush roots were transplanted to Connecticut and then to Texas where the former president became a millionaire oilman and rose to political stardom.

And, from where, George W. hopes to follow his father's footsteps to the White House.

George W., the present Republican frontrunner, may be elected president in 2,000. Or, later.

But Quincy will still have the distinction of being the only birthplace of a father and son who became president of the United States.

And, that honor could stand through the next millennium. And the one after that.

And, just maybe forever.

YOU MIGHT SAY the safest place for an incumbent ward councillor is Ward 1.

McCAULEY

At least it has been for close to 79 years.

Frank McCauley, former mayor and present councillor-at-large, passes along that little election tidbit.

McCauley is writing "A Political History of Quincy" to be published as part of the city's millennium.

He notes that the present Plan A form of city government with ward councillors went into effect in 1920.

And, his research shows that since then, no Ward 1 incumbent councillor has ever been defeated for re-election.

"And," McCauley says, "Ward 1 is the only ward with that distinction."

Four of those Ward 1 councillors became mayor: Perley Barbour, Tom Burgin, David McIntosh and McCauley.

William Jenness and Charles Shea went on to become state representatives.

Other well known Ward 1 councillors include: David Crowley, Leo Kelly (re-elected five times), Edward Graham, Michael Cheney and present incumbent Peter Kolson.

Kolson was re-elected four times but this year won't be charged with trying to keep the incumbent win streak intact. He's running for a council at-large seat instead.

Question: will the next Ward 1 incumbent keep it going?

Don't Cancel The Parade, Change Memorial Day Back To May 30

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

To answer Leonard F. Morris, No Way!!!

As parade chairman for both Memorial Day and Veteran's Day, I am discouraged and disappointed with the number who line the parade route, but I am thankful for those who do take the time to line the parade route and join with us at Mt. Wollaston Cemetery for our service.

Back in 1868 General Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic designated May 30 as a day to decorate graves of departed comrades of the Civil War, but was later expanded to honor those who gave their lives in all wars. Canceling Memorial Day is to forget the sacrifices made by veterans.

Why should Veteran's Day be the only day to have a parade, if people will not come out to watch a parade in warm weather, they will not come out in cold.

What needs to be done is to change Memorial Day back to May 30 and not as a three day weekend, the unofficial start to summer.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1909 postcard view of the then brand new nicely landscaped Coddington School on Coddington Street in Quincy Street. Renamed Coddington Hall, it is now one of the main campus components of Quincy College. Unfortunately, though, some years ago the landscaped area in the foreground was converted into an unsightly parking lot. But that could soon change. Lincoln Properties the new developers of the old courthouse lot next door have proposed extensive landscaping along Coddington Street. The latest plans would eliminate the parking lot and bring back a more campus-like setting like this.

Rep. Avery Gilkerson urged City Manager William Deegan to file suit against Boston as a way to end pollution in the bay.

"We have a new administration in Boston now (Mayor Hynes) and I think we should go forward on this plan which I advocated for several years," he said.

Deegan said he would confer with city solicitor Arthur Burgess on the lawsuit as a way to abate pollution.

Honoring The Papile Family

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In the Feb. 4, 1999 edition of The Quincy Sun, there was an outstanding article in the Sunbeams column by Henry Bosworth.

Julie Papile McCormack, Jim Papile's daughter, had spoken with him regarding the Raffael and Lucia Papile family.

I am in full agreement with the recommendation that at the World War II memorial dedication there be extra well deserved recognition for the bravery, honor, and patriotism of veterans Mike, Bill, Al, Leo, Jim, Ralph and George Papile for their dedicated military service during World War II.

Tribute should also be given to Alphonse, Mary, Sadie, Ned, Johnny, Millie, Helen, and Gloria Papile who served in different capacities on the home front.

Several members of the World War II Memorial committee have agreed that such recognition will be in place at the time of the memorial dedication.

If I were to suggest role model parents along with my own mother and father it would definitely be Raffael and Lucia Papile. They were loving, caring, understanding, considerate parents.

Mr. Papile was a hard working provider at a time when it was very difficult to care for your family during the depression and recession years. He was a kind, gentle, man who loved his family and always helped people in need. A "real family man".

Mrs. Papile was a saintly woman who had a tremendous amount of faith. She had love for her family and anyone she touched. They were ideal parents that should have been revered by all parents.

In addition to the World War II memorial dedication I would like to see the entire family recognized for their achievements, contributions and dedication to the neighborhood, community, city, state and country.

I would suggest first - changing the name of Harkins St. to "Papile Lane".

Second, a placque be placed in the auditorium of the Point-Webster Middle School where many of the Papile family performed, served and participated in different functions. Third, a placque be placed in the school playground where many hours were spent by the Papile family. I believe these are suggestions that can be achieved without a problem.

I can certainly attest to the achievements, accomplishments, patriotism, dedication by the Raffael and Lucia Papile family because I was their neighbor and have been a very close friend all of my life. I played, prayed, cried, and laughed with them through good times and sad times.

The Pettinelli and Papile families have been and still are very friendly.

I know of no other family more deserving of such tributes and recognition for their contributions to society than the Raffael & Lucia Papile family.

I deem it a privilege and honor to have been affiliated with and a part of the Papile family's lives.

Suggests JFK Health Center As Site For New Fire Station

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At the City Council meeting of June 28, 1999, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman spoke of the need of a new Fire Station in the very near future. He said that most of the fire stations were built at a time when fire trucks were much smaller with much less equipment. Now, as we rapidly approach the year 2000, we must think of the future needs of our Fire Department.

I am recommending that the city-owned property at 1120 Hancock Street which is the John F. Kennedy Health Center which was declared as "available for disposition" on Dec. 21, 1998 be set aside as a site for a new Fire Station. I am recommending that Plot 35-Plan 1126-1120 Hancock Street, 24,535 sq. ft. be taken off the market and the proposed sale to Global NAPS, a telecommunication company, for $550,000 be withdrawn on August 2, 1999 City Council meeting, and this site be made available for a new Fire Station to be built in the near future.

This site at 1120 Hancock Street, is easily accessible to the downtown and existing 10-story business and apartment buildings where large ladder trucks are needed. The street width is wide enough to accommodate fire trucks in and out of a station. As you know, available land is scarce in Quincy, especially in the downtown area, and the purchase price of a comparable space would be a far greater cost to the taxpayers, that the $550,000 bid from Global NAPS, for the sale of this valuable piece of city-owned property.

John, Abigail Adams Personal Items On Display At Historical Society

The Quincy Historical Society is presenting a special display of items from its collection believed to have belonged to John and Abigail Adams, John Hancock, and others from the generation of the American Revolution.

In nearly all instances these are articles of clothing and other personal items. Many are artifacts that were collected in the earliest years of the Historical Society's existence. Some arrived via routes that provide a direct connection to their famous owners; others passed through intervening families.

Each item evokes a sense of the personalities and life in the formative years of our country, and each tells something of the lore that grew up in Quincy over generations about the community's illustrious figures.

Some items have not been on public display in Quincy for a considerable time. Among these are the waistcoat John Adams is said to have worn at his wedding and a set of stays that reportedly belonged to Abigail Adams.

The display is on exhibit through Aug. 13.

2 New Candidates

Wahlberg Withdraws From Ward 1 Council Race

Rosemary Wahlberg, who was seen as one of the strongest candidates, has decided to withdraw from the Ward 1 City Council race.

Wahlberg, who is retiring Sept. 1 as executive director of Quincy Community Action, Inc., had announced her candidacy last week.

She said Tuesday, however, she was withdrawing for personal reasons.

"There are some personal matters facing me that need attention," she said. "And I realize now that these matters will take up enough time and energy to prevent me from running the kind of campaign that people in Ward 1 deserve.

"I've made this decision now so as not to impose too much on the kind people who have expressed support for my campaign."

She said she expects the issues to resolve themselves shortly and to give her time to volunteer to assist Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. when she retires.

ROSEMARY WAHLBERG

Wahlberg had been considered a strong contender for the Ward 1 seat Council President Peter Kolson is vacating to run for council at-large.

But as she stepped out, new candidates stepped into the picture.

Russell Patten, 25, of Babcock St., Houghs Neck, took out nomination papers Tuesday and said he will make his official announcement shortly.

William Ryan, 46, of Mallard Run, Adams Shore, took out nomination papers last week.

They will be joining earlier candidates, Gretchen Grant of Bicknell St., Germantown, Gregory Hanley of Shed St., Germantown and William Weed of Curlew Rd., Adams Shore.

Summer Reading Program At Marshall School

The program is open to all Marshall School students and families.

Sean Donovan To Enroll At U.S. Military Academy

Quincy's Sean Donovan will enroll at the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, N.Y., this fall, announces Cong. William Delahunt.

Delahunt noted more than 30 percent of the 12th Congressional District's nominees will be entering service academies. The national average is about 10 percent.

"These young men and women have been chosen from a large and diverse group of applicants to attend the country's finest institutions of higher learning. Their families, friends and teachers -- as well as their Congressman -- can be very proud," Delahunt said.

Donovan is one of 11 recent high school graduates in the 10th Congressional District who will enroll in the U.S. Military, Naval, Air Force and Merchant Marine Academies.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus and Joan F. Wright
Director of Marketing Director of Community Relations

BODY AND SOLES

As recent research indicates, seniors who regularly engage in moderate exercise are doing themselves a big favor in terms of both physical and mental benefit. However, older people who want to get the proper footwear for such exercise as walking and jogging may want to steer clear of the athletic shoes that have become the footwear of choice for most Americans. These shoes may not be the best option for older people who are concerned about falls. According to a study in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society in which shoes of different sole thicknesses and softness were compared, older men had better balance and awareness of foot position when they wore shoes with hard, thin soles.

Taking walks is just one of life's great pleasures, no matter how old or young you are. When we walk slowly, we discover so much to enjoy that we miss when we rush by in our daily activities. At Marina Place (617-770-3264), a senior living residence, there's so much to do from strolling the beautiful boardwalks, to enjoying the President's Library, Shipyard Pub, and local shops and restaurants. We offer community living at its best. To inquire about our services or for a look around, stop in at Four Seaport Drive.

Marina Place invites you to come in and visit weekdays or weekends. See for yourself what gracious living here offers. Our competitive rates ensure a Marina Bay location, but not a Marina Bay price.

P.S. In the study of shoe wear mentioned above, it was found that walking shoes with hard-rubber or leather soles appeared to provide the greatest stability to elderly men.

Health Center Offer Before Council Aug. 2

By MARILYN JACKSON

The finance committee of the City Council will discuss at its next meeting, scheduled Aug. 2, an offer to buy the vacant John F. Kennedy Health Center.

Last week, a city council agenda item only mentioned that Global NAPS had offered to purchase city-owned property.

"This is the first time I have heard about this," said Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin. "I have several questions about this public building regarding appraisals and whether there were any other offers to purchase."

Frank Gangi, president of Global NAPS, was one of two bidders for the property, said Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

Global Naps had bid $429,229. The other bidder, the AFL-CIO, had bid $425,000.

"Under law, we can only negotiate with the highest bidder," said Colton, "and we got them up to $550,000."

He said the building was appraised at $485,000.

It was last December when the city council unanimously voted to put the vacant property on the market.

It is a two-story, 18,914-square-foot building on a 25,346-square-foot lot, assessed at $1,083,600.

The building was built in the 1940s and renovated during the 1950s, according Colton.

At the time he estimated it would cost $1.5 million to upgrade the building which needs new wiring, a new heating system and a ramp and an elevator to make it handicapped accessible.

"We've been working on this for more than a year," said Gangi, who presently has its headquarters at 10 Merrymount Road.

"We plan to invest more than $1 million," he said. Already, he has reached an agreement with Quincy contractor Louis Pasqualucci and Son Inc. To totally rehab the building.

"He will begin as soon as I give the check to city hall," said Gangi.

Global NAPS is a privately held telephone company which competes with Bell Atlantic.

He said the "new" building would become Global NAPS' world headquarters. In addition to Quincy, he has switching sites in New York City, Reston, Va., and Miami, Fla. He said presently the company serves customers in the United States and Canada.

Last December Mayor James Sheets said the city had considered upgrading the building at a cost of between $800,000 and $900,000; however, the actual bids were nearly double.

Arline Goodman, a candidate for Ward 5 city councillor, said last week she wanted the proposed sale to be discussed at a public hearing and submitted a letter to that effect to the councillors.

"Selling this prime piece of city-owned real estate to Global NAPS for $550,000 is a serious mistake and does not serve the best interests of the citizens of Quincy," she wrote.

Wollaston Manor Residents To Meet Friday On Affordable Housing Issue

By MARILYN JACKSON

Wollaston Manor residents will meet at 1 p.m. Friday in the community room to organize themselves in an effort to preserve their apartment complex as affordable housing.

In early May the residents first learned of the implications of living in a subsidized high rise: The landlord can prepay the mortgage and turn affordable apartments into market-rate housing, which could easily double the rents now in effect.

Staff from the Mass Alliance of HUD Tenants have been working with the residents in an effort to obtain assurances from the property owner, AIMCO (Apartment Investment and Management Company) of Denver that rents would remain affordable.

According to Virginia Kelly of the alliance, before the high rise was built in 1972, the Zoning Board of Appeals specified that a variance to construct the 12-story building with 164 apartments at 91 Clay St. at 91 Clay St. would be granted on the condition that 25 percent of the units would be allocated to as affordable housing for the elderly.

Mayor James Sheets has asked City Solicitor Stephen McGrath to research whether the requirement imposed by the appeals board remains in perpetuity or whether even the 25 percent allocation dissolves when the mortgage with the Mass. Housing Finance Agency is paid in full.

Last week, more than 80 residents signed a letter to Mary Ellen Mederios of AIMCO in Taunton, asking for an appointment to discuss keeping Wollaston Manor affordable.

"We would be most grateful if you would set up an appointment to sit down and discuss this matter with us, as time is everything at our age, and we do not want to lose our homes as many adjustments would have to be made, especially for those losing their eyesight and the physically handicapped...

"One of our issues is if AIMCO wants to sell the building, we would like AIMCO to sell at a price which, when combined with tax credits and other subsidies, will keep Wollaston Manor affordable to current and future residents," they wrote.

A week earlier, residents sent individual letters to Gov. Paul Cellucci, asking him to sign the so-called Enabling Act (H1548 and S567)) which would allow any Massachusetts community to regulate rents and subsidies in HUD-assisted buildings if the federal government deregulates them.

If an owner of a HUD-financed building decides to pre-pay the mortgage and raise rents or if he decides to cancel the project-based Section 8 contract, the Enabling Act would allow the city to hold a referendum to protect the affordability of residents' homes.

The mortgages are typically for 40 years, but the property owners are allowed to pre-pay the mortgage after 20 years. At Wollaston Manor, the owner has been eligible for mortgage prepayment since 1995.

"The residents don't want AIMCO to sell to the highest bidder who would make it condos," said Kelly. Residents who already live at Wollaston Manor would be allowed to stay, but once the resident moves or passes away, then that unit would go to market rate, she said.

"Wollaston Manor is a great location," she continued, "especially with the nearby Wollaston MBTA station, the CVS and the shopping district."

At Friday's meeting, several officials are expected to attend, including U.S. Rep. William Delahunt or his representative, Rep. Bruce Ayers, a Ward 6 councillor, along with Councillors Stephen Durkin and Patrick McDermott, Jane Reikard, executive secretary of the city's Rent Grievance Board, and Aleisa Gardner of Quincy Community Action Programs Inc.

"This is expiring use [clause] leaves people dangling," said Reikard. "The residents want some protection."

Under government regulations, HUD-financed landlords must notify residents a year in advance if they plan to pre-pay their mortgages. As a result, tenants are receiving annual letters that their apartments could be prepaid.

Reikard said she is concerned that HUD no longer wants to allocate funding for housing. "HUD is trying to get out of the housing business," she said.

Even if properties are no longer site-specific for Section 8 housing, giving tenants Section 8 vouchers is a short-term solution, Reikard continued. With soaring real estate costs, the Section 8 allowance will not cover two-thirds of the rent in market-rate housing.

When Reikard said she believed there is less than a 1 percent vacancy rate for rental housing in Quincy, Joe Daly of Apartment Connections countered that the vacancy rate was zero.

In the past, said Reikard, there were between 50 and 75 vacancies at this time of year. "I never thought I would see $1,000-a-month rents when I took this job 23 years ago," she said.

CUB SCOUTS James Holcomb, Daniel Richards and John Rowland of Pack 11, St. Chrysostom's Church, recently planted flowers at a memorial marker at the Parker School honoring Bernie McDougall, a North Quincy native killed in the Korean War.

Fr. Bill's Food Fest At The Summer House Aug. 18

Father Bill's Place an nual Food Fest and Auction will be held Wednesday, Aug. 18 from 6 to 10 p.m. at The Summer House, located at Marina Bay.

Honorary chairman is sports broadcaster Sean McDonough, three time New England Emmy award winner and the television voice of the Boston Red Sox.

Last year, Fr. Bill's Place Food Fest was moved from Presidents Place in Quincy Center to The Summer House at Marina Bay to accommodate the larger crowd. This year the event is expanding again into the adjacent Raw Tent which offer panoramic views of Marina Bay and the harbor.

"We simply ran out of room after the second year," said Fr. Bill McCarthy, founder of Quincy homeless shelter that bears his name. "The committee thought we could add a little atmosphere. As it turns out, we added a lot of atmosphere."

The event will feature some of the best cuisine and fine wines from fine restaurants throughout the South Shore. The Chris Luard Jazz Trio will perform.

The live auction will offer upscale bid items, including vacation packages, 25-inch color television, sport event tickets, Beanie Babies and more.

Celebrity auctioneers will include Mayor James Sheets and local business owners.

Jim Wells, owner of Abbadessa's Restaurant in Hingham and event chairman the past four years, has teamed up with Michael Cheney, chairman of First Night Quincy.

"Jim has done an outstanding job in bringing together 25 of the finest restaurants on the South Shore," Cheney said. "Jim and Fr. Bill have worked hard to secure some exciting auction items.

"I know everyone is going to love this event and I am honored to play a small role in this exciting event for a great cause," Cheney added.

Proceeds will benefit Fr. Bill's Place. Tickets are $50 each and include admission, food and sample of fine wines.

Fr. Bill's Place, operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, has served over 1,200 unduplicated clients in the last fiscal year. The majority of them come from the Quincy and South Shore area.

QISC and Fr. Bill's Place are only partially funded by public dollars. Each year QISC needs to raise more than 40% of its total budget through donations and fundraising.

For tickets, call (617) 376-2255. Credit cards accepted.

For event information, call Cheney at 471-1493.

LORETTA DeGRAZIA, owner of East Coast Petroleum in Quincy, recently received a proclamation from Mayor James Sheets for being named the New England Women's Business Association's "Businesswoman of the Year" for 1998. Also on hand to congratulate her at left is her father, Gaetano, presenting a bouquet of roses from her East Coast Petroleum staff.

Russell Patten Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

Russell Patten, 25, of 120 Babcock St., Houghs Neck is a candidate for the Ward 1 City Council seat.

Patten took out nomination papers Tuesday and said he will soon officially announce his candidacy.

"I feel this is the perfect time for me to run," Patten said, "This city is a great place and I believe that I have the ability to keep positive things happening and work for even greater success in the future."

A lifelong resident of Quincy, he attended Quincy Public Schools graduating from Quincy High School in 1992. He graduated from Suffolk University in 1996 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Communications. He was a June graduate of Suffolk University Law School and will be sitting for the Massachusetts Bar Examination at the end of July.

RUSSELL PATTEN

He and his family have deep ties to the city. His father, Russell Patten Jr. is a lieutenant in the Quincy Fire Department and his grandfather, Russell Patten Sr., was also a firefighter for many years. His family includes his mother, Donna Patten, his brother, Matthew Patten and his sister, Lisa Patten.

Patten has been active as a campaign worker and spent a summer as an intern in City Clerk Joseph Shea's office.

With the new millennium approaching, Patten said he believes Ward One is in "great shape, and that much of that has to do with the fine work of Councillor Peter Kolson."

"Kolson has worked very hard to help the people of Ward One. We have the lowest crime rate in the city and a bright future ahead", Patten said.

"While the future in indeed bright for Ward One, vigilance is very important. "With so much success in Ward One we must be careful not to lose the things that make it a wonderful place to live and do business." Patten cites environmental and quality of life issues as his greatest priorities.

Senate Budget Version Would Increase Quincy's State Aid

State Senator Michael Morrissey reports that the Senate version of the fiscal year 2000 budget provides for generous increases to Quincy's local aid and chapter 70 education assistance funds.

"The Senate version of the budget increases Quincy's local aid by 12.1% for a total of $9,182,520," said Morrissey. "These state funds help local government respond to the priorities they identify themselves."

One of the most noteworthy components of the Senate budget, he said, is the $245 million increase in education assistance and fulfills the funding promise in the Education Reform Act of 1993. The Senate budget provides $12,679,625 to Quincy schools, which is an increase of $1,310,250 over last year, and an increase of $464,385 over what the House is proposing for next year. The Governor's budget spends $90 million less than the Senate.

Deware Funeral Home Helps Seniors Stay Safe, Smart

Senior citizens can use numerous tactics to avoid criminals who specialize in preying on them, stealing their hard-earned possessions, well deserved sense of security and sometimes their health or life.

Recently over 50 local senior citizens learned valuable tips on personal safety, safety in the home and how to spot a scam at the SCI Smart & Safe Seniors event held at the Tobin Tower in Wollaston.

The Deware Family Funeral Homes of Quincy joined with the Quincy Council on Aging to bring SCI Smart & Safe Seniors and nationally recognized safety expert Robert Stuber to Quincy. SCI Smart & Safe Seniors, sponsored nationwide by service affiliates of Service Corporation International, provides a unique and comprehensive program to prevent exploitation and abuse.

"The safety of senior citizens should concern everyone in our community. We are proud to be associated with Bob Stuber and to bring SCI Smart & Safe Seniors to Quincy," said Scott Deware of the Deware Funeral Homes.

ROB STUBER, founder of SCI Smart & Safe Seniors and Richard Winkelman of the Deware Funeral Home with certificate of appreciation for conducting recent Safe Seniors program.

Sample lessons from the program included home invasion tips, safe ATM use and how to identify phone fraud. For example, senior citizens should wait a day or two later than usual to cash Social Security checks to avoid becoming a victim simply because of routine.

During the hour long program Stuber asked the audience what they thought is people's perception of them. "Slow," "feeble-minded" and "weak" were just a few of the answers.

"We have to challenge that way of thinking," Stuber said. "Senior citizens can be smart, and avoid being scared. There are practical ways to protect yourself every day."

"We learned so much specific information on how we can be safe and smart," says Jack MacKay. "I appreciate the Deware Funeral Home for providing SCI Smart & Safe Seniors to give us the added advantage with these simple safety tips."

We should all be concerned about the social quality and safety of community," said Scott Deware. "We are proud to provide educational programs that improve our community life."

William Ryan Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

William P. Ryan of 45 Mallard Road, an emergency medical technician, is running for Ward 1 councillor.

"The big issue is the hospital," said Ryan, whose wife is a nurse in the intensive care unit at Quincy Hospital.

"Quincy has one of the oldest per capita populations in the country, and Quincy needs to have a hospital. If it can't survive on its own, it needs a merger," he said.

Without a hospital in Quincy, residents would have to be sent elsewhere — to South Shore or Milton hospital or to one in Boston. That amount of time it would take to reach a hospital could be a matter of life and death.

Ryan has worked with the emergency medical service in Quincy since 1979, first with Bay State ambulance and most recently with Fallon Ambulance Service, which won the city's contract. He works in the company's communication center.

WILLIAM RYAN

He said another issue he is particularly concerned about is pedestrian safety, especially on Sea Street. Just this spring, he said, a woman was killed crossing the street and a child was struck by a vehicle and sustained a broken arm.

"Traffic has really slowed down along Quincy Shore Drive, with the timed traffic signals," he noted, recommending the installation of some more lights along the busy road.

A homeowner, he suggested that more municipal services could be provided, considering the amount of taxes residents must pay. Ryan also questioned how much more in MWRA assessments could taxpayers withstand, noting that Quincy's increase outdistanced surrounding communities.

He also noted that providing more housing for the elderly and the handicapped needs to be addressed.

"These are but a few of the issues facing us," he said.

Ryan has lived in Quincy 15 years. He is a Vietnam War era veteran with the Coast Guard.

In addition to his wife, he has a 25-year-old daughter and two grandchildren.

Funding In State Budget To Repair QSD Tide Gates

Funding to repair the tide gates on Quincy Shore Drive was included in the state budget by Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin.

The Metropolitan District Commission owns tide gates some of which are inoperable. The tide gates are an essential part of the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project.

"Given the nature of this project, all repairs, construction and restoration must start downstream at the base of Furnace Brook and work upstream to Cunningham Brook in Milton." said Morrissey.

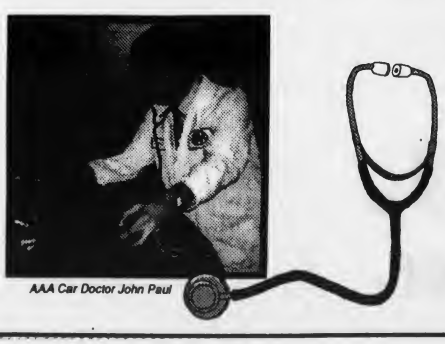
The House provided $250,000 in the House version of the Fiscal Year 2000 Budget. The Senate passed a capital projects appropriation that included $250,000 for tide gates. In additional to the $250,000 for the tide gates, the Senate approved of $300,000 towards the cost of easements on this project.

"The funding of easements is a very important step to move the project ahead to the next level," said Ayers. The easements are required to put the contracts out to bid on this project once all the permits are approved. "There are between 60 to 70 permanent and construction easements necessary to this project.

Tobin said, "It is important that the gates can be opened during heavy storms and low tide, gates can be opened so as to allow water to move and rain more quickly to the ocean," :Also during high tides with a severe storm, the gates need to be closed as to prevent additional water from moving upstream."

Currently two gates are open by using wielded cabling and one is closed. The gates cannot change position without cutting the cabling or installing new cabling. The funding is an important first step towrd providing flood relief to hundreds of households in Quincy

The Quincy legislative delegation said it will continue to work closely with the Milton legislative delegation and city officials, residents of this important project. The city is working with the MDC on an agreement to allow the city to operate and maintain the tide gates.



"We are working and encouraging our colleagues to fund the project in segments over a period of years," said Morrissey. "Securing this funding gives us a good start on moving this project forward."

The House-Senate legislation of the legislators are hopeful monies to repair the tide gates will be appropriated.

Foot Notes
by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

ATHLETE'S FOOT

Why is this fungus called Athlete's foot? Perhaps because it may be picked up in locker room showers and floors. Also, a sweaty, damp foot in a dark shoe offers the warm, moist climate in which fungi like to grow. This type of dermatophyte infection is characterized by burning, itching, oozing, and peeling skin. Most often, the fungus needs a crack or split in the skin in which to enter. A common site is between the fourth and fifth toes. To protect against this fungus, keep your feet clean and dry, minimize walking barefoot in public places, and wear vented shoes and/or absorbent socks when you know your feet are likely to get sweaty.

In addition to treating athlete's foot and other fungal infection, correcting your current foot problems, and relieving pain and other symptoms, your podiatrist can provide tips to help you avoid foot trouble down the road. There's lots you can do to make sure your feet stand up to years of wear and tear. Begin with a call to our office at 617-472-3466. We are conveniently located at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy.

P.S. Some cases of athlete's foot are very stubborn and hard to cure. A secondary bacterial infection may develop in the open skin caused by the fungal infection. Your podiatrist can help.

NHL Championship Very Satisfying, Says Dallas Stars PR Director Larry Kelly

For North Quincy Native, Stanley Cup Is 'The Ultimate'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

North Quincy native Larry Kelly knows the downside of earning a living with a professional sports franchise.

Playoff disappointments, fan apathy, being the new team on the block marked the transition of the Dallas Stars after the team relocated from Minnesota in 1987.

But six years later, Kelly, who has been the director of public relations for the Stars since the team arrived in "Big D," is now experiencing the Big "C."

A Championship.

The Stars defeated the Buffalo Sabres, 4 games to 2, for the Stanley Cup in triple overtime at 1:30 a.m. Sunday, June 20.

The victory climaxed the Stars' season-long focus on winning the NHL title, and provided some indelible memories for Kelly who grew up playing youth hockey and dreaming of being part of a championship team.

"There were very high expectations from the very beginning," Kelly said in a recent interview. "From the start of training camp, winning the Stanley Cup was the goal. To be able to accomplish that is very satisfying."

What a difference a mere few years make.

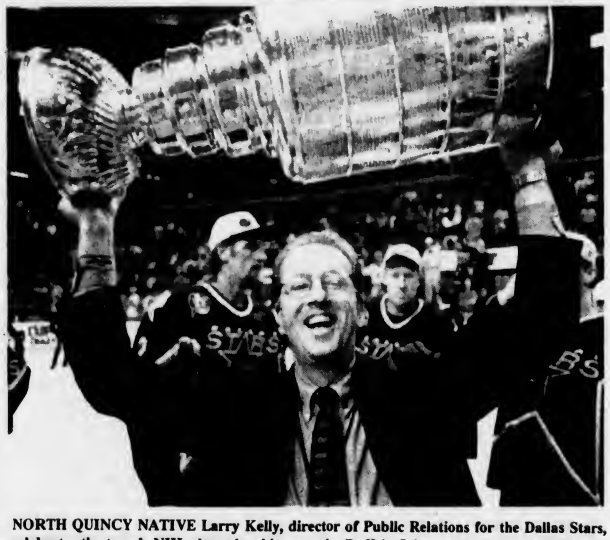
"When we first came to Dallas, you couldn't give tickets away," said Kelly who was assistant PR director for the Texas Rangers for six years before taking the lead PR job for the Stars.

"But when we had our championship parade in downtown Dallas the Monday after we won the Cup, 115,000 people showed up to cheer us, many of them wearing Stars' apparel," Kelly said.

Dallas is no longer just Cowboy Country. In the last three years, the team's season ticket based has doubled from 6,000 to 12,000 and there's a waiting list for next year. The Stars sold out all but two regular season games and finished the year with 49 straight, including playoffs. Besides the Stanley Cup, the team set a franchise record for victories (51) and points (114).

"To me, that's one of the biggest things. I've been here since the beginning and to see our success is so gratifying. I'm very glad to have an opportunity to see it all come to fruition."

As PR director, Kelly, a 1981 graduate of North Quincy High School and 1985 graduate of the University of New Hampshire, performs a myriad of functions, from compiling game notes and running the press box, to arranging press conferences and putting together media guides.



Normally, the off-season is down time for hockey teams.

But since the Cup clincher, Kelly's responsibilities have swelled.

"Normally, the summers are very slow during the day. But the last couple of weeks I haven't been able to concentrate five minutes on next season."

In fact, Kelly's been on the go non-stop since the end of March as Dallas prepared for the start of the playoffs. His first off-day was last Friday when he flew from Dallas to Boston to spend time with his family in Quincy.

One of new duties he's handling is fielding requests from media and setting up interviews with the players. "The phone is just ringing off the hook," he says.

NORTH QUINCY NATIVE Larry Kelly, director of Public Relations for the Dallas Stars, celebrates the team's NHL championship over the Buffalo Sabres with the coveted Stanley Cup.

Kelly's used to the interview routine. But he's encountering a whole different experience because of the Cup.

Tradition calls for each of the players on a championship team to have custody of the Stanley Cup for one day. The Stars are scattered throughout North America and two live overseas (Helsinki and Prague). Kelly is helping coordinate Cup visits with the Hall of Fame which never sends the Cup to a destination without a Hall escort.

Pat Verbeek was the first Star player to have the Cup on July 3. The next day, the trophy traveled to northern Wisconsin to be with Craig Ludwig for a Fourth of July parade. Next up was a television appearance with Mike Modano.

The Cup scheduling will continue throughout the summer. The championship chalice will then return to the Hall of Fame the first week of September and names of the Dallas Stars will be engraved on the 35-pound Cup at the end of September.

"The pay-off is winning the thing, I'll take that any day," Kelly said. "I'll take a nice short busy summer any year if it means winning the thing. It's a lot of work and a lot of traveling but it's definitely worth it. I'm fortunate to have the job that I do. It's a great experience."

'One Of Those Years' For Morrisette Legion

By CHRIS POISSON

LEGION BASEBALL

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team has seen it all this season.

There were the four straight one-run losses early in the season that drained the club emotionally. There was the 14-9 loss to Cohasset June 22, where the sprinkler system would not shut off, leaving the club drenched and in the midst of a five-game losing streak.

And the latest misfortune doused them last Friday against West Roxbury, when the lights at Adams Field went out in the sixth inning of a 4-4 game. The conclusion of the match up is scheduled for July 13

Morrisette held a 4-2 lead in the sixth but West Roxbury scored two runs to tie the game when heavy showers hit the area.

"It's just been one of those years," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "It's been unbelievable."

Morrisette (4-8) split the previous two games before Friday's power outage, beating Randolph, 3-1, last Tuesday and then losing to Braintree, 5-2, the following night.

The win against Randolph was strictly a pitcher's game as Morrisette's Rob Celata outdueled rival Mark Rosen, one of the top pitchers in the league.

Celata went the distance, allowing five hits and no earned runs while fanning 12. Rosen yielded six hits and one earned run in six innings of work. He also struck out 12.

The bottom of the order provided the offense for Celata. With a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning, Joe Thorley, batting in the ninth spot, stroked a two-run single with two outs to give Celata a little bit of a cushion.

And the runs were needed as Randolph later scored an unearned run.

Joe Flynn went 2 for 3 (triple, double) with an RBI and Brian Walker added two hits.

Matt McCann, who has pitched well this season despite his 0-4 record, picked up the loss against Braintree. McCann pitched seven innings, giving up three runs on 11 hits while punching out seven.

But Morrisette couldn't get to Braintree hurler Ryan Paylor. Paylor scattered seven hits, allowed no earned runs and struck out six.

For Braintree, Brian Eck went 3 for 4 with two runs scored, Dave Aibrect went 2 for 4 with two RBIs and Paylor chipped in with two hits.

With the season winding down, Morrisette's next four games, all this week, will decide its fate. It played two games while the paper was in print (Tuesday at Milton and yesterday against Quincy) and it plays Quincy tonight at Adams Field. Tomorrow Morrisette will take on Randolph.

"If we can win the next four games we'll be even at 8-8," Cattaneo said Monday afternoon. "I think probably from there we can make the playoffs. These games coming up are very big."

Most Successful Year For Woodward Wildcats

The Woodward Wildcats finished the 1998-1999 year with its most successful athletic program to date.

The 1998-1999 athletic school year began with its inaugural varsity soccer season. Head coach Karen Schwartz, assistant coach Jessica Pite and the players dedicated their first season to the memory of former Dean of Students, Sue Hayes, who passed away a short time before the school year began.

The Woodward team compiled a record of 8-6-1, which was good enough for a third-place finish in the I.G.C. Division of NEPSAC. Two players, senior captain Jessica Boothby and captain Danielle Gratto, were named to the All-League Squad.

The winter season introduced a new sport, junior varsity volleyball. Coach Liz Ward brought the team along so effectively and so well that volleyball is added to the varsity program in the 1999-2000 schedule year. The Wildcats will be playing NEPSAC teams within the I.G.C. and E.I.L.

The Woodward Wildcats basketball season was a highlight film from start to finish. Athletic director/head coach Bob Giordano, assistant coach Jessica Pite, assistant coach James Pickle and the players dedicated their season to the memory of former Headmaster, Robert L. Johnston.

The Wildcats finished their season as undefeated champions of the I.G.C. and earned their first tournament bid. The team made it to the final four of New England class "D" before losing to Connecticut. Three players, senior captain Jessica Boothby, Audrey Fergason and Shante Moore, were named to the All-League I.G.C. In addition, senior captain Jackie O'Meara, Janet McNamara and Kathleen Hester were named to the all-star squad.

Audrey Fergason won the I.G.C. scoring and rebounding title and went on to be named to the New England all-star team that played at the College of Holy Cross, where she displayed her talents.

Spring brought forth softball. The JV squad compiled a 5-0 record under coach Liz Ward. The varsity team, led by head coach Bob Giordano and assistant Liz Ward, had an outstanding year, finishing 10-1. It played as an independent against schools from the I.G.C., E.I.L. and I.S.L.

For the 1999-2000 school year, Woodward is offering varsity lacrosse as a spring sport, along with softball. Jess Pite, a four-year college lacrosse player, will be head coach of the program.

At graduation this year, four seniors were honored with Athletic Scholarship Awards by Mr. Robert Raymondi.

The athletic program at Woodward is dedicated to building self-esteem, learning life-long lessons such as sportsmanship, working in crucial situations, teamwork and management. Woodward is proud of what the student athletes have accomplished is such a short time and is looking forward to the future.

Jaehnig Chiropractic Becoming 'Cardiac Kids'

JUNIOR LEAGUE

Jaehnig Chiropractic, or should we say the cardiac kids, pulled out two thrilling last-inning victories during a four-win week in recent Quincy Junior Baseball League action.

Here's a look at its wins:

Jaehnig Chiropractic - 8
South Shore Buick - 7

Jaehnig (16-1) scored three runs in the last inning to stun Buick and win its 11th consecutive game.

Mike O'Mahoney and Nick Al Khatib (2 hits) sparked the comeback with back-to-back singles. Dave Jaehnig (3 hits, 3 RBIs) tripled off the left-field fence to tie the game and scored the winning run when Chris Marinelli (2 hits) ripped a single up the middle.

John Fitzgerald had three hits while Mo Al Khatib and Matt Tobin each had two.

Jaehnig started the game and fanned seven, but it was his little brother, Matt, who picked up the win as he struck out two of the three batters he faced in the last inning.

John Folino took the loss for Buick. Folino blasted a home run and had a double for Buick's offensive production. Matt Haskins also belted a long ball and scored three runs. Matt McHugh smashed a two-run double that gave Buick a short-lived lead.

Jaehnig Chiropractic - 4
Colonial Federal - 2

Once again, Jaehnig used some last inning heroics as it scored three runs to knock off Colonial

Dave Jaehnig led off the sixth inning with a double and Chris Marinelli (2 hits) and John Fitzgerald singled to load the bases. Jon O'Conner bunted in the tying run on a squeeze play and an errant throw brought in two runs for the lead.

Marinelli punched out 12 for his second win of the season and Jaehnig struck out the side in the last inning for his third save of the year.

David Djerf collected two hits for Colonial while Ray Marchaud picked up a tough loss on the mound.

Beacon Sports - 2

Jon O'Conner allowed just one hit in five innings to run his record to 5-0 in the win.

Chris Marinelli had three hits, including a line-drive home run, and Matt Tobin also had three hits (2 doubles). Dave Jaehnig legged out a triple and put on a Nomar Garciaparra-like performance at short stop with seven putouts.

Rob Dolbec singled and made one of the season's best defensive plays with a running one-handed catch in center field.

Dean Sandonato struck out 10 and had Beacon Sports lone hit with a towering home run.

Jaehnig Chiropractic - 14
Rotary - 3

Dave Jaehnig went 3 for 3 with a home run and a double, while John Fitzgerald, Mo Al Khatib, Kevin Donovan, Jon O'Conner and Nick Al Khatib had two hits apiece.

James Spellman stroked three hits for Rotary.

In other league action:

Beacon Sports (11-4-1) defeated Rotary (11-10) behind strong pitching from Rob Baker and Joe Cafano.

Dean Sandonato banged out three doubles and Evan Harrington had a pair of hits.

For Rotary, James Spellman struck out 12 batters on the hill and had four hits.

Quincy Police - 2

South Shore Buick picked up its 13th win of the season and the two-time defending league champion is looking to capture its third straight title under first-year head coach Paul Graham.

Twelve-year-old John Folino and his strong arm led Buick to the win. Folino tossed a complete game with nine strikeouts, raising his season total to 101 in just nine appearances. And what's even more impressive is he has only walked seven batters.

Folino has also been causing some damage at the plate. He's batting .455 with three home runs and 46 RBIs. Folino credits former head coach Peter Williams, who drafted Folino two years ago and started him every game as a 10-year-old, for his success.

Kiwanis - 15
South Shore Buick - 9

Mike O'Mahoney went deep twice and Matt Breslin went 3 for 4 with a home run to lead Kiwanis to its ninth win of the year.

Dewey Donovan, Andy Patton, Mike Garland and Nick Falbo contributed offensively with two hits apiece.

Billy Dwyer pitched five innings for the win with Garland picking up the save.

Garland and Dwyer also played strong defensively. Garland turned an unassisted double play while Dwyer made an outstanding play to end the game.

Paul Graham had three hits, missing the cycle by a home run, for Buick. John Folino and Matt Haskins did some damage with crushing home runs.

Burgin-Platner Hurley - 14
Keohanes - 7

Tony Pepdjonovic struck out eight in the win and also ripped a triple and two singles.

Jimmy Fitzpatrick had a triple, double and single, while Justin Thorley, Bobby Newcomb and Mike Powers also had three-baggers.

Earlier in the week, Thorley lost his first game of the season against Jaehnig Chiropractic.

Thorley was Pedro Martinez-esque with 12 strikeouts, bringing his season total to 110 in only 54 innings.

Colonial Federal - 14
Keohanes - 3

Colonial Federal got solid hitting throughout the batting order in the win.

David Djerf led the way with a single, triple and three RBIs.

Mike Giordani (triple, 2 RBIs), Sandro Junkovic (2 RBIs), Nicholas Malvesti (2 hits) and Dan Reggiannini (double, 2 RBIs) also had hot bats.

Chris Rooney pitched three innings for the win, while Reggiannini and Jeff Green finished out the game.

Nick Devico, Jonathan Pelletier, Marty Rogers and Mark Kiesal all had hits Keohanes. Mike Dunbar played well defensively.

Triple A Playoffs Underway

The Triple A playoffs are under way and Quincy P.A.L. rebounded with a 10-9 win over Yellow Cab after losing its first playoff game.

Domenic "Pedro" Poli, coming off an undefeated season, struck out 14 in the complete-game win.

Poli also scored the tying run in the bottom of the fifth inning as PAL rallied with six runs to regain the lead.

Jason Purves slammed a three-run triple to tie the game and played well behind the plate.

Danny Poggi plated Purves with the go-ahead run and Steve Yovino and Alex Hardy added insurance runs.

David Cordiero and John Grillo chipped in with two hits apiece.

Brendan Clifford pitched a strong game for Yellow Cab with six strikeouts.

Justin Boyd went 4 for 4 with doubles, and Robbie Mann added two hits and a run scored.

In other action:

Yellow Cab - 11
Local 2222 - 3

Yellow Cab opened up the post-season with a win as Brendan Clifford tossed a complete-game, 12-strikeout performance, scattering just five hits.

Mark Pepjonovich scored two runs and turned an unassisted double play.

Bryan Donelin sealed the win in the sixth inning when he stroked a two-run double, scoring Mike Saville and Joe Ceurvals.

Paul Farina, Chris Teirney and Matt Palmer had hits for Local 2222.

C.N.A. - 10

Steve O'Neil fanned 12 in a complete-game effort as CNA won a playoff game. O'Neil got things going with a leadoff home run.

Keilan Losi crushed a three-run homer and also doubled and scored twice to lead the offense.

Ricky Likas had two hits and scored three runs and Kyle Costa added three hits.

Jason Purves struck out 12 despite getting the loss. He also had two hits.

Dave Cordiero tripled and scored, while Bobby Harrington made three great grabs in centerfield.

Matthew Joyce To Compete In U.S. Scholar-Athlete Games

Matthew Joyce of Quincy has been selected to participate in the inaugural United States Scholar-Athlete games this June.

A sophomore honors student at Boston College High School, Joyce, 16, will partake in the soccer component of the Games.

Joyce has been playing soccer for eight years and is a member of the varsity team at B.C. High. In his spare time he has participated in various community service projects.

Over 1,600 scholar-athletes and scholar-fine artists representing all 50 states are expected to participate in the United States Scholar-Athlete Games, which will take place from June 26 - July 2 at the University of Rhode Island and in Newport, R.I.

Administered by the International Sport, the 1999 U.S. Games will continue the Scholar-Athlete Games tradition, which was launched in 1993 with the first World Scholar-Athlete Games. The U.S. Games will bring the Institute one step closer to achieving its goal of hosting Scholar-Athlete Games on every continent.

Scholar-athletes may participate in one of thirteen sports programs including baseball, basketball, chess, field hockey, golf, lacrosse, rugby, soccer, softball, swimming, tennis, track & field and volleyball. .

Jalinette Jimenez Graduates City Year

Jalinette Jimenez recently completed a year of service with City Year Boston.

Jimenez was one of nearly 200 City Year graduates who recently completed 1,700 hours of service in Boston schools, community centers, City Year camps and after-school programs. Thomas Reid Wins Medals At Nat'l Wheelchair Games

Thomas Reid, a disabled Army veteran from Quincy, competed in the 19th National Veterans Wheelchair Games held June 21-26 in Puerto Rico.

The field of more than 600 athletes from 40 states, Puerto Rico and Great Britain makes this the largest annual wheelchair sports event in the United States.

All athletes are military veterans who use wheelchairs due to spinal cord impairment, certain neurological conditions, orthopedic amputations or other disabilities.

Reid, 29, is a quadriplegic. He is currently receiving care at the VA medical facility in West Roxbury.

Reid took the silver medals in track 400, 200 and 100 meters events. He also earned the silver in quad rugby and finished fourth in table tennis.

"It's good to be with fellow veterans with disabilities," said Reid, who has participated in this event for the past four years. "They're in the same boat as you are. It's a good learning experience. You learn everyday things as well as sports.

THOMAS REID

"It's good camaraderie, yet at the same time, people give 100 percent. Unlike other sporting events, if you lose people are graceful."

Athletes in the Games compete within three divisions - masters (over age 40), novice (first-time competitors in wheelchair sports) and open (all others or those who choose to compete in this category instead of masters or novice).

They also compete within classes according to the level of their physical ability, with three quadriplegic-level classes and four paraplegic-level or amputee classes. Reid competed as a Class IA in the Open Division.

The Games are presented by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) and the Paralyzed Veterans of America, and was hosted this year by the San Juan VA Medical Center.

For North Quincy Native, Stanley Cup 'The Ultimate'

After the engraving, the silver trophy will make a triumphant return to Dallas for the Stars' homeopener Friday, Oct. 1 when the championship banner is raised and rings are distributed.

"That'll be another layer of gratification when we get our rings in the fall," Kelly beams.

This championship season has already provided some life-long memories for Kelly.

The deciding Game 6 is full of them, Kelly explains.

"The whole game was a roller coaster of emotions. When we got to overtime, you knew one shot -- like off a deflection -- could win the game for you or lose the game for you. We had a 3-overtime game earlier in the playoffs. Our guys were pretty confident that we could win it.

"At the start of the overtime, I was sitting in our locker room with some of the guys on the team who weren't suited up for the game. When we saw the winning goal on TV, we started yelling and screaming. I ran out onto the ice to coordinate interviews with ESPN and the Canadian broadcast network.

"It was so late -- adrenaline kept you going. I'm in the locker room trying to work and celebrate at the same time. It was probably the most nerve-wracking experience I've ever had, including the births of my two kids."

Larry's wife, Nanette, could concur. She was one of 110 Dallas Stars staff and spouses who flew to Buffalo for the final game in a charter arranged by the club's owner. One of Larry's brothers, Kevin, was also in attendance.

As the celebration spilled out over the ice at Buffalo's Marine Midland Arena and players awaited the Cup presentation, Kelly noticed Modano, who had been on the ice for Brett Hull's winning goal, was strikingly alone.

"(Mike's) standing near the boards, ripping the cast off his broken wrist. He's so relieved that he's crying," Kelly said. "I approach him and say, 'Mo, you deserve this more than anyone on the team.'

"He just said thanks."

Kelly knows first-hand what Modano has endured. He's one of three players who are still on team after it moved from Minnesota six years ago.

"He's had to deal with a lot of b.s. over the years. He's been called too soft and too much of a one-way (offensive) player. He's developed into one of the best two-way players in the NHL," Kelly said.

"I jotted down some notes about the whole experience. I intend to put together a journal of what happened that night. Seeing Modano on the ice like that is one of the things I'll always remember."

Another moment of glory came minutes later when Kelly hoisted hockey's holy grail high over his head in celebration.

"It's something you dream about -- holding the Stanley Cup," said Kelly, who can vividly recall Johnny Bucyk circling the Boston Garden with the same Cup after Bobby Orr's title-winning score in 1970.

"It's an unbelievable feeling to be able to be out on the ice with the team that just won it. It's the ultimate feeling."

The Stars' celebration continued in the Buffalo arena until about 4:30 a.m. The team's flight for Dallas departed at 4:45 a.m.

"On the flight home, I could stop and reflect on what had happened. I was almost pinching myself. You want to be the team left standing in June. . . I work with these players everyday. They're a great bunch of guys. To be able to share it with these guys is even more gratifying."

Kelly has also provided some golden moments for family and local hockey fans.

On Friday, June 25, Kelly headed east for the NHL entry draft in Boston's FleetCenter held the next day. Kelly was going to spend the night in Quincy at his parents' house. The Cup was headed to Boston, too, for the draft. By sheer coincidence, the Hall of Fame offered Kelly custody of the Cup for Friday night given Boston's close proximity to Quincy.

Kelly eagerly accepted the invitation and contacted his brother, Kevin, who met Larry at the airport. Together they picked up the Cup stored in a plan, inconspicuous blue trunk at a Boston hotel where the Hall of Fame escort was staying.

They arrived at the home of their parents, dad Larry, Sr. and mom Joanne. Kevin walked in first. Larry filed in behind him carrying the Cup.

"It pretty much shocked everybody. I didn't tell anyone I was coming home with the Cup."

After a photo-op at the Kelly house, Larry took the Cup to Malachy's Saloon, a Quincy Center watering spot owned by a buddy, Steve Higgins. "There must have been a couple of hundred people there that night, and 50 of them had cameras. I laid down some ground rules -- like no picking the Cup up -- and for over two hours people had their picture taken with it.

"It's such a magnet. It draws people to it. A lot of people wanted to see the names of the 1970 and 1972 Bruins' teams inscribed on the Cup. To be able to share it with people was very gratifying," Kelly said, noting it may have been the Cup's first visit to the City of Presidents.

Kelly, and many other local hockey fans, hope it's not the last.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

It's Not Just The Heat, It's The Ozone

By LAUREN LISS

When the temperature rises, it can make all of us run for the cover of shade. For some of us, however -- particularly the elderly, children, and people with respiratory diseases -- hot summer weather brings with it more than discomfort. But it isn't the heat or humidity.

It's the ozone. High in the atmosphere, ozone protects us all from the sun's deadly ultraviolet radiation. Closer to the ground, however, ozone is harmful to people because it directly affects lung function.

People with asthma or other respiratory diseases feel the effects most. When ground level ozone readings are high it drives thousands of Massachusetts residents into hospital emergency rooms. In fact, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, as many as 20 percent of all summertime respiratory-related hospital visits in the Northeast are due to ground level ozone pollution.

Children and seniors are also seriously affected. Kids are the greatest risk from air pollution because they breathe in far more in relation to body weight than adults. They are also more apt to engage is strenuous play on hot summer days when ozone levels are highest. Seniors are at significant risk as well because as we age our bodies lose respiratory defense mechanisms.

Although ground level ozone occurs naturally in small amounts, the levels that can affect public health are a direct result of manmade air pollution. Harmful chemicals emitted from cars, trucks, buses, industry and other sources react with heat and sunlight to create ground level ozone.

Most of the time, air quality in Massachusetts is pretty good, and it's been improving steadily in recent years as government, industry and consumers work together to reduce air emissions. But on hot summer days, the amount of ground level ozone can increase dramatically, and we all feel its effects.

In early June, Massachusetts endured several days when ozone levels were extremely high. Throughout the state, in addition to the blistering heat, people felt irritation to their lungs, eyes and noses. Those who suffer from asthma experienced incidents of acute respiratory episodes.

There's an economic impact, too. Whenever ozone levels are high, we see increased employee sick days and school absences, as well as a loss of production in the workplace.

The good news is that we can predict those "bad air" days, and people can take precautions to limit the health effects of ozone in the air. The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) continually monitors air quality in Massachusetts and makes the information available to the public throughout the summer ozone season. Each day, we release information about the current and following day's air quality.

This Daily Air Quality Report is available to Massachusetts Residents by calling the toll-free Air Quality Hotline at 1-800-882-1497, or by visiting our Web site at www.state.ma.us/dep. Our air quality experts rate the air quality as being "good," "moderate" or "unhealthy," and recommend specific health precautions for each level.

Even at "moderate" levels, people with heart or lung ailments should consider limiting outdoor activities during the afternoon and evening hours when ozone levels are highest. When air quality is deemed "unhealthy," everyone should avoid any strenuous activity during those hours. If you experience any respiratory symptoms -- such as coughing, throat irritation, chest pain, or shortness of breath -- you should consider consulting your doctor.

Since ground level ozone is the result of air pollution, there are things we can all do to help reduce it. Keeping motor vehicles well-maintained is among the most effective methods of reducing air pollution. A well-maintained car not only burns less fuel, but it also runs more cleanly and efficiently. Getting your car checked for vapor leaks, keeping tires properly inflated, and regularly replacing your oil are effective ways to do your part for cleaner air in Massachusetts.

On days when ground level ozone is high, avoid refueling your vehicle in the daytime or better yet -- take public transportation. If you must refuel, do so after dark to avoid evaporation and don't "top off" your gas tank. It also helps to avoid using lighter fluid on charcoal grills or oil-based paints or solvents. Postpone using gasoline-powered lawn mowers or garden equipment until the air quality has improved.

It's been a hot summer, thus far -- and it has only just begun. The next time you hear someone say, "It's not the heat, it's the humidity," remember: It's also the ozone. Being aware of its effects and how to counter them should help us all breath easier.

(Lauren Liss is the commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection).

Surgeons-Podiatrists

FROM THE WORLD OF RESEARCH

Podiatrists, like other medical specialists, sometimes deal with difficult conditions like pesky fractures (broken bones) that are difficult to heal. The fracture could be a result of an injury or from a surgical procedure such as the attempted correction of a Bunion. There are some tools doctors have to try to heal these difficult fractures. These include putting the patient in a cast and using electrical bone stimulators. However, would it not be nice if a "magic" pill was available to help grow new bone and heal these pesky fractures?

A biotechnology company in Seattle, ZymoGenetics Incorporated, is currently testing three compounds that qualify as that "magic" pill. The compounds appear to have the ability to stimulate bone morphogenic proteins (BMPs). These proteins influence osteoblasts (bone forming cells) to make new bone. The good thing is that the three compounds are small enough to be put into a pill form. Immediately two important applications become apparent: healing of fractures and osteoporosis (loss of bone mass due to aging). The medical community will be looking forward to the outcome of this exciting area of research.

QUINCY'S GERALD SHEEHAN, with his wife Alice, was recently awarded the Protestant Guild for Human Services highest honor at a reception at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Gerald Sheehan Receives Protestant Guild Award

Gerald Sheehan of Quincy was recently honored by The Protestant Guild for Human Services, Inc., a Waltham-based human services organization, as the recipient of the 1999 Rev. Andrew G. Rosenberger Award during a reception at Symphony Hall in Boston.

The award, named for the organization's long-time chairman and trustee, is given annually to a student and employee who best exemplify the organization's mission of providing high quality human services for persons with special needs.

Sheehan, the Guild's manager of facilities and equipment, has worked at the Guild for the past 10 years. He is responsible for the upkeep and repair of the Guild's seven student residences, its main school and office building in Waltham, its 20 vehicles and a variety of furnishings, equipment and appliances.

Edmund Hagerty, the Protestant Guild's executive director, said Sheehan has demonstrated all of the award criteria during the past 10 years.

"Jerry is a dedicated professional who is always willing to go the extra mile for the students and staff at The Learning Center. More so, he takes pride in maintaining all our facilities to the high standards that we demand and that our students deserve. His commitment to our mission makes my job easier and helps provide a safe, home-like environment for our students."

A delighted Sheehan said he was surprised by the honor.

"It's wonderful to be recognized by your colleagues, but I've got to admit I was a little shocked," Sheehan said. "The reason I started working here 10 years ago was because I was so impressed by the work the Guild does, and by the people who work there. Ten years later I'm still impressed. Now, to be a part of that--and to be recognized--is very rewarding."

This year's presentation took place at Symphony Hall, where guests and supporters also enjoyed dinner and a performance by the Boston Pops Orchestra.

The Protestant Guild for Human Services, Inc. is a Waltham-based human service organization dedicated to providing high quality services for persons with special needs. The Guild's Learning Center, located at 41 Waverly Oaks Rd., is a year-round approved private school that serves children, adolescents and young adults with a wide range of developmental disabilities.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

How often do you doubt something you hear? How often do you have doubts about your abilities or have doubts about the abilities of others? Many people today flounder in a mire of doubt, uncertainty and fear about 'how things are going' -- 'where are we going' -- ... We all have doubts at times about ourselves and others. It is only human. Doubting has always been and will always be a human characteristic. When in maturity we find ourselves gripped with uncertainty or struggling in desperation we are bound to have doubts. Couldn't it be said that it is better to have honest doubts than no doubts at all? Couldn't it be said that some doubts torment us only because we have too little faith and this holds true whether it applies to doubts about people, science and religion.

Obviously then, the best way to reduce doubts is to increase faith. Sounds simple. It is.

Find at least six differences in details between panels.

Differences: 1. Hole is different. 2. Picture has moved. 3. Fish is missing. 4. Water level is higher. 5. Woman's hair has changed. 6. Boy's reading is different.

CRITIC'S CORNER

THE WINSLOW BOY: It doesn't get much better than this. We have David Mamet's screenplay of Terrence Rattigan's play, "The Winslow Boy." The combination of the two megatalents is unbeatable!

The story itself is based on truth, having occurred in Edwardian-age England. The Winslows are an upper-class family of bankers. At the head of the family is Arthur Winslow (Nigel Hawthorne). His daughter, Catherine (Rebecca Pidgeon), is about to be engaged to an army officer, an arrangement which suits her family perfectly.

Unfortunately, at the same time, errant son Ronnie (Guy Edwards) has returned from military school, having been expelled for stealing. The boy denies any guilt in the matter, but the school won't budge from its position.

Papa's hopping mad at this, and he's determined to right a wrong and restore his family's good name. Despite his Herculean efforts, he fails. Unbeknownst to him, he is actually bucking the power of the English monarchy. Since the school is run by the admiralty, a branch of the monarchy, the admiralty is considered infallible in its judgments.

Arthur decides to hire Sir Robert Morton (Jeremy Northam), a well-known conservative attorney. Catherine joins in this effort. She's a devoted suffragist and is willing to help, despite Morton's opposition to giving women the vote. The attorney begins by pushing a Petition of Right wherein the crown agrees to let the case be heard. However, the quest takes a toll on this family.

The bottom line is, how much is honor really worth? That's the deep philosophical message of this very fine film. Bolstered by spectacular performances, it's a must-see!

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) New avenues of learning have opened up in front of you, but not all of them are easy or comfortable. Do not drag unwilling participants down these paths with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) No matter how much you hate it, put in some serious time at the office, working-bench, computer, etc. Do whatever is necessary in order to eliminate future headaches.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A simple formula takes the mystery out of several difficult equations. It is all right to revel in your newfound knowledge.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Uncharted territories appeal to you more than the most highly recommended hot spots. You like to find your own way of doing things, and you don't feel the need for a partner or support group. Although you may tend to be distant or impersonal at times, you really do like people.

John Vaka Honored As Sanger Center Volunteer Of Year

John Vaka of the Quincy Crisis Center was recognized as volunteer of the year by the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion at its fourth annual volunteer awards dinner held June 7 at the Wollaston Nazarene Church.

Several others also were recognized. Joyce A. Rose was presented the Mary-Martha Learning Center Service Award, The Rockland Trust Company was recognized as business of the year and the Hingham Congregational Church was honored as church of the year.

And, the organizers of the Friends of Mary-Martha — Melanie Anderson, Laura DeSisto, Suzanne Filbey, Trish Hart and Gigi Meehan — received the leadership award.

The awards program is a yearly event at which the Ester R. Sanger Center of Compassion thanks its contributors and volunteers who support its two programs, the Quincy Crisis Center and the Mary-Martha Learning Center, throughout the year.

Twenty years ago Esther R. Sanger founded the Quincy Crisis Center in response to seeing many who were in need, not only in Quincy but in other South Shore communities as well.

The center offers a weekday feeding program at Covenant Congregational Church for anyone who needs a meal, a 24-hour crisis hotline and a family food pantry on wheels.

The Mary-Martha Learning Center in Hingham opened in 1986 to provide shelter to women with young children.

The center also thanked Roche Brothers, Stop & Shop, Shaw's and Star Market grocery stores for donating sandwiches, salads and beverages and Interstate brands Corporation for providing desserts for the buffet dinner.

The Rev. David Wooster, the center's executive director, and Heather Rideout, business administrator, summed up the year's work. As it has since its earliest days, the Quincy Crisis Center relies on donations and volunteers. To help, call (617) 847-6967.

2,300 Requests For Sidewalk Repairs

Public Works Commissioner David Colton has a 50-page (and still growing) list of nearly 2,300 requests for sidewalk repairs throughout Quincy from which the ward councillors have been asked to list their top 20 priorities.

The councillors' repair requests were due Friday.

Last week the council approved a $500,000 appropriation request specifically earmarked for sidewalk repairs.

Council President Peter Kolson in May had proposed adding the $500,000 appropriation request in the fiscal year 2000 budget. Subsequently, he proposed seeking a $1 million bond to address much of the backlog of requests, and both Mayor James Sheets and Auditor Robert Foy said it could be done financially.

Last month Councillor-at-large Francis McCauley suggested budgeting $500,000 this year and another $500,000 in fiscal year 2001. The city would realize a savings of $150,000 in interest on the bond.

Colton told the councillors last week that he would need three weeks of field work before bids could be advertised during the first or second week of August, anticipating opening bids around Labor Day.

Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill, chairman of the finance committee, noted that the appropriation had only appeared on the agenda for the first time last week, but because of lengthy discussions earlier, he would support voting on the request that night.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he wanted to be sure that the $500,000 was equally divided among each ward.

"That's only $83,000 per ward," said Colton, advising them that work where curbing is required will be more expensive.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi reminded Colton that at one time, each ward had its own crew and there were very few defects that were not repaired.

Arguing that adding another work crew should be considered in the future, Raymondi said having repaired sidewalks is a matter of public safety.

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold questioned committing a half million dollars for what he considered as a new program. "We can't tell what the tax bill will be," he said, noting there may be additional costs associated with the hospital affiliation and with the newly negotiated labor contracts.

"It is a public safety issue," McCauley concurred. "Some of the streets are bummers." However, he said he would support the appropriation.

Gorman Cites Modern Needs For Fire Dept.

"The other problem is the value of land in Quincy," he said. In addition to the soaring costs of real estate, as the result of the current housing boom, there is not much vacant land available in Quincy, Gorman said.

In addition, the fire department is a labor intensive operation, and the city needs to rethink about how to deliver manpower to a fire, he added.

Several years ago, Mayor James Sheets had requested proposals to study the future fire protection needs of the city, but when the consultants' bids came in, their dizzying estimates of $200,000 and more were too high to proceed, according to the fire chief.

At the same time, he said, there were more immediate needs to purchase new equipment.

Sheets said today the fire department has an increasing number of calls for medical responses and a reduced number of calls to fight fires.

He attributed that in part to better building codes and improved building materials, such as insulation, smoke detectors and sprinklers.

Gorman agreed. "Since we have taken over Emergency Medical Services, our runs have almost doubled.

"There's good prevention now, plus people are not using space heaters. And fewer are smoking," Gorman said.

"For political reasons,"Sheets continued, "no one wants to close a fire station. And, geographically, he said, Quincy needs stations located in its peninsulas — Squantum, Germantown and Houghs Neck.

"If you live in Squantum and have a medical emergency, the firemen will be there before anyone else," he said. "I don't see a reduction in the number of stations.

"However, if the issue is delivering services, that is another matter," he said.

"As we go through this development splurge, we need to re-evaluate [whether] we can deliver services to a place like Crown Colony.

"We haven't had that overdevelopment elsewhere in the city," he said. Roche Bros. And Wal-Mart are street-level buildings," he said. The other section of the city experiencing a building boom is in Squantum, at Marina Bay, he said.

"The city is growing," said Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico last week. "We can't lose sight of the fact that the office buildings at Crown Colony house more than 1,000 employees a day, and the new condos have added more residents" to the area.

D'Amico suggested that the public safety committee look at developing an overarching public safety plan, a five- to 10-year capital plan, similar to the $75 million plan for the schools.

Gorman had been asked to attend the June 28 council meeting, at which the fiscal year 2000 budget was to be ratified, to explain the need for two new fire lieutenants.

Earlier, D'Amico had proposed adding the two positions to oversee the E-911 calls. However, Councillor-at-large Francis McCauley and other councillors argued that other financial issues must be addressed before adding new positions to the department.

At last week's meeting, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi added his voice to the debate.

The two positions, he said, "would add management strength to the department."

Further, Raymondi said it must be extremely difficult for career firefighters, with 20 or 25 years' service, not to be able to advance because, although qualified, there is no job there.

"When the city calls for an exam, we do so with the intention of filling positions," said Raymondi.

The chief had called for a lieutenant's list last year, and it is due to expire July 10.

The department is staffed by 156 firefighters, 42 lieutenants, 14 captains and five deputy chiefs, said Gorman.

So That We Won't Forget

He's Creating A Holocaust Memorial

By ELAINE NORTON

NEVER AGAIN.

That's what the sign says on the strip of land across from the courthouse on Dennis Ryan Parkway. Many have seen it, but what does it mean?

To David Ezickson, founder of the Quincy Jewish Committee, and the person who erected the sign, it means that never again should the atrocities of the Holocaust be repeated. And to remind us of this, he is constructing a Holocaust memorial across from the courthouse.

But it will take a lot of work, and Ezickson, 64, can not do it alone.

A former Quincy Public School teacher, Ezickson has made it his passion to be caretaker, for the last ten years, of the strip or island of land on which the memorial will stand. Once referred to as "garbage lane," the parcel of land is now attributed to learning, the beauty of nature, and honoring people.

"I really felt that there was nothing that ever enunciates the Holocaust," explains Ezickson. "We have very short memories. We haven't learned."

"The schools are now looking at similarities and differences between now and the 1940's. Look at what's going on in Kosova and the Serbs, and at Columbine (High School, Colorado)."

Regarding the memorial, he feels it's only appropriate to remember those who lived through the Holocaust, and to honor the few remaining Holocaust survivors, especially those living in Quincy. Ezickson, whose own wife lost half her family during the Holocaust, estimates this number to be four or five. But there may be more.

Already established on the land is a memorial to John Quincy Adams, our sixth president, which reads MAN'S HUMANITY, referring to man's humanity to man. The new memorial will read MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN, referring to man's inhumanity to man.

According to Ezickson, the memorial is not something he can physically complete by himself. He is

After Draining 150 Million Gallons Of Water

No Sign Of Body In Quarry

By MARILYN JACKSON

District Attorney William Keating says there is no indication of a body in the Granite Rail Quarry, but he won't give up the investigation for at least another few days.

"Granite Rail Quarry is virtually drained, as we speak," said Keating Tuesday afternoon. "In the last several days, because we are near the bottom, the draining went quite rapidly.

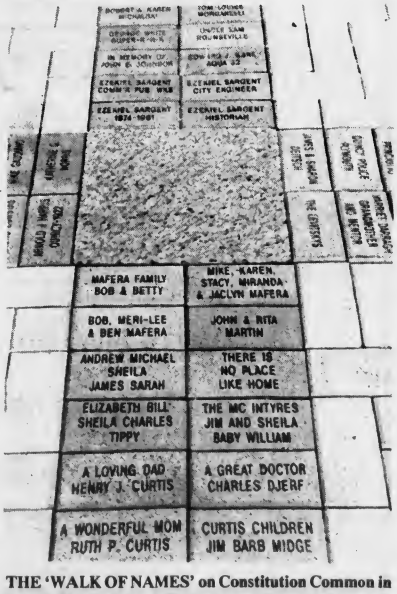
"Maybe there is a foot of water remaining."

In fact, there was so little water remaining, the pumps were pulled out late Tuesday afternoon.

Altogether, about 150 million gallons of water have been drained from the quarry since last August.

On Tuesday, two state troopers, including one with a German shepherd, trained to find human remains, went down to the area where there had been reports that a body had been sighted, said Keating.

"There's no indication, either through the use of the dog or through visual examination of any remains," he said after speaking with Det. Lt. Robert Friend who had explored the site.



"What's at the bottom, amazingly, is the 20-foot to 30-foot-high mountains, maybe higher, of decades of debris and waste."

"Unlike Swingle's Quarry, when it was drained, [the Granite Rail Quarry] is just a repository of tons and tons of debris. Much of it is almost powdery in composition because of decades of being in the water.

"The little that's remaining — the kerosene, oil and who knows what kinds of solvents and wood — has disintegrated into powder."

However, Keating was not prepared to say that the investigation has ended.

"We were given information [from an informant] as to where the body allegedly was thrown...and we will make an initial deter-

At St. Ann's School

Swimming Pool Could Be Converted Into Youth Center

By MARILYN JACKSON

An unused swimming pool at St. Ann's School could be filled with earth and capped with concrete to provide a drop-in center for Quincy's youth.

However, added the Rev. Thomas Keane, pastor of St. Ann's, it would cost about $215,000 to do the work.

Keane said he envisioned young people playing basketball or bowling.

"I see a great opportunity to have a real drop-in center for our youth," Keane told some 600 residents of Boston and Quincy at a meeting of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization, held at Boston College High School last month.

About two dozen community organizations and churches in Boston and Quincy comprise GBIO, including members of St. Ann's Church, St. Chrysostom's Church and the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

"I have lived in Quincy 15 years, and I have a 14-year-old daughter attending Quincy public schools," added John Hunt, a member of the United First Parish Church. He said he would welcome public support.

Claire Fitzmaurice, another member of United First Parish Church, pointed out that many teens in Quincy have nothing to do.

"Other than sports leagues and after-school clubs — although many work at part-time jobs — too many just hang out and drink," she said.

In a city of 87,000, she said, police cruisers responded to 6,000 calls in 1996, of which 3,000 were related to youths, she said.

She proposed looking into how Weymouth went about creating a teen center at the former police station on Pleasant Street, which is in its first year of op-

Bellotti Creates First Victim Services Unit

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has created the first-ever victim services unit to help all victims of crime with concerns about jail sentences and other related matters.

"At the sheriff's office, our primary responsibility is the custody of inmates, but we should also have a responsibility to the victims of the crimes committed by these same inmates," said Bellotti. "The creation of this unit is a step in that direction."

Jeannine Kremer will serve as director of the victim services unit. A graduate of Rutgers University, she holds a master's degree in social work from Boston College and is a licensed social worker.

Special Sheriff Courtney Cahill, who spent five years prosecuting domestic violence cases at Quincy District Court before joining Bellotti's staff, will work closely with Kremer in strengthening and creating programs for victims and their families.

Kremer will help victims with safety planning, assist in the CORI (Criminal Offender Records Index) certification process and aid in crisis intervention by providing referrals to shelters and other agency resources.

She will work with victims of domestic violence and sexual assault as well as victims of assault and battery and families of victims of motor vehicle homicide.

"In the past, the sheriff's office has only notified a victim that an inmate will be released," said Kremer. "We're going to raise that service level and actively work with the victim on the issues that concern them."

She also will be responsible for community outreach and will train police officers and other law enforcement officials and community agencies on domestic violence and related issues. And, she will teach seminars for staff at local schools about teen dating violence and sexual harassment.

For the past four years she has been a domestic violence advocate and community educator for the district attorney's office and coordinated the monthly domestic violence roundtables held monthly in Norfolk County.

Bellotti said Tuesday that the newly created victim services unit dovetails with Vice President Al Gore's anti-crime agenda outlined at Boston Police headquarters.

Gore called for an overhaul of the criminal justice system that would make it tougher on criminals and also recognize the rights of victims, suggesting a constitutional amendment for victims' rights.

Bellotti, who attended Gore's visit, said he supported Gore's goals.

"I support the Vice President's call to protect the victims of crimes by fully recognizing their rights," said Bellotti.

Public Hearing Aug. 24 On New Highpoint Plan

The public hearing on the new Highpoint apartment proposal will be held at 7 p.m. Aug. 24 at the Quincy High School auditorium.

On May 25, Highpoint developer Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, filed a new housing plan for his 75-acre Quarry Street site which would dedicate up to 410 apartments for affordable housing.

The proposal, as presented, calls for 1,641 apartments, essentially the same number originally submitted to the planning board and City Council, acting as the special permit granting authority for a planned unit development.

In March, the council turned down the proposal. This time, Stratouly is applying for a comprehensive permit for the development from the zoning board of appeals.

The new design calls for constructing 15 eight-story buildings which would contain the mixed-income apartments — 328 three-bedroom units, 657 two-bedroom units and 656 one-bedroom units.

In addition, the plan calls for preserving more than 50 acres of open space which will be developed as walking trails with a buffer zone of woodlands to separate Highpoint from the neighboring homes.

Common recreation facilities, with a swimming pool, tennis courts, exercise rooms and a meeting space, would be provided as well.

The earlier proposal, called for half of the apartments to be two-bedroom units and half, one-bedroom units, plus an assisted living complex.

In preparation of the hearing, the zoning board has asked all city department heads to submit comments on the new Highpoint apartment complex proposal by Aug. 1. Much of the material requested of the department of public works, the planning department and the health department is data presented previously to the city council.

Pre-Trial Conference Aug. 19 On Cahill Conflict Complaint

Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill will return to Quincy District Court Aug. 19 for a pre-trial conference on a criminal charge of violating the state's conflict-of-interest law.

At his arraignment July 8, Cahill pleaded not guilty to the charge, brought by the Building and Construction Trades Council of Quincy and the South Shore.

The council claimed Cahill should not have participated in the discussions of nor should have voted in the matter of the proposed $200 million Highpoint apartment complex.

The council claimed that because Cahill's sister-in-law and his parents own property near the proposed site off Quarry Street, he should have absented himself from the discussions.

Plymouth County assistant district attorney Patrick Bomberg is prosecuting the case. Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating had requested a special prosecutor be assigned to the case as Cahill also is an elected Norfolk County official. Cahill serves as county treasurer.

Cahill's attorney is Thomas Kiley, who also is defending the city in a lawsuit brought by Highpoint developer Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, headquar-

How To Prepare For A Hurricane

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) is offering tips to Massachusetts residents to help prepare for the Atlantic hurricane season.

Weather experts are predicting another active year for hurricanes and tropical storms in the Atlantic Ocean.

"Every family should have a basic supply kit that could be used for any emergency," said Acting MEMA Director Bud Iannazzo. "Everyone should keep certain items around the house in the event of a hurricane or other severe weather. A portable radio, flashlight, extra batteries, and extra food and water are all essential to help your family weather the storm."

Every household should have a supply of canned goods and other non-perishable foods that do not need cooking, along with enough water for each family member (2 qts. per person/per day), extra prescription medication, and extra food and supplies for infants and pets. A manual can opener and a basic first aid kit are also essential.

"You should also call your local authorities to find out where emergency shelters are located in your community," said Iannazzo. "It's important to know where your local shelter is before an emergency situation occurs."

Choral Society Tours France

Don't know if anyone said "Lafayette we are here," when they landed.

But some 45 or so members of the Quincy Choral Society, one of our cultural assets, are in France on tour.

Not just sight-seeing. But giving concerts, Quincy style.

The group, headed by Conductor John Nichols and including family members, left Boston last Thursday night and will return Saturday.

They were scheduled to present three or four concerts in the Tours and Paris areas.

Among their offerings: "I Love Paris In The Springtime," "Marseillaise," the French national anthem, and Hoagy Carmichael and Leonard Bernstein numbers.

And when they are not singing, they are seeing. And in France there's a lot to see. Stops on their itinerary include:

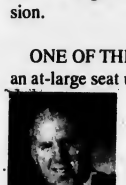
The Eiffel Tower, Notre Dame Cathedral, a driving tour of the "City of Lights," the reconstructed home of Joan of Arc, the country home of famed artist Claude Monet, the Musee du Louvre with its collection of art from ancient times to the 19th century. And, of course, a few wine cellars.

And, there was a bonus: the celebration of Bastille Day (Wednesday) which to France is what the Fourth of July is to us.

For Don Hunter and his wife, Florence of Adams Shore both of whom are active in the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, it was their fifth visit to Paris.

And Don had one before that--back in 1944.

He was an Army Air Force medic and technical sergeant back then. And he still vividly remembers his B-26 bomber outfit blasting an airfield to help liberate Paris from the Germans.



He prefers seeing Paris as it is today.

And, incidentally, if someone did say "Lafayette, we are here," it would have been quite fitting.

Lafayette visited Quincy twice in 1824 and 1825 and was a guest of the Adamses at the Adams Mansion.

ONE OF THE reasons Peter Kolson is running for an at-large seat up against three incumbents is that he got tired of waiting for an open seat to come his way.

KOLSON

A seat opened in 1995 after the late Patricia Toland was named assistant city clerk. But Paul Harold, after losing his bid for Congress, decided to run for that one and won it while topping the field.

Two years ago, another at-large seat opened when Michael Cheney decided not to seek re-election. Former Mayor Frank McCauley ran for that one and won it.

This year, Kolson thought there was going to be an open seat with his name on it. That was when Harold was seriously thinking of challenging Mayor James Sheets. But Harold decided to seek re-election instead.

Kolson feels he had waited long enough and that if ever he was going to run at-large, this year was as good a time as any.

It is his last year to take advantage of the extra exposure he has been getting for four years as council president.

Plus, serving as acting mayor when Sheets is out of town as he is this week, vacationing in Pennsylvania.

THE WARD 1 city council seat field is getting more crowded.

Latest to take out nomination papers is Stephen Hennessy of Bicknell St., Germantown. If he files them, he will be the sixth candidate for the seat Peter Kolson is vacating to run at-large.

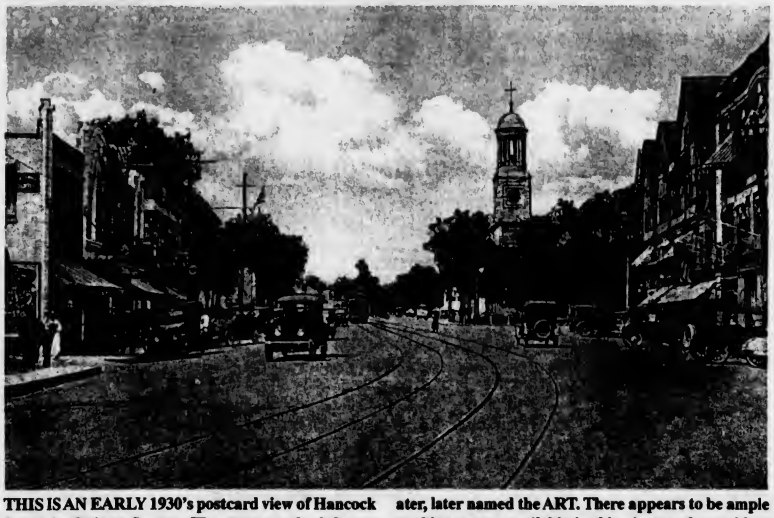
A Solution To Those Abandoned Shopping Carts

I cannot understand why our City Counciiors moves so cautiously when it comes to the issue of taking shopping carts out of a retailer's parking lot. Be it a minority, handicapped, elderly person or whoever, the carts are not ours to claim.



When we visit Finland we do not see one abandoned cart. There, you deposit 1 mark (25 cents) for use of a cart and the deposit is returned. The owners of our super markets should sit down at the drawing board and see if the installation of this system would be cost effective. Soda cans at 5 cents each are being picked up each day, perhaps carts at 25 cents each may find their way back. Secured carts would surely prevent dented fenders and the reduced overhead may be reflected on our grocery bill.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN EARLY 1930's postcard view of Hancock Street in Quincy Square. The store on the left was Heffernan's Shoe store; they were in business for almost fifty years. Just beyond was the Alhambra Theater, later named the ART. There appears to be ample parking spaces available in this picture, the problem today is we have too many cars.

Bargain Center Plans Store Outside Quincy

By PAUL HAROLD

Joseph Coppleman, president of the Bargain Center, angered by the city's "complete disregard" for his store's parking needs, said he would locate stores outside Quincy Center. He recently purchased a 40,000 square-foot store in Somerville.

July 15 - 21
37 Years Ago

Coppleman projected that the diversification outside the city would reduce customers coming to Quincy Center by a third and would eliminate a number of jobs at the Quincy store.

He concluded by saying that he had "given up hope of getting parking here."

PAINE SELECTED TO HEAD HOSPITAL

Paul Hurley, chairman of the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers, announced that Harlan Paine, age 47, was the board's choice for director. He said that Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa would make the appointment next week.

Former administrator of the Winchester Hospital, Paine was selected from a field of 60 applicants. He will replace Dr. Joseph Leone at a salary of $18,000.

COURT BLOCKS INCINERATOR AT QUARRY

The Superior Court permanently enjoined the city from building an incinerator at Hardwick's Quarry, noting that such a use was barred from the Residence B zoning. The court set aside the city's recent attempt to re-zone the land "city owned land."

City Solicitor Douglas Randall urged an appeal, but Mayor Della Chiesa said he would first meet with city councillors concerning an appeal.

Teachers' Support Appreciated

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I finally caught up with reading some newspapers which had accumulated. It was with great pleasure that I read the recent letter from Sal Giarratani -- "Teachers Get Too Little Respect." What he had to say was right on the mark and was especially significant coming from a member of another branch of public workers who know what respect means. From a retired teacher, many thanks for speaking up.

It would be helpful, it seems to me, if some of the public education reformers and some bashers spent some time in public school classrooms just to find out how much teachers accomplish despite the constant bashing.

The support of Quincy parents during the recent contract negotiations was very helpful and welcomed. It was fortunate that the School Committee and Mayor finally saw the light and made a more decent offer showing some respect and appreciation for the work that Quincy teachers do. Not that there isn't still room for improvement if we wish to help our teachers in this competitive world of today.

Dear Chief Frane:

Every presentation was most informative and educational. We cannot thank the presenters enough for the excellent job they did. "Hats Off" to the Quincy Police Department from the Town Brook House Seniors for being such caring individuals and always there to assist the seniors in Quincy.

We hope this wonderful program will continue and be enjoyed by many for years to come.

JFK Health Center Should Be Kept For Fire Station Site

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On June 28, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman spoke at the City Council meeting of the need of a new fire station in the very near future and the needs of our Fire Department as we approach the year 2000.

I am recommending the city owned property at 1120 Hancock St. which is the J.F.K. Health Center and was declared as "available for disposition" Dec. 21 1998 not be sold. This is a very valuable piece of land. Being a real-estate broker for many years I would say this piece of land is being sold far under the price it is worth.

I am a senator for the Silver Haired Legislature.

There is a great need for a new fire station. I live in a seniors building in Wollaston, and I feel the citizens in this city should be told how vital the fire department is to us, because they are always available in emergencies for seniors.

I am recommending that Plot 35-Plan 1126-1120 Hancock St. 24,535 Sq. Ft. be taken off the market and the proposed sale for $550,000 be withdrawn Aug. 2 at the City Council meeting; I also urge concerned citizens be present at this meeting and recommend this site be available for a new fire station, because of its location on a main street and in a downtown area. If this city-owned property is sold it will be a loss to the taxpayers.

A Most Enjoyable Program

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Tuesday, June 8, it was a sweltering 90 degree day, but the men and women from the South Shore Blind Center in Squantum Gardens were having a most enjoyable program.

Ms. Ellis Deaner, representative of Roche Bros. was giving them a very informative program about cooking for one or two as well as shortcuts to shopping and food preparation.

There was a question and answer period afterward followed by a delightful lunch that Ms. Deaner prepared for them.

She was presented with a bead necklace that one of the center's group made in appreciation for a lovely afternoon.

The senior group meets on Tuesday and Friday. They crochet baby blankets, string various bead necklaces, do chair exercises on Tuesdays and on Fridays they have a choral group called The Eye Openers.

Marie's Kitchen

Geri's Tomato Quiche

It was a shower to die for in Boston at one of the old BU apartments sometimes visited by presidents. The elegant surroundings and an actual parking space made it all the better.

And so it was when all of this delicious food came out of the gourmet type kitchen. It was our son-in-law's sister Joanne's shower and their mother Geri's recipe that is featured today in what I thought was the most delicious quiche ever!

Geri's Tomato Quiche
1 single pie crust
2 tablespoons margarine
1 large onion (chopped)
1 large tomato (chopped)
salt to taste
pinch of thyme
1/2 teaspoon tarragon, 1 teaspoon basil
3/4 grated Romano cheese
1 1/2 cup grated swiss cheese
½ cup milk
3 eggs
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 large tomato sliced

Line a 9" pie plate with the crust.

Saute the onion in the margarine for a couple of minutes. Add the chopped tomato, salt, herbs and simmer covered for five minutes. Cool as you do the following.

In a bowl, beat the eggs, milk soy and add the cheeses and the cool tomato mixture. Place the sliced tomato on the bottom of the pie crust, then pour the rest of the ingredients over it.

Bake in a 350 degree oven until firm (about 45 minutes).

(Marie D'Olimpio's cookbook with recipes featured in The Quincy Sun is available at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previte's Market on Sumner St., and Nanci's Barbershop, Elm St., Braintree.)

Arts In The Parks Program Starts Today

Arts in the Parks program will travel to a park location in each of the city's six wards.

The rest of the schedule:

- Tuesday, July 20, LaBrecque Field, Houghs Neck.
- Thursday, July 22, Bradford St. playground, South Quincy.
- Tuesday, July 27, Bishop Field, Montclair.
- Thursday, July 29, O'Rourke Field, West Quincy.
- Tuesday, Aug. 3, Beechwood Knoll School, Wollaston.

All shows begin at 6:30 p.m.

"These programs bring traditional recreational opportunities for the whole family directly to the neighborhoods. They are free, fun-filled special events to be enjoyed by all," said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

This year's show will feature two separate acts: the Dan Foley Juggling Show and the Sticky Skillet Swing Orchestra.

Dan Foley is a comic juggler who has traveled all over the world and has appeared in Fox's "The World's Funniest" television show. His juggling objects include lawn chairs, fruit and torches.

The Sticky Skillet Swing Orchestra is a seven-piece group featuring Boston's finest jazz musicians. They play a variety of music including Cab Calloway, Duke Ellington, Count Basie, and their own original tunes.

"Through the support of Mayor Sheets and the Quincy City Council, we are able to provide an entertaining show for the whole family. I encourage people to bring their families to our Arts in the Parks and enjoy the music, comedy, and an ice cream all in a beautiful setting. It's a great way to spend a summer night," said Park, Forestry and Cemetery Director Thomas Koch.

The park and recreation departments will provide refreshments at each show. Attendees are encouraged to bring their own lawn chair or blanket.

Mariano Pediatric Care Amendment Passes

State Rep. Ron Mariano announces that he was successful in passing an amendment to the House version of the managed care reform bill.

As the Massachusetts House of Representatives debated H4509 (An Act Protecting Patients Rights), Mariano moved to amend the bill to include a provision he had filed as a freestanding bill earlier this season.

Mariano's Amendment, known as the Pediatric Specialty Care Amendment ensures that children with medical conditions are treated appropriately. "Relatively few children require specialized care, but for those who do, it is imperative they have the ability to receive appropriate care from providers with training and experience in treating children, not adults," Mariano said.

From the floor of the House Chamber, Mariano urged his colleagues to adopt the amendment to "ensure that health plans provide children with access to pediatricians as primary care providers, and when needed - pediatric specialists who have training and expertise in treating children's special diseases, conditions, and disabilities."

Mariano asked his colleagues to consider their own families' position. "If your child had a heart condition, you would want your child to have access to pediatric cardiologist and a pediatric cardiovascular surgeon - providers whose careers have been devoted to treating such problems in children, not adults. The difference is significant.

"When a cardiologist treats an adult, it is most often for an acquired heart condition. Whereas, when a child needs treatment, it is for a congenital heart defect - a condition the child was born with."

Mariano's colleagues agreed with the merits of his proposal and when the roll call was taken; the amendment passed 159-0. When informed of the unanimous vote on his amendment, Mariano said. "This clearly is not a partisan issue. This issue is about doing what is right by our children and families."

On the federal level, both Congressional Democrats and Republicans have proposed managed care reform bills, which include guaranteed access to pediatric specialists for children.

After being engrossed by the House, the bill now heads to a joint conference committee to iron out the differences between the House and Senate versions. Mariano said he is is optimistic that the amendment will ultimately be included in the final version.

Also included in the managed care reform bill are: provisions to ensure that consumers of health services have continuity of care if for some reason their physician is no longer enrolled with that health plan; a strong external appeals process to allow patients to seek an objective third-party review of their grievances; and adoption of a prudent lay person standard which gives patients unimpeded access to emergency care if they feel their condition warrants such services.

Majors Ed, Florence Forster Begin Duties

For New Salvation Army Leaders Quincy Like Home

For Salvation Army Majors Ed Forster and Flo Forster, their new assignment to Quincy is a return home. They are natives of Somerville.

Major Ed Forster was the commanding officer of the Salvation Army in Coshocton County, Ohio, about a two-hour drive south of Cleveland, before he was appointed to the Quincy post, headquartered at 6 Baxter St., which is the base for a couple hundred members, including a 25-piece brass band which participates in worship services.

And before that, he served as editor-in-chief and literary secretary for the Salvation Army in Canada and Bermuda and was editor of the Army's national magazine, "The War Cry," for eight years. His wife served as the circulation director.

Salvation Army Majors Ed Forster and Flo Forster are the new community leaders in Quincy. The couple was in Coshocton County, Ohio, previously, but they both grew up in Somerville.

Prior to going to Canada, he was the dean of students at the Salvation Army's College for Officers' Training in Suffern, N.Y. He also has served at the Army's national headquarters outside Washington in Alexandria, Va., as assistant editor-in-chief.

The major has served as pastor and community leader in Pittsburgh, Pa., Kearny, N.J., and Manchester, N.H., during his career.

Seven years ago, he spent 11 weeks in London, at the International College for Salvation Army Officers, where he was elected president of that group.

He has published close to 1,000 magazine articles which have been published internationally during the past 30 years, and in 1996, he co-edited a book on additions, "Every Sober Day Is A Miracle." The book, he explained, includes 99 vignettes of individuals who overcame various addictions. The last page is blank, to allow the book owner to write his own story. The book, which has sold more than 60,000 copies, was published by a Christian publishing house, Tyndale Publishing.

"It was love at first sight," he said when he met his future wife. At the time, he was 10, and they were together in the Salvation Army Sunday school. "But it took a while before we began dating." They were married at age 22.

Flo Forster also graduated from Somerville High School and the Salvation Army's College for Officers' Training. "She earned her rank in her own right," he said.

In Quincy, she will be responsible for all the women's programs and will assist in preaching. She also will be involved in the League of Mercy, which offers visitation to those Salvationists in nursing homes and hospitals. She also will coordinate the Sunday school, Sunbeams and teen Bible class.

"When I learned of my appointment to Quincy, I said, 'It's great to be [going] home,'" said Major Forster. "I had no say about it. When I was appointed to Canada, it was a Thursday, and the next day I was on my way."

The average stay at a particular assignment is three years, but the Forsters are hoping they will stay five years or more.

But he's not close to retirement. Far from it. An athlete in his early 50s, he still plays ice hockey and in 1992 ran the Washington Marathon in three hours, 50 minutes. At the Boston Marathon this year, he met his daughter-in-law at Heartbreak Hill and unofficially ran the remaining distance.

The Forsters have four married children — a daughter, Joyce Hartshorn who is a Salvation Army officer in Niagara Falls; another daughter, Heather Huang, a social worker in New York City who is studying at Columbia University for her master's degree in social work; and identical twin sons who graduated from Yale University. Jeff Forster is studying for his master's degree at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, and Drew Forster taught Spanish at Lincoln-Sudbury High School and served as vice principal at Hopkinton High School before recently deciding to pursue full-time a campus ministry with the Salvation Army in Massachusetts. The Forsters are residing in Braintree at 27 Windemere Circle.

Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive July 27

Charlie and Trudy Peter will host the 15th Annual Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive July 27 from 2 to 8 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

The purpose of the blood drive, an American Red Cross drive, is two fold: to remember Chris Peter and to help the blood banks as Chris Peter did before his death.

Peter was killed in 1984 when a drunk driver hit the driver's side of Chris' truck. His friend in the passenger's seat survived, but Chris did not.

The drive will have homemade goodies and free child care while a parent donates. Also, St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Houghsneck is air-conditioned.

For more information call Charlie or Trudy at (617) 471-9586.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

ALBERT'S DISEASE

Albert's Disease is an inflammation of the bursa (fluid-filled sac) that sits in front of the spot where the Achilles tendon attaches to the heel bone. The Achilles tendon connects the calf muscle to the heel. Any condition that puts stress on this tendon (e.g., rheumatoid arthritis or stiff shoes) can cause Albert's Disease. A person with Albert's Disease will feel swelling and warmth at the back of the heel. To help reduce pain and inflammation, apply warm or cool compresses to the area. Taking aspirin or ibuprofen and keeping pressure off the area can also help the inflammation subside. If pain persists, a doctor may inject the inflamed bursa with a corticosteroid to relieve symptoms.

Early detection and correction of a foot problem like Albert's Disease offer patients the best access to complete health. Left untreated, bursitis and other foot problems can immobilize a person and discourage regular activity. We want to return you to, and keep you in good health. Improve your lifestyle by calling us at 617-472-3466. There is no good reason to keep on suffering from foot pain, not when experienced, compassionate care is available at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy.

P.S. The human body has more than 150 bursae to help cushion the movement between the bones, tendons, and muscles near the joints. The most common site of bursitis is the shoulder.

looking for someone to help set up the heavy pieces of wall and to dig holes for poles.

He is also hoping to find someone to donate a piece of black granite into which he can have the names of the remaining survivors inscribed.

Part of the memorial is a compilation of children's writings, poems and Holocaust drawings. Ezickson is in the process of triple laminating the pieces, and mounting them on slate. All pieces will be mounted on a gray wall.

In his mind, he sees adding significant artifacts such as children's shoes piled high, symbolizing the children who were gassed at concentration camps.

He also plans to have all writings appear in braille, as do many of the exhibits presently displayed on the strip of land.

In addition, he'd like to create a timeline from 1933-1945 on a portion of the memorial, so that those not familiar with what happened during World War II will have a dateline to follow.

Ezickson is aware he may run into opposition in erecting a reminder of the Holocaust.

"Some people say, 'David, you're looking for trouble putting this up,'" says Ezickson. He disagrees. Unperturbed, he responds, "If they tear it down it shows their ignorance, and we'll just fix it again."

Plans for the memorial have gone through a series of changes. According to Ezickson, the Mayor of Jerusalem was planning to help build a Peace Park here, and was going to try to import stone for the memorial. He wanted to create a catalyst for peace, but the plans fell through, and Ezickson continued with the memorial on his own.

"My thanks have to go out to three teachers in particular, and the students at Sterling Middle School," says Ezickson. "Paula Campbell, Sandra McNiece and Nicole Cobb are all teachers who teach about the Holocaust at the middle school."

He says there were also some teachers who helped out with the project at Atlantic Middle School.

In the future, Ezickson hopes to work toward building greater understanding between the numerous religious communities in Quincy by providing a forum whereby the different religious factions share information about each other. He for one would like to learn about the Christian season of Advent.

Ezickson, who was recently appointed to the Human Rights Commission, asks anyone interested in helping out on the Holocaust memorial project, to contact him at 471-9539.

And, he does need some help.

"MAN'S HUMANITY" exhibit with a tribute to John Quincy Adams was established some time ago by David Ezickson just a few feet from his planned "Man's Inhumanity To Man" exhibit and Holocaust Memorial.

Siciliano, Staff Attend State Hurricane Preparedness Session

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of the city's office of emergency management, and five staff members represented Quincy at a hurricane preparedness exercise yesterday (Wednesday) at the Framingham headquarters of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

Others from Quincy included Scott Mercurio, Stephen Pasquale, Brian Wilkosky, Christopher George and Dale Hayden.

The two-day training program involved representatives from federal, state, local governments as well as members of various volunteer agencies that would be called upon during a storm emergency.

For this program, held during Massachusetts Preparedness Week, the storm has been dubbed "Hurricane Janice."

Today, MEMA and the New England Electric System is co-sponsoring a hurricane awareness conference for all the public utilities at the Marriott Hotel in Westborough.

Last year, 10 hurricanes and four tropical storms occurred the Atlantic, and weather experts are predicting another active hurricane season this year. The Atlantic hurricane season began June 1 and extends through Nov. 30.

In his proclamation designating this week as Massachusetts Hurricane Preparedness Week, Gov. Paul Cellucci reminded all of the $1 billion in damage sustained during Hurricane Bob in 1991. Other storms threaten lives and property too. Flash floods, coastal erosion and power outages during and after hurricanes lead to a further burden on residents.

By learning emergency procedures and stocking necessary supplies useful in the event of a hurricane, citizens can mitigate damage, alleviate suffering and save lives, he said.

Conway Remains State's Largest Independent

Jack Conway and Company continues to be the largest independently owned real estate brokerage company in Massachusetts, according to annual ratings published by Real Trends magazine of Colorado.

Conway was 125th among all U.S. companies.

The 600-person Conway Family Group, including Quincy, is headquartered in Norwell, and h as 36 offices from Boston throughout the South Shore, Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod.

Conway's recent 30-second television commercial won a national award from MediaOne and also topped the Vancouver, Wash.-based "Top Of Mind Awareness (TOMA)" charts for name recognition in much of Eastern Massachusetts.

Several other Massachusetts companies finished higher in the ratings, but were not independents. The Hunneman Company was sold to NRT Corp. of Parsippany, N.J., Carlson Real Estate was sold to GMAC and DeWolfe New England is a publicly held stock company.

Jack Conway and Company was founded in 1957 in Hingham Square by one-time Boston sportswriter Jack Conway, who is still chairman and owner of the firm. The company completed $725 million in sales in 1998.

Exterior Accents Add Value To A Home

(NAPS)—Many homeowners only consider landscaping and painting projects to add curb appeal and value to their homes, but increasing a home's value does not have to be expensive or maintenance intensive.

Landscaping projects provide dramatic results to a home's exterior, but require lots of time to maintain and new expenses every year. However, simple exterior accents like shutters and door surrounds are effective architectural and decorating tools without maintenance or future expense. Shutters, window headers, columns, and door surrounds add to a home's charm and character while adding to its value.

Consider these ideas:

• Windows play a major factor in the overall appearance of a home. Adding shutters makes windows look more prominent, while window headers provide a more finished look.

• The front door or entryway makes a crucial first impression. Liven up this dull facade and create a more inviting look by framing entryways with a door surround. Colonial columns can be easily installed to provide depth and dimension with subtle elegance. Columns can wrap around existing posts making it simple to give a quick and easy facelift.

In the past, adding exterior accents was a major renovation project, but not anymore. Today's exterior decor products can be installed in minutes to almost any siding, including brick, aluminum, vinyl, stucco, and wood. Exterior decor products look great and are virtually maintenance free. For a free product catalog, call Builders Edge at (800) 350-1706.

Thomas MacKay, president of the Building and Construction Trades Council, had brought the complaint May 19, and a special clerk-magistrate found there was sufficient evidence to issue a complaint. The charge is a misdemeanor which carries a penalty of two years in jail or a $3,000 fine or both.

The union also filed a similar complaint with the state Ethics Commission last October, but no ruling has yet been made. Because Ethics Commission matters are confidential, a spokesman would neither confirm nor deny it was conducting an investigation.

"We will still be exploring the area today and tomorrow," Keating said Tuesday.

The area where the state troopers have been searching has been difficult to access, he said. "It's deeply recessed, like a cave, about 30 feet by 50 feet, extremely hard to get at," said Keating.

"It couldn't be examined by TV cameras or divers, but that's the primary location, where our information [led us]," he said.

The troopers spent several hours Tuesday searching the area. "It's physically difficult and dangerous," said Keating. The mountains of debris could dislodge and topple on them, he said. "It hasn't been easy."

Earlier, the troopers employed a second German shepherd to search for the body. Keating said the dog sustained lacerations fro the debris on the floor of the quarry as well as burns from the unidentified solvents. The dog is all right now, he added

The second step, Keating said, is for him to meet with officials from the Metropolitan District Commission, which owns the quarry, the MDC engineers and the contractor, J.F. Beechwood Seeks Binoculars For Bird Watching Program

Beechwood on the Bay is seeking help from the community for Project WOW, Watching On Wings.

"Project WOW is a special part of the children's summer studies" for the youngsters attending Summer Kamps at Beechwood on the Bay, said Diana Stacey, director of children's services.

"The children are fascinated by the osprey and other birds native to our area," said Stacey. "They're eager to learn more — thus the need for binoculars and magnifying glasses."

With the binoculars and magnifying glasses, the children can observe birds that fly over the marsh, bay and shore, she said.

Citizens Bank Branch At North Quincy Shaw's Will Close Saturday

The Citizens Bank branch inside Shaw's Supermarket in North Quincy will close Saturday when Shaw's closes in preparation for the takeover by Victory Super Market.

"We're closing for safety reasons," said Kris Danna, a Citizens public information officer.

She said there are four Citizens Bank branches affected by the acquisition of the Star Market chain by Shaw's. In addition to its North Quincy branch, its branch inside the Star Market in Norwell also is affected.

"Because of our presence in Quincy," Danna continued, "it's so heavy, we have a lot of options."

In addition to the standalone branch at 371 Hancock St., there are other branches in Quincy Point on Washington Street, in South Quincy on Franklin Street and an in-store branch at the Star Market 130 Granite St, plus the regional headquarters at 1200 Hancock St.

If someone is used to do Sunday banking, he/she could go to the branch at Star Market on Sunday, said Danna.

Danna said Citizens wants to maintain its presence at the new Victory Super Market when it reopens. However, she said she did not know when that would occur.

Victory Supermarket president Arthur "Jay" DiGeronimo Jr. said previously Shaw's would close July 17, and Victory would take possession of the store July 24.

On July 26, Victory personnel will accept applications for employment and schedule interviews for prospective staff.

DiGeronimo said the store would be closed for an undetermined amount of time while the store undergoes $1.5 million worth of renovations, placing "a personal touch" to the three-year-old store.

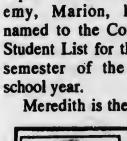
94-Year-Old Volunteer, 49 Others Honored At Allerton House

Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy recently hosted a buffet luncheon for their 50 volunteers ranging in age from 15 to 94 years.

Ester Gizzarelli, 94, of Wollaston, was honored as the eldest volunteer. For the last three years, she has consistently volunteered her time throughout the year by engaging the residents of Allerton House in crafting holiday favors. She also volunteers her time to the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association.

"Ester is an asset to our group of volunteers," said Sarah Anne Frazier, Director of Resident Services. "The fact that her age has no barrier on her active lifestyle is motivating to the other volunteers, but most importantly to the residents who really enjoy her and look forward to her visits."



Allerton House at Hancock Park is an 42-assisted living residence owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, who this year celebrates 50 years of being the most trusted name in senior and rehabilitative healthcare services on the South Shore.

SENIOR LIVING

FOOD GUIDE FOR THE ELDERLY

Many of the ailments that afflict the elderly are (in)directly caused by poor food choices. Thus, the Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University has devised a food guide pyramid for Americans over 70. At its foundation are eight 8-ounce daily servings of water, without which blood pressure may fall dangerously low, kidney function may be compromised, and constipation may become chronic. The next level contains six or more daily servings of (fiber-rich) grain-based foods. "Then come (fiber-rich) fruits and vegetables, followed by three servings of low-fat dairy products and two or more servings of meat, poultry, fish, beans or nuts. At the top of the pyramid stand spare amounts of fats, oils and sweets.

While it is very difficult to do, it's important to discuss what your wishes are with your adult children. Unless you have made your requests known, those decisions may be made for you if and when such a need arises. At Marina Place, a senior living residence, we offer everything from social and cultural programs to the personal care assistance you require. For gracious living in a scenic seaside setting, visit us at Four Seaport Drive. Phone: 617-770-3264.

P.S. The scientists who developed the food pyramid for those over age 70 also recommend that the elderly take calcium, vitamin D, and B-12 in supplement form to fulfill their nutritional needs.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Fitness For The Frazzled

Calcium Key For Strong Bones, Workout Program

New England plays host to several premium sporting events this summer. Professional baseball, golf, soccer, and tennis will draw thousands to competitions between the best of the best.

Whether watching all-stars fielding on the diamond, golfers teeing off on the green, soccer players duking it out on the field, or tennis players volleying on the court, one is sure to be inspired to exercise.

To make sure your body can keep up with your workout program, eat a healthy diet like the pros. Put calcium at the top of the meal plan to keep your bones in competitive shape. In fact, not getting enough calcium can pose more of a health threat than Americans realize. According to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, osteoporosis, a bone-thinning disease, is a major health threat for 28 million Americans, 80 percent of whom are women.

Professional athletes and weekend warriors alike benefit from a combination of exercise and good eating habits. But taste is also important. New England Diary Promotion Board recommends athletes keep cheese on the training table to boost both calcium and flavor.

To boost the benefits of physical activity, it's important to exercise for at least 30 minutes on most or all days of the week. (You don't have to work out as much as the pros do.). Fitness experts at the American Heart Association, the American College of Sports Medicine and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention say that the 30 minutes of daily activity can be divided into as many as three, 10-minute segments.

According to the most recent Surgeon General's Report on Physical Activity and Health, more than 60 percent of adults do not achieve the recommended amount of regular physical activity and 25 percent of adults are not active at all.

"Since we live in such a fast-paced society, it's harder to find the time to devote to physical activities," says Ruth Carey, registered dietitian and fitness expert. "People think of exercise as being too consuming, but the benefits from 30 minutes of daily physical activity can make anyone feel better and healthier. It is never too late to begin a daily exercise regimen."

The Physical Advantage

People at any age benefit from physical activity. Exercise helps you maintain a healthy weight, makes you feel better and boosts your immune system. According to a recent study conducted by researchers at the Cooper Institute of Aerobics Research, everyday activities such as raking leaves and climbing stairs can be as effective as a structured workout to improve fitness or heart and lungs.

It's important to remember that physical activity does not need to be strenuous in order to achieve health benefits. Actually, according to the Surgeon General's Report on Physical Activity and Health, men and women of all ages benefit from a moderate amount of daily physical activity because a little is better than nothing at all.

Exercise And Calcium: A Strong Combination

Eating a calcium-rich, all-star diet -- with a spotlight on cheese -- is the foundation for strong, healthy bones, while weight-bearing exercises helps maintain strong bones. "Incorporated into your daily meals, a single serving of cheese can infuse your diet with 20 percent of the recommended daily allowance for calcium," says Carey. "By simply adding a handful of shredded cheese to your favorite salad or pasta dish, you can enhance the flavor of the meal, boost calcium and help strengthen your bones all at the same time."

New England Dairy Promotion Board recommends "teeing off" lunch with a "Power Club" sandwich (see recipe with story) to boost calcium intake and give you energy for a lunchtime workout. The double-decker sandwich has spinach, shredded carrots, mushrooms, sprouts, and cheddar cheese on whole wheat bread. A cold fat free milk will benefit bones even more.

To further improve bone health, try weight-bearing or strength training exercises like running, walking, aerobics and weight-lifting. Bones are forced to support weight and this makes them stronger.

Weight-bearing exercises appear to stimulate bone formation and strengthen muscles that help support bones. Recent published reports state regular weight-bearing exercise can boost bone density 3 to 5 percent a year. Also, daily physical activity improves balance, strength and coordination, which helps reduce the risk of falls and bone injuries.

Furthermore, there are other options if you are looking for something completely different. "If you are tired of running outside or on the treadmill at your local gym, energize your workout by taking an invigorating exercise class like kickboxing or spinning," Carey suggests. "They are part of the latest exercise 'craze,' and the classes will definitely add a new twist to a monotonous exercise regimen."

POWER CLUB

HIGH HEELS

Did you ever wonder what the effects of heel height on your shoes are on the rest of your body? The following brief review may give you some answers.

When a person stands barefoot, a line going from the head to the foot creates a 90 degree angle with the floor. As you increase the height of the heel, the body tilts forward reducing that angle to as low as 55 degrees if the height of the heel is three inches. A person cannot walk this way lurching forward. Therefore compensation has to occur. This means, subconsciously, adjustments will occur that involve the ankle, knee, hip, spine and head. You can imagine that if these adjustments continue for a long period of time, strains and stresses will occur. Injuries will not be far behind.

The height of the heel also changes where body weight falls on the foot itself, ball vs. heel. This alteration affects the gait cycle itself and leads to unusual shoe wear, and, for example, shortening of the Achilles tendon and the calf muscles. In summary, a zero heel height would be ideal and probably would reduce many problems.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Local Skippers Fare Well In Lipton Cup

More than 1,000 sailors raced in the 13th Annual Lipton Cup Regatta at Squantum Yacht Club last weekend, and there were some Quincy natives who were able to etch their names on the trophy.

Joe Valante and Robert Bergstedt, sailing their Hobie 21, won the mulithull race, which served as the qualifier for the USSA Area A National Championships later this summer.

Dave Fortier and Gretchen Hardy of Maine, who sailed Prindle 18, came in second with Connecticut's Marc and Jody Marzialo following in the third spot.

Bonnie Marcel of Wollaston was neck-to-neck in the Hustler Division before taking home the crown.

In the PHRF class, Quincy's Ralph DiMattia won the A Fleet Division. Hingham's Bill Collins finished first in the D Fleet and Hull's Bill McLearn won the E Fleet.

Quincy's Peter Dolbec won the Optimist White race while Robbie Dolbec finished second in the Optimist Blue Class, won by Ben Proctor of Scituate.

Wollaston's Meaghan and Patrick Morrissey came in third in Optimist Blue and third in Optimist White, respectively.

Hingham's Finely Merrill cruised to a win in the Optimist Green Fleet, followed by Teddy Mellors and Stephen Morris, also of Hingham.

Thirty-five Optimists competed in four age classes, ranging from the age of 10 to 80. And it was veteran yacht racer Lee Van Gernert, 80, who restored an Indian to win that class.

Chrisom Named North Football Coach

Peter Chrisom, Jr. has been named the new head football coach for the North Quincy High School Red Raiders.

Chrisom is the son of Peter Chrisom, who retired last year as North Quincy's principal.

Chrisom replaces Kenneth McPhee, who stepped down earlier this year after 18 years at the helm to become the Social Health Coordinator for Quincy Public Schools.

"It's quite a feeling," said Chrisom, who served as an assistant under McPhee since 1986. "I have some big shoes to follow, but I'm excited and looking forward to it.

"I was there a long time. I felt I needed a change and when this opportunity came about I went after it."

Chrisom, 44, began his coaching career at North Quincy in 1984 as the assistant coach of girls indoor and outdoor track. Before North Quincy, Chrisom was the assistant football coach at Quincy ('85), Westwood ('84) and Sharon ('83).

Chrisom plans on keeping North Quincy's rich tradition alive.

"I'm going to keep it in line the best I can," said Chrisom. "I've been here a while so I have an idea of what is expected."

Chrisom will also leave his physical education teaching job to take McPhee's former position as Dean of Students. And he is still undecided about returning as the head coach of the boys indoor and outdoor track team.

As for this season, Chrisom expects to field a competitive team.

"We're a very young team," said Chrisom. "I'm looking forward to this year. We have some veteran starters coming back."

Proceeds Benefit Quincy Elder Services Transportation

18th Annual Broom Classic 'The Best Ever'

The 18th Annual Broom Classic was recently held at Presidents Golf Course with the team of Walter Hannon, III, Ken Furfari, Al Freeman and Ged Dahlquist taking home the crown.

All proceeds from the tournament went to the Quincy Elder Services Transportation program which provides rides to senior citizens for medical appointments.

"It was very successful," said Brian Buckley, director of the Quincy Elder Services. "It was the best we've had so far."

The proceeds raised are dedicated in the name of someone within the Broom Circle, and this year David C. Comis, who past away within the last year, received the honor.

Eighty players participated in this year's event, which began with the costume parade festivities.

In the parade the golfers arrived at the first tee dressed with a theme of College Logo's and Legends. Al Bortolotti won the costume contest dressed as a Notre Dame cheerleader.

The Hannon team finished with a 12 under score of 58 to capture the championship. Furfari's wedge to six inches of the cup on the ninth hole sparked his crew, and they never looked back.

Surge Puts Team In Playoff Picture

Morrisette Reels Off Five Straight Victories

By CHRIS POISSON

The fireworks may have ended July fourth weekend, but the Morrisette American Legion baseball team has just started to catch fire.

Morrisette (9-8) beat Canton, 5-3, Monday night at Canton High School and now has reeled off five straight wins to climb over the .500 mark and put itself in the playoff picture.

"We've done well," said manager Ray Catteneo. "We're playing as a team now and attitudes have changed. That's what winning does for you."

Matt McCann (2-4-1) picked up his second straight win, as he went the distance, allowing seven hits and two runs. McCann had pitched well before the winning streak but wasn't getting the support from his teammates. But that has changed.

Rob Celata went 3 for 3 with two RBIs and two runs scored, while Chris Bregoli and John Gavin each stroked triples.

Morrisette has two games, and the remainder of the July 2 game against West Roxbury, remaining in the regular season, and needs to win at least one to have a legitimate shot at the postseason, which is scheduled to start Friday. Morrisette played games while the paper was in print (West Roxbury Tuesday and Milton Wednesday).

"It was a good time to put it together," said Cattaneo. "It's good to win games at the end of the season, but you wonder how many you can lose before you start to win."

The recent surge began July 7 when Morrisette swept a double-header, beating Milton 15-3 and Quincy 8-3 in the nightcap.

Celata picked up the win against Milton. He pitched six innings, yielding four hits and two runs while punching out 12. Celata contributed at the plate, going 2 for 4 with three RBIs.

Brian Walker and Shawn Manning had three hits apiece, and Joe Flynn (three RBIs) and Joe Thorley (two RBIs) provided some spark with their bats.

Against rival Quincy, McCann notched his first victory of the year as he struck out 10 in seven innings. Flynn went 2 for 2 with an RBI and Gavin recorded two RBIs on walks with the bases loaded.

Frank Alibrandi had two hits and an RBI for Quincy.

The following night, Morrisette topped Quincy again, 7-4, in a rematch. Bregoli, a shortstop who has earned a few starts, tossed a complete game, allowing six hits and two runs with five strikeouts.

Walker went 2 for 4, Manning 2 for 3, Gavin 2 for 4 with a triple and Keith Doherty had two RBIs.

Kevin Walsh picked up the loss for Quincy. He allowed only four hits but he walked seven and allowed six runs in five innings.

And in the 6-4 win against Randolph last Friday, it was Doherty who shined on the hill for Morrisette. He went the distance, giving up seven hits and four runs while striking out eight.

240 Youngsters Compete In Hersey Track, Field

Two hundred forty youngsters competed in the 22nd Annual Hershey's National Track and Field local meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department.

The boys and girls, ages 9-14, competed in the long jump, softball throw, 50 meter dash, 100 meter dash, 400 meter dash, 4x100 relay, 800 meter run, and 1600 meter run in three separate age groups.

The Hershey's Program is the largest youth sports program of its kind in the United States. It was developed to offer a quality recreational activity, where children have fun and are introduced to physical fitness through basic track and field events.

The winners of the Quincy meet will have their times or distances compared to boys and girls who compete in some 70 other meets state wide. The top 16 in each event will be invited to compete in the state championship to be held Friday, July 16, at Braintree High School.

The winners of the state meet will have their time and distances compared with other New England State Champions and the tip qualifiers will go to the National Championship in Hershey Park, PA. All expenses for national qualifiers are paid by Hershey Park, and no fee are charged at any level.

Recreation Director Barry Welch notes that "volunteers are the heart of the program" and thanked the work of Quincy Track Club Director Geoffrey Hennessy for his commitment to this program, as well as the members of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff who officiated at the meet.

Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge Accepting Entries

The Ward 5 Community Association, MDC Wollaston Beach Operations, Tony's Clam Shop, and Matilda's Boardwalk Cafe will sponsor the second annual Wollaston Beach Challenge Saturday, Aug. 21 at 10 a.m. on Wollaston Beach.

To enter a team in this year's tournament, contact Doug Gutro at 328-7982 or Glen McAuliffe of Wollaston Beach Operations at 773-7954.

Teams must consist of a minimum of six players and a maximum of eight. There must be an even number of male and female players on each team. Six players per team will be allowed on the court during the day. Teams must wear similar colored shirts on the day of the tournament.

Last year's tournament saw team sponsors range from community organizations, elected officials, political candidates, and groups of friends.

Tournament winners will win prizes including Wollaston Beach baseball caps and other summer-related gear.

"This tournament is for all of those average athletes who enjoy getting together with friends for a little exercise, some friendly competition, and a fun day at the beach," said Doug Gutro, president of the Ward 5 Community Association. "This isn't Pro-Am volleyball. Why not put together some friends and give it a shot."

The tournament will be a double elimination format which will allow each team a minimum of two games. Entry fee is $75 per team.

Proceeds from the Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will be put toward educational efforts and activities to promote Wollaston Beach.

"We want to create activities that will bring friends and families back to Wollaston Beach and make it a pleasurable experience," added Gutro.

DAY LIGHTS

It may seem contradictory to see automobiles driving along during daylight hours with their headlights on. Daytime running lights, however, do make sense in terms of safety by making vehicles more conspicuous. The lights have been mandatory on new cars in Canada since the beginning of the decade, and most Scandanavian nations have been using them for up to two decades. These northern-latitude countries were the first to adopt daytime running lights because they work best in the dim light associated with long twighlight. In any case, several studies from Europe, Canada and this country have shown that daytime running lights probably help reduce daytime multi-car crashes. Thus, increasing numbers of car makers are outfitting their products with this feature.

Our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency, whether it is something as simple as replacing a headlight, to more complex engine work. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. Count on us for propane for grills, mobile homes and converted vehicles. We are 'A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer.'

HINT: The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety estimates that daytime running lights could help avert hundreds of thousands of collisions each year.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Courtesy indicates good manners. It involves equal consideration for all people alike, regardless of status or importance . . . or area or location. And this certainly holds true on streets and highways. Quite often, good manners are shelved and ignored in the driving habits of people who otherwise are fairly well-mannered . . . You see this in drivers squealing cars past slower motorists . . . You see it in the blasting of horns the second the light turns green . . . You see it in gestures and words of retaliation when bad manners of one induces bad manners in another. Bad manners probably cause as many accidents in driving as any other cause.

On holiday week-ends, especially when traffic is heavy, good driving manners are really needed . . . Giving the other fellow a break by means of common courtesy can definitely reduce traffic accidents which cause so much human misery - and property damage. Courtesy on the road has NEVER - nor will it ever degrade a driver . . .

How courteous a driver are you?

CRITIC'S CORNER

AUSTIN POWERS: THE SPY WHO SHAGGED ME – He's ba-a-ack! Mike Myers, the comedic genius behind this sequel, reprises his role as the James Bond-like character of Austin Powers.

This time, Powers has traveled back in time to the psychedelic '60s, complete with outlandish clothes, hair, etc. It's a time of "free love," and Powers is certainly enjoying that!

Dr. Evil (Myers) has stolen Austin's libido in an effort to thwart the super-spy from interfering with Evil's plans for world domination. Joining Powers in his journey back to stop this is the winsome Felicity Shagwell (Heather Graham), a CIA agent. Dr. Evil's able partner-in-crime is Fras Farbissina (Mindy Sterling), a shrew if ever there was one.

Added to Myers' diversity of roles is the 500-pound Fat Bastard. He's a rude, crude Scotsman in full kilt regalia. Believe me, the fat jokes abound. At times, this borders on overkill, but you'll find yourself laughing along anyway.

Besides being a parody of the '60s-era Bond films, the flick also takes some nice comedic swipes at our own popular culture, with everything from Starbucks, "The Jerry Springer Show," and "Star Wars" taking big hits. The Springer episode in particular is hilarious. Scott Evil (Seth Green) is reunited with his dad, Dr. Evil. Predictably, the two wind up tossing chairs and bleeping with the best (?) of Springer's guests, real and imagined.

All in all, you really have to suspend your intellect to enjoy this one. It's nothing more than a sophomoric romp. However, thanks to the huge talents of Mike Myers himself, it works. Rated PG-13, it's not for the younger kiddies.

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Check your reflexes before you venture out to face the world. The obstacles in your path can only be maneuvered by a shrewd and experienced navigator.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Make sure your foundations are sturdy before you move on to more lofty goals. Be prepared to answer intelligent questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) If you put your evidence and your research on the table, your product may sell itself. If it doesn't, know when and where to apply pressure.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Changes made slowly and steadily tend to last longer than changes made in haste. Keep this fact in mind as you try to change your life.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Everyone vies for a few minutes of your time. It is a valuable commodity, but it's only as golden as the actions of the owner.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Sometimes an excess of information makes it impossible to reach conclusions or decisions. Seek a second or third opinion if it will make your burden easier.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Everything and everyone is yours for the taking at this time. Because of this fact, you must decide carefully what – and whom – you need to pursue.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Dollar signs and question marks pop up everywhere, distracting you and obscuring your vision. Although your net worth is important, do not let it become your sole focus.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you have been waiting to confront someone, set up a meeting with them now. You are ready to defend yourself without starting a fight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Change your pace or your style in order to match everyone else. Originality is usually an asset, but at this time, it could hinder your progress.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You are more than ever an object of beauty and enjoyment. You make your surroundings more comfortable and luxurious simply by being present.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Does your body seem to be flawed, weak and pained? Recognize that a serious bout of hypochondria may be the most major thing you're suffering from.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: The progression and improvement of humanity is a task to which you are quite willing to dedicate much of your life. Change, you believe, is absolutely necessary and should not be feared. Although your explorer's attitude makes some people nervous, they can't deny that you have their best interests in mind.

Sheets To Host Mayors, Business Conference

By MARILYN JACKSON

Several Canadian businesses have expressed interest in attending the 1999 annual conference of the Southeastern Massachusetts Atlantic Canada Association, to be hosted by Mayor James Sheets.

"I'm really surprised at the numbers," said Helen Murphy of the mayor's staff, who is working with Rhonda Merrill, director of tourism and special events, coordinating the three-day program, which begins Aug. 4.

Murphy said businesses from Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Labrador, as well as several mayors from southeastern Massachusetts are expected to attend.

In the past, mayors' conferences have been held in Quincy, but the program consisted of meetings in the morning, followed by a luncheon, she said.

Registration at the Adams Inn begins Wednesday, Aug. 4, and the Quincy Partnership will hold a welcoming reception and, by invitation, a clambake and an evening of entertainment.

The next day's program begins with a mayor's welcome and a continental breakfast at the Landing at the Adams Inn.

Businessman Edward Keohane, who is a member of the Quincy Partnership and Quincy 2000, will host a trolley tour for attendees, pointing out the growth and history of Quincy. Stops will include a visit to the Quarry Hills golf course which is under development, Marina Bay and a couple of other businesses in the city.

There's so much to show off, said Murphy, noting that many nationally and internationally known businesses, like Howard Johnson Company and Dunkin' Donuts, started in Quincy.

And, Quincy's historical heritage as the City of Presidents is an attraction as well.

Quincy developer Peter O'Connell will be the keynote speaker at the luncheon Aug. 5, to be held at the Neighborhood Club. He will discuss "Government and Business Working Together."

That evening an international business session will be held, featuring Canadian Consul General Mary Clancy, at Hot Water-Marina Bay. This event is by invitation also, due to limited space, Murphy said. Richard Terrazas, president of the New England-Canada Business Council, will deliver opening remarks.

On Aug. 6, Dr. Anthony Cicerone, director of Canadian studies at Bridgewater State College, will summarize the discussions of the previous meetings. Before adjourning, planning for the Year 2000 conference will begin.

Afterwards, a business-to-business table top exchange of information will be held at the Tent at Adams Inn, hosted by the Quincy 2000 Corporation and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Registration fees are $65 for delegates and $35 for guests; checks should be made payable to the City of Quincy — SEMACA Conference and mailed to the Mayor's Office, City of Quincy, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Accommodations at the Adams Inn, which is a Best Western facility, are available at a discount. Call 1-800-368-4012 or 1-617-328-1500 for further information.

For further information about the conference, call Dr. Anthony Cicerone, executive director, SEMACA, at 1-508-697-1716, ext. 2288, or e-mail him at cicerone@bridgew.edu.

PROTECTING THE PUBLIC, the Quincy Police Department has added to its marine patrol a Kawasaki 1100 Jet Ski, donated by South Shore Motor Sports of Franklin Street. Showing off the new equipment are, in the foreground, Officers James Silcox and Robert Gillan, and in the back, Capt. Donald Riley, commander of the unit, and Gray Shumate, a sales representative of South Shore Motor Sports.

Jet Ski Donated To Police Marine Unit

Following in the wake of the State Police's marine unit, the Quincy police department has added a fully equipped Jet Ski to its marine unit which also includes two patrol boats.

The patrol boats are capable of responding to deep water incidents, but the Jet Ski can respond rapidly to incidents in shallow water as well as patrol environmentally sensitive marshy areas.

The Jet Ski includes first responder emergency medical equipment.

Mark Brewster of South Shore Motor Sports at 94 Franklin St., offered to assist the police department's marine unit and arranged for Kawasaki Motors of America to loan a Kawasaki 1100 Jet Ski on an annual basis.

Considering the mobility of a Jet Ski, the police department plans to have the Jet Ski on station for all marine events such as the Quincy Bay Race Week in August.

Capt. Donald J. Riley is the commanding officer of the marine unit. Others assigned to the marine patrol include Lt. James McNeil and Sgt. Dan Kennedy.

The police said the new piece of equipment would be invaluable, since Quincy has 27 miles of coastline, ranging from deep-draft shipping lanes to tidal mud flats.

Keating, Police Bring Quincy Point Together

Dozens of leaders and members of the Quincy Point neighborhood recently turned out to support the Islamic Center of New England after the religious center recently experienced problems with a small handful of youngsters in the neighborhood.

District Attorney Bill Keating, with the co-sponsorship of Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane and city government, brought together about three dozen members of the Quincy Point Community, police and city officials and members of the Islamic Center to talk through the recent incidents.

The meeting brought members of the Islamic Center together with neighbors, local high school students. It also included a number of Quincy Point senior citizens - neighbors who recognize that the neighborhood's present growing pains are no different than the ones they or their Irish, Jewish, or Italian parents felt fifty years ago.

"Growing pains are natural for any neighborhood that is changing," Keating said following the meeting. "Bringing together people of all ages to make intergenerational connections in a constructive atmosphere like this, where they can talk and listen to each other, will hopefully drown out the voices of those few who don't understand, or who feel threatened by it."

In addition to the Islamic Center, Quincy Point draws cultural diversity from a Buddhist temple, a Jewish synagogue and numerous Protestant and Catholic churches.

City Councilors Paul Harold and Dan Raymondi attended, as did the Islamic Center's Imam Talal Eid and several members of his congregation.

"This is not a substitution for prosecuting those who commit crimes, but it may well accomplish more," said Keating, who organized the event after joining the Quincy Police investigation of the problems at the Islamic Center.

The June 22 meeting will be the first of many meetings of this group. Neighborhood members showed overwhelming support to make this a working group to promote understanding and community in Quincy Point.

Foster Grandparents Needed

Volunteers are needed for the ABCD Foster Grandparent Program which is expanding into Quincy, according to Ruth Blackman.

The foster grandparent project is a program of Action for Boston Community Development Inc.

This is a great program which can help build up a good relationship between seniors and children at day care centers or Head Start programs and, when school resumes, in the classroom, according to Blackman.

Volunteers must be 55 years of age or over and be able to commit to 20 hours a week. Also, foster grandparents enjoy the children and can receive a non-taxable stipend as well as a fee to cover transportation costs.

For more information or to apply, call Linda Yip at 617-357-6000, ext. 341 or Ruth Blackman at ext. 340.

Swimming Pool Could Be Converted Into Youth Center

erastion.

Linda Stice, a member of the school committee who heads the Commission on the Family, welcomed the suggestion but said a lot of ground work needs to be done before a project like a teen center could be accomplished.

She said she learned of Father Keane's proposal just that morning of the GBIO meeting.

"The city has community block grant funds that can give money to special programs," said Stice.

Developing a teen center is not a far-fetched notion, she said. The federal money administered by the city can be given to a great many small social service agencies and youth programs, she added.

In fact, Teen Get-Away received funds through community block grants.

Jo-Ann Bragg, executive director of Teen Get-Away and another school committee member spearheaded efforts in 1991 to establish a youth center. After three years' work, Teen Get-Away became a reality.

Bragg said she received initial funding from Impact Quincy and the Harold Brooks Foundation, before she received funds from the city through block grants.

JO-ANN BRAGG

LINDA STICE

She said those funds comprised about 25 percent of the Teen Get-Away budget.

Last month, Teen-Get-Away announced it had severed its affiliation with the South Shore YMCA's Quincy facility which offered programs for teens on Saturday nights, while Quincy Community United Methodist Church provided teen programs on Friday nights. Beginning this fall, the Y instead will host teen nights on both Friday and Saturday, featuring basketball, swimming, fitness programs, dances, field trips and occasional guest speakers.

But Teen Get-Away has not dissolved, said Bragg. "We've met with another organization that is looking to open a teen center. We told them what we did and what we didn't do." She declined to identify the group at this time.

"They are kind of where we were in 1991," she said. "They don't have a home [for a teen center], but perhaps we can get together in a merger or can lend our name," said Bragg.

Stice said the first question she has is what kind of funding would be available.

"The consensus is that kids need wholesome, safe, fun places to go so they won't get into trouble, and I would support any responsible effort to provide any kind of those activities," said Stice.

"Kids and parents everywhere are the same. They want the best for their children — safe neighborhoods, good schools, enough activites to keep them occupied in a safe and wholesome way.

"It's a challenge in meeting those needs," said Stice.

"In Quincy, there a number of programs that rely on the goodheartedness of churches, synagogues and other religious organizations," she continued, ticking off the number of successful programs within the city boundaries — Quincy Teen Mothers at Bethany Congregational Church, the Quincy Mothers' Co-op at Quincy Point Congregational Church, the AA meetings at countless churches and the day care programs, the Friends of the Unborn at St. John's Church and the lunch program at Father Bill's.

Also, free meals are offered at the Covenant Church on Whitwell Street through the Quincy Crisis Center, she said.

"Whenever there is a problem in Quincy, the ministers, rabbis and iman priests respond. They are supportive of our youth.

"These programs are open to all kids, not just to those who belong to a particular congregation," said Stice.

She said she had met with Fitzmaurice and the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church, several weeks ago to discuss the need for a youth center.

"We're still at the learning stage," she said. "The model we are looking at is Weymouth's center, but Weymouth is a different community. We don't know how to develop a successful youth center."

Stice continued: "Your belief has to come before money. Money follows great ideas, not necessarily the other way around.

"Having done this for 25 years, it's tempting to respond to an RFP (request for proposals). But the better way is to get an idea, an idea that comes from the people.

"First you determine is there a genuine need or is the information anecdotal and see what other cities and towns have done and look at their success.

"We need to learn from what other people have done and keep talking, listening and learning. Sooner or later, funding will come along, you hope."

"This may be a good idea," said Mayor James Sheets> "We have to take a look at it.

"Jo-Ann Bragg did an excellent job with her program.

"There's no question in my mind that if we had a program that brought young people in, kept them off the streets, it would be very effective.

"Some teens have too much time on their hands, wondering what to do tonight. To have structured, organized programs that are well administered and controlled would be superb," said Sheets.

"That's why we open all the gyms during certain months of the school year for basketball, volleyball," said Sheets. "A teen center would have the same philosophy."

Quincy College Wins Arbitration Decision

Quincy College has won an arbitration decision, affirming its management right to fill vacant positions without regard to union affiliation.

College President G. Jeremiah Ryan hailed the decision as being a "cornerstone for building the future of Quincy College."

The college's teachers union, the Quincy Education Association, had grieved the replacement of a terminated employee with adjunct faculty. They charged that all the employees' prior courses need to be taught by union members. The arbitrator disagreed, finding that the college had proven that there was no past practice in regards to such situations. In fact, the College assesses each vacancy as it occurs and makes an individual decision regarding how it should be filled, Ryan said.

Richard Murphy of the law firm Murphy, Lamere and Murphy represented the college in the arbitration. Murphy also serves as the college's legal counsel and chief negotiator. Ryan and Senior Vice President Patricia Gales testified at the arbitration.

Murphy also had represented the college in an arbitration case, which it won, sustaining its right to reorganize the academic division and to hire exempt management staff to run the four academic centers.

Business Boost For Merchants

Despite Torrid Heat Festival A Success

Despite last week's sweltering heat, the 29th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival was a grand success.

"I didn't know what to expect," said Michael Arnold of Shoofitz. "This was our first one. I was totally impressed.

"The heat was brutal, but Maralin (Manning) and Marie (Watts) did a terrific job. So did Stephen Blumberg (of Stephen Leigh Jewelers).

"I had two tents. We sell children's shoes. But next year I'll get four. We have access to women's shoes, like Nine West.

"We used to be in South Boston, and they don't have anything like this," said Arnold.

At the other end of the spectrum was Rogers Jewelry, which has been participating from the beginning in the sidewalk festivals, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association.

"We had an outstanding three days," said Jeff Bertman of Rogers Jewelry. "It was the best ever."

Bertman said the store's entire stock was on sale, and as a result, the store sold a lot of diamonds and gold and a lot of watches. "Many were for gifts, others for themselves. There was a lot of layaway."

Outside their shop they sold silver jewelry for $10 and less. There were earrings and toe rings, he said.

From Granite Street to School Street, more than seven dozen tents or canopied booths edged Hancock Street so that shoppers and browsers could stroll down the street and see the merchandise on display.

"If it hadn't been so hot, it would have been super," said Manning, who is executive director of QCBPA. Watts works with Manning.

"The early mornings and evenings had exceptional attendance, but the crowds petered out a little midday," she said. "It was hot standing on the concrete."

"Overall, everyone did very well," said Deanna Gazarian of Phase II Jewelry and president of QCBPA.

"Each year it seems to be getting better. We're more

Residents In Survey:

'Give Us Cleaner, Sandier Beaches'

By MARILYN JACKSON

Quincy residents want their beaches cleaner and sandier so they won't have to go elsewhere to swim.

That was the result of a citywide survey compiled during the past three months by the mayor's commission on beaches, said Leo Kelly, chairman.

This week as folks prepared for more seasonally hot weather, both the city's legislative delegation and the beach commission focused their attention on the city's beaches which are considered a jewel. The members want not only to preserve what already exists but promote the beaches as well.

"Because Wollaston Beach has a bad reputation [of water pollution], the other city beaches have suffered," said Kelly, who had called for a press conference at 1 p.m. today (Thursday) at Mound Beach in Quincy Point to highlight the advantages of a small city beach and unveil the results of a survey compiled by the beach commission.

Meanwhile, early yesterday (Wednesday) morning, Metropolitan District Commission head David Balfour was scheduled to meet with Sen. Michael Morrissey and state Reps. Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers to discuss the current condition and future improvements to Wollaston Beach.

"Wollaston Beach is a popular location for many South Shore residents. It is

14 Police Officers May Seek Early Retirement

As many as 14 police officers may opt for early retirement in February, according to Police Chief Thomas Frane.

But because some of them are electing early retirement through an incentive provision in the new police contract, the department did not release the individuals' names. They can change their minds and return the financial incentive to the city. Mandatory requirement is at age 65, said the chief.

"Since I've been here [as chief], 20 already have retired. I'd bet, in the past three years, with these 14, it will be up to 40," said Frane.

As the result of the retirements and seven potential vacancies due to promotions, Frane hopes to have 21 new officers enrolled in the police academy in October.

It's up to the mayor to make the promotions, added Frane, but all are available from the various promotional lists. He said there is vacancies in the following ranks — one as captain, two as lieutenant and four as sergeant.

He said the prospective officers have already passed the entrance exam and now are undergoing the required physicals.

Frane said when the new officers come on board, there will be 167 patrolmen, 29 sergeants, 16 lieutenants and five captains, plus the chief.

Frane said when he first joined the Quincy department 18 years ago, there were 188 patrolmen. Over the years, through cutbacks and attrition, the patrol staffing dropped to the high 140s.

"Gradually, it's inching back up," said Frane.

Under a three-year federal grant, the city is receiving $25,000 each for 17

School Employees Negotiations Stall

Negotiations between the Quincy Educational Employees Union and the Quincy public schools ended Monday without a settlement in sight, according to Pamela Whitney-Maher, union president.

The union, which is represented by District 925 of the Service Employees International Union, said it is stalled on two issues — promotions and longevity.

The union claims that school administrators use an arbitrary promotional system, not hiring either the most qualified or most senior.

Whitney-Maher said the issue of longevity is different from other school and city employees for the Quincy school secretaries as well as school aides, which is a separate unit.

She said they have been negotiating for more than 13 months and are trying to security parity of benefits with other unions in the city.

Board Grants Diner Trial Extended Hours

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

On a 4-1 vote, the License Board Tuesday voted in favor of the Wheelhouse Diner 453 Hancock St. of extending its hours to 3 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays on a 90 day trial.

The motion was made by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, and seconded by Andrew Sheele, health inspector, sitting in for Jane Gallahue who was on vacation..

Voting against the request was Building Inspector Walter white who said he was concerned about persons living in Boston and other cities coming to Quincy and said it was "not a plus to North Quincy."

However, owners Lucky Trifilos and Sean Toland told the board that Bickford's in Neponset is also opened late and they didn't think that would be a problem.

Trifilos and Toland also own the Union Diner on Billings Rd and were cited as being "community oriented" by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who spoke in support of the move.

The owners told the board that since taking over the diner in January of this year, the 33 seat diner's business "has improved" and that renovations were made and updated up to code.

Chairman Joseph Shea said in view of the fact that Bickford's in Quincy Center is also opened he said Wheelhouse "deserves a try."

Although voting in favor of the move, Police Chief Thomas Frane said he agreed with White's concerns. However,, he said in fairness to Bickford's ability to open until 3 a.m. he would support Wheelhouse Diver.

He added that he "won't wait three months" if any accidents occur and that he would not "risk safety" and would "be watching if things get out of control".

The hours would be from 5 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

The diner would be closed on Fridays and Saturdays at 3 p.m. and then re-open at 11 p.m. until 3 a.m.

Council Hearing Aug. 2 On Willard St. Rezoning

The Quincy City Council will hold a public hearing at 8 p.m. Aug. 2 at city hall to consider rezoning an approximately 10-acre site off Willard Street which is presently owned by the National Fire Protection Association.

The land, presently zoned as Residence C, could be rezoned to a planned unit development district.

The address of the land is on the southeasterly side of Willard Street, from 786 to 792 Willard and on the southerly side of St. Moritz Avenue, from 11 to 39 St. Moritz.

According to Richard Meade, planning director, the land is between two buildings, behind the brick apartment buildings on Willard Street.

Developer Michael Corcoran has an option to purchase the land from NFPA, said an NFPA spokesperson.

Hospital CEO In Washington On Medicare Cuts

Quincy Hospital CEO Jeff Doran was among nearly two dozen hospital executives who were to travel to Washington Wednesday to lobby Congress to modify the 1997 Balanced Budget Act.

That law, which was devised to slash Medicare payments by $115 billion over a five-year period, will actually cut $220 billion, according to the Massachusetts Hospital Association.

"I will be echoing the sentiments of the Massachusetts CEOs as well as those throughout the country but from a Massachusetts perspective," said Doran.

"We have been exceptionally hard hit by the Balanced Budget Act and the reimbursement changes.

"The message we want to convey is how it affects the local community, how it impacts — and already has impacted — Quincy."

A financial analyst for the MHA estimates that the state's community hospitals would face $724 million in Medicare lost reimbursements by the year 2003.

That translates to a projected $18 million loss for Quincy Hospital.

But Doran differs with that estimate. The MHA requested all the hospitals to submit data of what payments each hospital experienced prior to the Balanced Budget Act and post-BBA, said Doran, and then computed the projections for each individual hospital.

"Quincy [would be] over that. Eighteen million dollars doesn't include some of the outpatient payment reductions or the payments to subacute units," said Doran.

"Built into this Medicare payment program are many subtle reimbursement provisions. Many have been adjusted, tweaked and modified through the BBA," said Doran.

"We have experienced dramatic reductions in payments, which prompted us cutting the maternity and prenatal programs," said Doran.

"I can recite other curtailments," he continued. "Homecare service has retracted probably 25 percent since the cuts came into effect.

"That's a real impact on the poor, the homebound. They are now receiving less intensive services than previously," he said.

He said Quincy Hospital also discontinued its outpatient chronic pain clinic a year ago, and the hospital is trying to find a creative way to restart that service.

Campaigning By Train

Nowadays presidential candidates hop on a plane to get to campaign stops.

It does get them there quickly.

But I think both the voters and the press got a closer in-person look and impression of them when they travelled by train back in the good old days.

The train rolled into the station and the candidate spoke from the rear platform with the crowd gathered around to look him over and listen to what he had to say.

They called them "whistle stops." But sometimes the train just whistled and didn't stop.

Like in 1948 when Harry Truman roared right through Quincy, right past the birthplaces of John and John Quincy Adams without even a pause.

I was assigned to cover him that morning and caught up to him in Brockton where he did stop and speak.

Adlai Stevenson, four years later, was a different and more fun story.

STEVENSON

I traveled with Stevenson aboard his campaign train from Boston to Quincy to Rhode Island Oct. 27, 1952.

And whenever I look back on that day it reminds me how dramatically the lives of some people can change in just a few short years.

There were only 3,000 people in the then Republican stronghold of Quincy who turned out at the old Quincy Depot to see and listen to the Democratic presidential nominee.

Stevenson spoke eloquently (some think he was sometimes too eloquent), sprinkling his words with bits of humor. His special target here in Quincy that day was Wisconsin Senator Joseph McCarthy who was on his famed witch hunt.

When a plane appeared overhead partly drowning him out, Stevenson looked up and quipped: "A Republican pilot, I imagine."

Stevenson had a Hollywood star supporting cast with him. Among those aboard the train: Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall and Robert Ryan.

Bacall, a very attractive young woman, got off the train and stood nearby listening to Stevenson. But as I recall, I don't think too many people actually recognized her or realized she was standing there.

David Crowley, then a city councillor and a Democratic candidate for Congress, had the honor of introducing Stevenson.

I don't remember his exact words but the introduction went something like this: " . . . and now, ladies and gentlemen, I give you the next President of the United States, Adlai E. Stevenson."

Crowley was wrong, of course. The next President of the United States would be Dwight D. Eisenhower.

But Crowley that day did introduce the next Democratic president though neither he nor the crowd realized it at the time.

For on the rear platform of the train with Stevenson but quite overshadowed by the man from Illinois was a man from Massachusetts--a young, slim Congressman named John F. Kennedy.

KENNEDY

But Kennedy was but a political "also" in the Stevenson party. Eclipsed not only by Stevenson but by Gov. Paul Dever, too.

Yet, in just eight short years, he would be elected President and Stevenson would become his ambassador to the United Nations.

FERRAZZI

I also remember then Police Captain William Ferrazzi, later to become chief, who was in charge of security for Stevenson's visit.

He had 40 men positioned around the Quincy Depot and others posted on bridges along the railroad tracks.

And, on buildings.

And who could have dreamed that the young Congressman standing with Stevenson in Quincy that day would become President but was to keep a tragic date with fate below a building in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

"You've got to watch those buildings," Ferrazzi had said.

Someone didn't in Dallas.

Continental Navy Vessel To Visit Quincy Bay

The Continental Sloop Providence, a Tall Ship of international stature and an authentic replica of the first vessel in the Continental Navy, will patrol the waters of historic Quincy and Hull Bays and the Boston Harbor Islands July 26-28.

She will stop in the ports of Hull on Monday, July 26 and Quincy on Tuesday, July 27 and Wednesday, July 28. Her Captain invites all Tall Ship fans to step aboard to tour the ship and perhaps set sail for a short trainjng sail among the Boston Harbor Islands aboard a Tall Ship.

Her schedule in Hull and Quincy:

Free dockside open house, 9 a.m. to noon; youth training sail, $35 per person, 1 to 4 p.m. for youth 14 to 18 years old; adult sail, $75, 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. for all ages.

Reservations for all sails from Hull and Quincy are required. There is limited space to sail a leg of the passage north from Quincy.

Trainees 16 and older can board in Quincy on Thursday, July 29 by 8 a.m., and sail north to a northerly port to be determined. Cost is $100 per person for the day.

In Hull the Providence will be docked at Pemberton Pier, and in Quincy at the Harbor Express dock adjacent to the US Naval Shipbuilding Museum. Free parking is available and both locations are accessible by auto and from Boston and other locations by Harbor Express water ferry system. Call 617-376-8417 for water ferry schedule and rate information.

The 110-foot square topsail sloop is an authentic replica of the original Providence, the first command of Captain John Paul Jones. The original vessel was built as the Katy for a Providence merchant, and was purchased by the Continental Congress on Oct. 13, 1775 to become one of the first vessels in the Continental Navy.

Rechristened as the Providence and armed with 12 cannon, Captain John Paul Jones was piped aboard on May 10, 1776. On patrol along the east coast of the Colonies from 1776 to 1779, she earned the nickname "Lucky Sloop" and captured a total of 40 British ships as prizes before Providence was burned by her crew to avoid capture on Aug. 16, 1779 in Maine.

Throughout her career, she was known for her ability to engage and best much larger British vessels.

Today's Providence was launched in 1976 as an authentic recreation of the original vessel, and operates both as a living symbol of the pluck and determination of our forefathers, and as a living classroom for youth of all ages.

She sails New England waters taking trainees aboard for the adventure of a lifetime on both day sails and multi day passages, and educates them in the disappearing art of sailing a Tall Ship. All aboard become an active member of the crew while underway, and they may be called on to hoist and tune sails, aim cannon, stand watch or take a trick at the tiller.

To reserve a spot for a sail aboard the Providence or to book a sail aboard a Tall Ship anywhere on the seven seas, contact the Boston Nautical Heritage Group at 781-334-1749.

Scenes From Yesterday

Agrees Memorial Day Parade Should Not Be Canceled

Editor, The Quincy Sun;

I have just finished reading a letter from Thomas Stansbury (Quincy Sun, July 8), Parade Chairman, Quincy Veteran's Council. I totally agree with him. (That the Memorial Day Parade should not be cancelled)

I grew up in Mattapan right around the corner from where the parade started. When I was old enough (11-12) I followed the parade over to the veterans section of Mt. Hope Cemetery. Those visions (of white crosses), speeches and times have always stayed with me; Remember our Veterans who gave so much for us. I lost an uncle, who I never knew, in WWII. My dad, brother, uncles and husband have all served their/our country with pride. My dad was a naturalized citizen and America meant everything to him, it ranked number one along with family.

I do not live in Quincy. However, I have been to the Memorial Day, Flag Day and Veterans Day parades, since I was a small child, with my parents. When I got married I brought my children, as Quincy was one of the biggest and best attended parades.

My children also got to watch their father march in various Quincy parades for 10-15 years. He was in one group or another (USA, USAR, Vietnam Veterans, American Legion color guard, VFW color guard).

I spent the Fourth of July this year in Washington, D.C. My husband and I watched the parade (in 98 degrees), honoring the birth of our country, with thousands. I wouldn't miss any of the patriotic recognition of our country, and those who have defended her.

Please, I pray that our holiday parades to honor those who gave so much for us do not get cancelled. This generation seems not to know the true meaning of our holidays. The holidays are not a separate day, but long weekends. With the change of the blue laws there is no more family-day time anymore. Time when families did things together.

Again, please keep the true nature of our patriotic holidays. Thank you.

MWRA Thanks Mariano On Water, Sewer Rates

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The MWRA Advisory Board would like to publicly thank Representative Ronald Mariano for his work on behalf of ratepayers during this year's House budget process. Once again, Representative Mariano has made controlling water and sewer rates a top priority.

Due to Representative Mariano's leadership as Vice-Chairman of the MWRA Caucus, the House budget includes approximately $48.5 million in debt service assistance to the MWRA, including $4.2 million of the Metro West Water Supply Tunnel. It was Representative Mariano's Amendment to the House budget which also allows debt service assistance for the Walnut Hill Water Treatment Plant. Without this level of assistance ratepayers would be faced with double-digit wholesale rate increases for FY2000. In addition, the budget includes $500,000 for the Town of Clinton to partially reimburse the MWRA for the operation of their wastewater treatment plant. These measures amount to significant savings to MWRA ratepayers.

In a cause championed by Representative Mariano, the House budget contains language which requires the MDC Watershed Division to present their annual budget to the Advisory Board. MWRA ratepayers pay 100% of the Watershed Division budget and currently have no say in how the funds are spent. This budget language will take us one step closer to our goal of holding the MDC Watershed Division accountable to MWRA ratepayers.

The Advisory Board greatly appreciates the Legislature's commitment to rate relief in this budget and over the past several years. We owe much of this legislative support to Representative Marian and his efforts to push pro ratepayer measures to the forefront of debate.

Barbara's 3 Berries Pie

It was club night at Barb and Chap's (should be in a magazine) Hanson home and Barbara served her usual gourmet dessert. One of the desserts was a fruit pie with a combination of berries making it particularly delicious. You can use either fresh or frozen.

Barbara's 3 Berries Pie

1 1/2 cups fresh or unsweetened frozen raspberries
1 1/2 cups fresh or unsweetened frozen blueberries
3 tablespoons corn starch
1/4 cup apple juice
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons unsalted butter (cut up)

Either make the pastry or buy ready make pie crust.

Mix together the berries, cornstarch and apple juice in a bowl. Let stand for 15 minutes. Gently mix in sugar and cinnamon.

Heat oven to 450 degree. After filling the bottom crust with the mixture, dot with the butter and put top crust on. Cover edges of the pie with aluminum foil. Place on a cookie sheet and bake for 15 minutes and then reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees and bake for 55 more minutes. (70 to 80 minutes if using frozen fruit) Barbara also served a delicious key lime pie. She got raves!

Merrymount Student Top Winner In Houghs Neck Legion Flag Day Essay Contest

Flag Day essay contest winners announced by Houghs Neck Legion Post.

For the past 25 years the Houghs Neck Post, the Sons of the American Legion and the Auxiliary have conducted an essay contest for the fifth grade students at Atherton Hough, Snug Harbor and Merrymount Schools.

This year's winners are David Casey of Atherton Hough, Vanny Trieu of Snug Harbor and Alexander Mendez of Merrymount. Awards were presented by Commander Clarence Gogan, Senior Vice Commander Mary Timcoe, founder of the program, and Carole Gardner of the Auxiliary.

The first place winning essay by Alex Mendez of Merrymount School:

"Our Country Our Flag"

"One day 223 years ago in May or June of 1776, three of our country's patriots were asked to design our country's flag. Those three men's names were Robert Morris, Colonel George Ross, and the country's first president, George Washington. They found a well-known seamstress named Betsy Ross. She followed the design that George Washington and the other two men made.

Betsy Ross liked the design, but she changed all the six-pointed stars to five-pointed stars. The flag was approved by the Continental Congress in Philadelphia on June 14, 1777. That is why Flag Day is celebrated on the 14th of June. That was a summary of our nation's fine flag's history.

"Every day when I say the Pledge of Allegiance in class, when I say those words with my hand over my heart, I stare at our country's flag and ask myself what the flag means to me. When I see the red, I remember all the blood that was shed to keep this country free. Once I glimpse at the blue, I realize how trustworthy this country is. I think the white symbolizes the land of the free, and how anyone can come to this great country for equality and liberty.

"During the Civil War men had to hold the battle flags. The men that held the flags had no guns or any sort of defence. I've heard a few stories of men getting their arms shot off by cannon balls while holding the flag. I don't know about you, but I think that is pure courage and loyalty to their country.

"I enjoy looking at the red, white and blue every morning in school. I'm proud to live in this great country and to have a flag so beautiful. I hope you enjoyed reading this essay and have a Happy Flag Day!"

LUCIE THERRIEN

Recording Artist Concert On Library Lawn July 29

Recording and video artist, Lucie Therrien, brings music in French and in English Thursday, July 29, from 12:30 to 1:30 on the front lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Square.

The program is supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the Friends of the Library.

As a solo act Therrien accompanies herself on the guitar. Her repertoire includes traditional, contemporary and original songs that reflect the culture of French speaking people in Quebec, Acadia, New England, Louisiana, France and Creole areas.

In addition to being a performer, she is a certified teacher, composer, linguist, historian and public speaker. She has performed throughout the United States, France and Quebec and has participated in cultural exchanges in Martinique and North Africa. She has published 12 recordings, several books and videos.

New England folk singer, Jim Douglas, concludes the series Aug 5 with a concert of traditional and contemporary folk songs.

Concertgoers are welcome to bring picnics, lawn chairs, sun shades. Concerts will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea Street, in case of inclement weather. They are free and accessible.

Early Intervention Director Retires

200 Celebrate 30-Year Career Of Phyllis Fazzio

Sen. Michael Morrissey and other community leaders recently joined South Shore Mental Health staff and guests in celebrating the 30-year career of Phyllis Fazzio, director of Step One Early Intervention, with a retirement party at the Neighborhood Club.

"I've never seen anyone who was more gracious in her acceptance of all the love and appreciation from the decades of families and children Phyllis has helped," said Rosemary Wahlberg, executive director of Quincy Community Action Program. Wahlberg was one of 14 individuals to take the podium before approximately 200 guests to share their experience with Fazzio.

Fazzio joined SSMH in 1969 as a teacher of children with multiple disabilities. She has served as director of the agency's Step One Early Intervention program since 1989.

Step One is a program of South Shore Mental Health, and is sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health which helps parents to recognize and understand their child's developmental needs, and suggests ways to help their child grow. The program serves infants and children up to three years old who are at risk for developmental delays due to biological or environmental stressors.

During the 10 years Fazzio served as director, Step One has expanded from serving 85 South Shore families to 265.

"Phyllis's extraordinary commitment to improving the lives of families in need has been the hallmark of her long career," said Harry Shulman, president and CEO of SSMH.

Indeed, parents and grown children representing three decades of Step One clients shared emotional testimonies of developing strategies to better cope with developmental delays. With tears in her eyes, Andrea White of Quincy recalled how Phyllis and her staff had suggested that her son Roger had Pervasive Developmental Disorder, a condition related to autism. A neurologist's diagnosis confirmed the condition.

"Phyllis and her staff made home visits and helped the whole family to learn what Roger needed and what to expect from him at different stages of development," Andrea said. "They also taught me how to advocate for his needs."

Although Roger has no language skills when he entered the program at 17 months old, he graduated with the ability to form basic words and sounds. Andrea also felt her son was able to develop a higher degree of social skills through group interaction and music therapy classes.

During the ceremony, Step One staff presented Fazzio with a 120-inch by 96-inch quilt with colorful panels created by both staff members and clients' families.

Fazzio serves as co-president of the Massachusetts Early Intervention Consortium, and is a board member of Manet Community Health Center. She is also a member of the Quincy Early Childhood Advisory Committee and Impact Quincy's Early Childhood Committee.

ANDREA WHITE (left) presents Phyllis Fazzio with a Senate citation sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey in recognition for her outstanding work with children and families receiving early intervention services.

In 1997, she was the recipient of the Rosemary Wahlberg Award presented by South Shore Day Care Services for her work with families. Over the years she was been active in numerous lobbying and advocacy efforts on behalf of early intervention programs at both the local and state levels.

"When Phyllis and I were on our way to the State House in May to rally for children in need of services, she complained she couldn't walk up the hill as quickly as she used to," said Rosemarie Sergi, assistant director of Step One. "When I commented on the changes 30 years bring, she laughed and said she forgets she's not as young as she used to be.

"Regardless, Phyllis has managed to maintain a sense of youthfulness, hope and vigor in her work."

experienced. We see how much people in Quincy and the outlying areas enjoy it and want to be part of it," she said.

"Already, we're gearing up for next year, our 30th, for something bigger and better."

She said the heat always is a factor during the sidewalk festival. "But people are used to it and look forward to the event. It's the same the same temperature every year. It's guaranteed for 90 degree weather.

"People get into a festive mood, and the festival is a way for the merchants to repay the people for their patronage," Gazarian said.

The festival is privately funded by QCBPA, and the through the association dues and the generous sponsorship of local businesses, they can present the entertainment, she added.

"From what I could see and hear, the first couple of days, especially Thursday, people were spending and enjoying themselves," said Stephen Blumberg of Stephen Leigh Jewelry. "But the heat had an overall effect on the turnout; some didn't show up on Saturday because of the heat," he said.

He said there was a lot of interest in his treasure chest outside the store which was filled with plush stuffed animals, including dozens of Beanie Babies provided by Stephen Leigh Jewelers and other merchants.

"For $2, people could put their hand into a beautiful trunk, and after a certain amount of time, pull out a stuffed animal. Whatever they pulled out they could keep. We had a lot of fun."

The money went to support the downtown business association, he said. Another attraction that raised money for QCBPA was the picture stand. Manning and Watts built backdrops with head cutouts for people to pose in.

The store also sold Monadnock Mountain Spring Water, which is based in Quincy, and soda.

Blumberg said a donation from Harbor Express provided a children's reading hour. Debbie Pizzi, a Quincy teacher, and Meghan Malone, a Hanover librarian, read to the youngsters while their parents browsed along Hancock Street..

Charlie Ryder of Ryder's Curtains said his store did well during the three-day event. Although he had fewer transactions, the store did more business..

"We sold lots of bath towels, hand towels and kitchen towels and a lot of lace curtains. I was kind of surprised about the curtains," he said, adding that it was too hot to shop on Saturday.

Josephine Consoli, wife of Guy Consoli of Napoli's, said the festival "was a lot of work.

"People would buy pizza outside, and then come inside to the air conditioning to eat."

"It was a terrific event," said Renee Buisson of Quincy City Hospital's public relations staff. The Quincy Visiting Nurse Association provided free blood pressure screenings for part of each day.

Quincy's Records and Tapes' manager Dave Demeo said business was very good. "We did very well. We were a little surprised, considering the Kennedy death and the heat.

"I thought people would stay home and watch TV, the temperature was so hot," he said, "but people came in and bought CDs, videos and a few cassettes. We had a good selection."

Quincy 2000 Helps Shea Corian Fabrication Firm Buy New Equipment

Quincy 2000 has stepped in to help Bill Shea's Corian Center, a fast growing countertop fabrication company purchase needed machinery.

"This is another example of our continuing efforts to keep manufacturing alive and well in Quincy," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino.

Bill Shea's Corian Center, 809 Hancock St., a third generation company, is one of the region's leading fabricators of Dupont Corian products.

The firm's fabrication facility is on Lebanon St. in Quincy Point.

The new equipment will enable the company to hire and train six new employees at the Quincy Point facility.

Mannarino noted that Quincy 2000, through its Industrial Needs Assessment outreach program, has contacted industrial businesses throughout the city to stem the loss of jobs over the past decade.

William C. Shea of Bill Shea's Corian Center expressed enthusiasm about the Quincy 2000 outreach program.

"Corian has eclipsed kitchen cabinets and Formica countertops as our main products," he said.

"However, Corian requires new fabrication techniques that require expensive and sophisticated machinery.

"We were in dire need of updating our equipment and increasing the size of our workforce to meet the demands of our customers.

"Fortunately, Quincy 2000 has put its shoulder to the wheel with us and in doing so has not only ensured that we have the tools to meet our current demands, but now we know we have the machinery and capacity to sustain our growth plans."

Mannarino said:

"Quincy 2000 is pleased to have the funding available to assist a growing company like Bill Shea's Corian Center in modernizing its manufacturing equipment.

"The assistance we've provided helps Shea's meet their growth plans and create new jobs in the manufacturing sector, a component of our local economy that has dwindled in size over the years."

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi in whose ward the fabrication facility is located said:

"Quincy is fortunate to have the kind of public-private partnership in Quincy 2000 that can provide resources for businesses that stimulate job creation.

"I am very pleased that through the efforts of Quincy 2000, Bill Shea's Corian Center will be able to hire and train six new employees.

"Quincy 2000 also encouraged the company to make some physical improvements to the Lebanon St. facility that contribute to our overall revitalization efforts in the Quincy Point community."

The Shea company was founded in 1952 by William T. Shea and his son, William F. Shea, the first retail business to sell Formica.

The company is still family run by William F. Shea and his son, William C. Shea.

"However," said the latter, "the company is now promoting Dupont Corian rather than Formica. Corian gives you more choices and flexibility than any other surface material you can buy today."

Quincy 2000's Job creation funding comes from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant Program.

In exchange for the funding, businesses commit to creating job opportunities for low and moderate-income persons.

For more information about the program, contact Quincy 2000 at 617-847-1454.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FROM Quincy 2000 enabled Bill Shea's Corian Center to purchase new machinery and hire six more employees. Shea of the Shea company; Executive Director Joseph Mannarino, Ann Fisher and Michael Rie of Quincy 2000.

Local High School Students Invited To Travel And Study Abroad

The American Institute for Foreign Study is offering Quincy area high school students an opportunity to study and travel abroad and earn scholarship money towards their trip by hosting an Academy Year in America (AYA) high school exchange student arriving in August.

AYA is sponsored by the American Institute for Foreign Study (AIFS) Foundation. The not-for-profit Foundation promotes intercultural exchange by sponsoring high school exchange students from around the world to live with American families and study at local high schools for 5 or 10 months.

Families who host an AYA exchange student with good English skills and motivation can learn about the country, its customs, culture and language. Most importantly, if the American student decides to study/travel abroad, the family and student will have made a special friend in the country before he or she begins his or her adventure.

Quincy families can earn up to $1,000 towards study abroad programs in France, Germany, the Netherlands and Spain, or earn up to $500 on summer or winter travel/study programs to Austria, Brazil, Chile, France, Spain or Germany by hosting an AYA student this August.

MAJOR ED FORSTER

"The Salvation Army of Quincy has been an integral part of the Quincy community for the past 100 years. It has constantly strived to be a positive vehicle to help and to guide individuals through bad times."

Forster, expressing appreciation for past support and to those who can help during this period said:

Hospital CEO In Washington On Medicare Cuts

changes when he meets with congressional leaders.

"Some of these changes are not even in the realm of reasonableness," charged Doran.

Under the proposal, the new policy would provide a fixed dollar amount for inpatient work, no matter how little or how long services are provided or how long a patient stays.

"The policymakers are trying to institute the same type of program for outpatient and E.R. [emergency room] work," said Doran, noting that Massachusetts has just recently enacted such a program for the Medicaid program and that Medicare is fashioned along similar lines, modeled after Massachusetts' Medicaid program.

Under the proposal, a person with chest pains who comes into the E.R. would need diagnostic tests to rule out a heart attack. Medicare would reimburse the hospital for $170, whatever the battery of tests is performed, he explained.

"That doesn't pass the common sense test of logic," Doran charged.

"Distilled down to simple terms, these changes mean real pain for real people, and its impact in each community can be significant.

"There has been significant disintegration and deterioration of this wonderful health care system we have come to expect in America, and it is falling apart at the seams in major ways by sweeping policy change.

"We've got to raise the awareness and consciousness levels of legislators and the citizenry so that they understand what's happening to the health care system in the country," said Doran.

In addition to meeting with congressional leaders, Doran and the other hospital executives are scheduled for a White House briefings with one of President Clinton's chief policy advisors.

In a ranking of anticipated Medicare cuts, Quincy was the 10th highest among the state's 60 community hospitals with an anticipated $18 million loss in reimbursements. Carney Hospital in Dorchester, which had considered an affiliation with Quincy Hospital last year, anticipates a $25 million loss, while South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, which earlier this year had considered a merger with Quincy, anticipated a $24 million loss.

Despite the fact that so many hospitals are anticipating huge losses as a result of the Medicare cuts, Doran said he is optimistic that the state legislature will act favorably on the Quincy's petition to allow the proposed affiliation with Boston Medical Center.

"We feel we have a unique set of circumstances surrounding our strategic initiative with BMC," said Doran.

"First and foremost, by virtue of our public mission, we spend between $5 million and $7 million on free and uncompensated care. We are not going to compromise that mission," he said.

Further, Quincy Hospital, like Hale Hospital in Haverhill, is the only municipal, acute care facility in the city, he said. There are no other cities in the commonwealth without a hospital.

But, he said, Quincy Hospital is at a competitive disadvantage to other hospitals because it is required to finance its estimated $25 million unfunded pension liability.

"No other hospital has to play by these rules," said Doran.

Last week, Doran and Mayor James Sheets along with Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Bruce Ayers met with House Speaker Thomas Finneran for an hour to present the city's case on the proposed affiliation with BMC.

"I felt it was a very productive and enlightening discussion," said Doran. "The speaker was pretty positive about us and what Quincy represents, how significant health care is in the city, given the fact that Quincy is a city of 90,000."

Doran said that the circumstances which drove Boston City Hospital to unite with Boston University, besides being next to each other, was the opportunity to continue to expand its mission and serve the uninsured and underinsured through HealthNet.

Allowing BMC to expand to Quincy further expands its mission to a neighboring community, said Doran.

COMING UP WITH A PLAN

According to a recent survey by The National Council on the Aging, fewer than 33% of parents discuss plans for long-term care with their adult children, leaving both to confront the issue when the urgent need for hospitalization/extensive care arises. Thus, the children of aging parents face the very stressful situation of having to address their parents' health problems in short order. Even more problematic for them may be finding the funds to pay for the care. Baby boomers may find themselves in a "triple squeeze" of having to care for their parents, children and plan for their own long-term care needs. Families of aging parents, therefore, are urged to discuss their long-term care plans in advance of need.

While it is very difficult to do, it's important to discuss what your wishes are with your adult children, because a time may come when those decisions may be made for you, unless you have made your requests known. At Marina Place, a senior living residence, we offer everything from social and cultural programs to the medical assistance you require. For gracious living in a scenic seaside setting, visit us at Four Seaport Drive. Phone: 617-770-3264.

P.S. Over the next ten years, experts believe that long-term care will replace childcare as the primary concern for baby boomers.

Flynn & Co. Sells Braintree Industrial Building

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Senior Vice-President Jay Nuss has brokered the sale of a light industrial building on Granite Street in Braintree.

The 19,408 square foot building is situated on 1.77 acres adjacent to the town's landmark Five Corners intersection. Previously owned by Mack Realty, the facility was purchased for $1.18 million by Rader Properties, Inc., represented in the transaction by Jim Rader.

"Braintree Five Corners is a prime location for any type of business," said Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski. "The area is know as a high-traffic spot that provides great exposure for nearby real estate."

Radon Inspection Bill May Prove Costly To Consumers, Realtors Association Says

Draft legislation that purports to protect would-be homeowners from the effects of radon gas may cause more harm than good for homebuyers, warns the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

Although the primary intent of H.3120 is to increase the homebuying public's awareness of the right to a radon inspection, MAR officials have raised serious concerns about the benefits of the bill to lawmakers, noting that the measure could prove costly to consumers and add confusion to an already complex property transaction process.

As currently worded, the proposed legislation seeks to mandate all residential Offers to Purchase contain specific language notifying prospective buyers of the right to make their offer contingent on a radon test. But that ability already exists, according to MAR officials.

"Buyers have long had the opportunity to place specific contingencies in their offers. This bill will do nothing but complete the homebuying process by adding another layer of regulation," said MAR President James Dougherty.

Specifically, the legislation would require buyers to include the mandatory disclosure language in their offers to purchase, and should they fail to do so, the seller would be unable to accept the offer or risk a $1,000 fine.

"This bill is about 'buyer beware,' not consumer awareness," Dougherty said, noting that the onus is on the buyer to insert the disclosure language. "I fear for those buyers who may mistakenly leave out the language and face costly time delays that may mean the difference between obtaining their dream home or losing out to another buyer," he said.

MAR leaders also urged state lawmakers to oppose the bill on the basis that it would continue the current piecemeal approach to property disclosure now in place in Massachusetts. "Without a clearly defined property disclosure process, it's very difficult for many homeowners, especially those trying to sell themselves, to comply with all of the state's disclosure laws," said MAR Chief Executive Officer Robert Nash in testimony before the state Legislature's Joint Committee on Natural Resources and Agriculture.

Furthermore, MAR questioned the need for the legislation since radon is rarely a problematic issue for homebuyers in most residential transactions. "For those consumers who are concerned about the radon level in a home, there is ample opportunity to address the issue in the homebuying process, from the Seller's Description of Property form our association produces to the home inspection that is routinely performed in transactions today," Nash said.

Data from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency shows that just six percent of all homes in the U.S. have an elevated level of radon (4pCi/L), and mitigation costs on average are estimated at about $1,200.

Conway Golf Tournament Raises $11,500 For Homeless Shelter

Jack Conway and Company has presented a check for $11,500 to Brockton's MainSpring House homeless shelter.

The funds were raised during the recent charity golf tournament, hosted each year by the Conway Company.

Conway Vice President of Sales Denis Lilla delivered the donation to Dennis P. Carman, executive director of the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless, and Julie Vaitkus, director of volunteers and donations for the BCH.

More than 150 golfers, representing 50 Boston and South Shore businesses, participated in the 15th annual MainSpring Charity Open Golf Tournament, held in June at the Easton Country Club.

MainSpring House provides shelter, food, clothing, educational programs and counseling to individuals and families in need; the BCH also operates Conway House in Middleboro, which houses 13 homeless families. Since 1984, the Conway golf tournaments have raised more than $150,000 to support the organization's activities.

Norwell-based Jack Conway and Company was founded in 1957 and has more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod and is the largest independently owned realty company.

How Parents, Staff Can Make Schools Safer

PARENTS:

• Sharpen your parenting skill. Emphasize and build on your children's strengths.

• Teach your children how to reduce their risks of becoming crime victims.

• Know where your kids are, what they are doing, and whom they are with at all times. Set clear rules in advance about acceptable activities.

• Ask your children about what goes on during the school day. Listen to what they say and take their concerns and worries seriously.

• Help your children learn nonviolent ways to handle frustration, anger and conflict.

• Do not allow your child to carry any type of weapon.

• Become involved in your child's school activities - PTO, field trips, and helping out in class or the lunch room.

• Work with other parents in your neighborhood to start a McGruff Safe House program.

SCHOOL STAFF:

• Evaluate your school's safety objectivity. Set targets for improvement. Be honest about crime problems and work toward bettering the situation.

• Develop consistent disciplinary policies, good security procedures, and response plans for emergencies.

• Train school personnel in conflict resolution, problem solving, drug prevention, crisis intervention, cultural sensitivity, classroom management, and counseling skills. Make sure they can recognize trouble signs and identify potentially violent students.

• Encourage students to talk about worries, questions, and fears about what's going on in their schools, homes, and neighborhoods. Listen carefully to what they say.

• If a student makes a threat of violence, take him or her seriously. Address the problem immediately and act to prevent a potential conflict.

• When something violent and frightening happens at school or in the neighborhood, take time to talk about it. Discuss the consequences and get students to think about what other choices besides violence might have been available. Get help from trained counselors if necessary.

• Work with students, parents, law enforcement, local government, and community based groups to develop wider-scope crime prevention efforts.

COMMUNITY PARTNERS:

• Law enforcement can report on the type of crimes in the surrounding community and suggest ways to make schools safer.

• Community-based groups, church organizations, and other service groups can provide counseling, extended learning programs, before and after school activities, and other community crime prevention programs.

• Local businesses can provide apprenticeship programs, participate in adopt-a-school programs, or serve as mentors to area students.

• Colleges and universities can offer conflict management courses to teachers or assist school officials in implementing violence prevention curricula.

• If we all work together, we can make a difference.

Morrisette On A Roll

Faces Brockton After Sweeping Wellesley In First Round Of Play-Offs

By CHRIS POISSON

It's not how you play at the beginning; it's how well you finish down the stretch.

Those were the words Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo recited when his team was 4-8 and in danger of missing the playoffs several weeks ago.

He must have foreseen something because his team hasn't lost a game since. Morrisette (12-8) finished the regular season on a rampage, winning its final eight games, and 10 of its last 11, to earn a second seed in the Zone 6 East American Legion baseball playoffs.

And it has been perfect in the postseason, sweeping Wellesley (9-11-1) in a best-of-three first round series, with a pair of 5-0 shutouts over the weekend.

Morrisette will play Brockton, the third seed, in the next round. The first game was played while the paper was in print (Wednesday at Edgar's Playground). The winner of the series will face the winner of the South Attleboro-Milton matchup.

"We've been on a good roll and we haven't stopped," said Cattaneo Monday afternoon. "And winning changes everything. You get your confidence and you start to have fun and enjoy it."

Matt McCann and Rob Celata tossed the shutouts in the first and second games, respectively. McCann struck out nine, gave up six hits and walked three in his stint on the mound.

Morrisette had only six hits in the game, but it was enough for McCann, who earlier in the season was a victim of run support and poor defense.

Joe Flynn led the way, going 2 for 3 with two RBIs. John Gavin and Adam Goodrich each had a hit and one RBI.

In Celata's outing, he allowed seven hits, walked four and punched out 12. Billy Walker went 3 for 4 with one RBI, and Shawn Manning and Goodrich each added a pair of hits.

"We got excellent pitching from Celata and McCann and great defense," said Cattaneo. "Our hitting wasn't that great but we got it when we needed it."

In the final three games of the season, Morrisette knocked off West Roxbury twice, 5-4 and 8-6, and Milton, 7-3.

The first game against West Roxbury was a continuation from July 2, when the game was postponed because the lights went out at Adams Field. West Roxbury had a man on second with one out in the seventh, but Celata came in and got the next two batters out.

In the bottom of the inning, Celata doubled with two outs and scored the winning-run on Gavin's single.

Celata started the second game and went the distance, allowing six runs on 10 hits. He picked up the win thanks to his teammates hot bats. Keith Doherty went 2 for 4 with home run and five RBIs to pace the attack. Walker and Gavin added two hits apiece, and Celata did well from the plate with three hits and two RBIs.

Doherty pitched against Milton to close out the regular season. He fanned eight and allowed five hits and three runs in seven innings of work. He also contributed with two hits.

Walker, Gavin and Pat Bregoli also had two hits each.

Quincy All-Stars Hope History Repeats Itself

BABE RUTH

Thirty years ago this week, if you asked what were the chances of the Quincy Babe Ruth All-Stars winning the state tournament, someone might have replied about the same as man landing on the moon.

Well, we know man reached the moon and, yes, Quincy became state champs, the only Quincy Babe Ruth team ever to do so.

Miracle Mets? How about the Amazing All-Stars of Quincy. It won with its top hurler, Bob McKay, sitting on the bench throughout the New England tournament with an injury.

It had to beat another Quincy team in the tournament to get to the state finals.

After Quincy captured the crown, it was awarded the state trophy at a pregame ceremony at Fenway Park and the players got to shake hands with Frank Malzone.

Why this brief history lesson? Because the Eastern Massachusetts 15-year-old Babe Ruth Championship will be held in the 1999 Quincy Babe Ruth team's own backyard, Adams Field from July 23-30. And home field might be an advantage for the team to match the '69 feat.

The eight-team tournament will play two games at 4 and 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Winners from this round will advance to the Babe Ruth regionals and those teams that get past the regionals will travel to Manchester, N.H. for the Championship.

Tickets are $3 for each game, or $8 for an all-games pass.

JUNIOR FARM

Cheney Club Champions

Cheney Club knocked off the Wiz Kidz, 5-2, to win the Quincy Youth Baseball Junior Farm Division championship.

Cheney Club's Daniel Myers and Wiz Kidz' John Ciccariello pitched excellent games, as both teams got strong pitching throughout the playoffs.

Cheney Club started the regular season slowly as they lost two of their first three games. But they ended up winning 13 games and they stormed through the playoffs with five straight wins.

The Wiz Kidz, however, started the season on fire as they were in first place for the first half of the season. They then suffered a midseason slump which earned them a sixth seed in the playoffs. But they regrouped to reach the championship game.

Cheney Club was led by a group a hard-hitting and slick-fielding nine-year-olds: John Alexander, William Berberan, Casey Conley, Tom Conley, Jeffrey Dunn, Stephen Muller, Myers, Matthew Shaw and Brian Sullivan.

Wiz Kidz nine-year-old hitting and fielding starts included Alexander Andreosatos, Christopher Boyd, Ciccariello, Michael Jay, Stephen Matos, John Rowland, Jarred Ward and Robert Yovino.

Two North Quincy Boys' Soccer Players Suit Up For Metro Team

Two members of North Quincy High School's boys' soccer team selected to play for the Metro team in last week's Bay State Games held July 15-18.

Rick Loughmiller, midfielder/defender, and Steve Rochon, forward/midfielder, helped Metro shut out three of its opponents and compile a 3-1-1 record, which put it into the Gold Medal game against Southeast where it lost 1-0.

Rochon scored two of his team's nine goals and Loughmiller provided manmarking and solid defensive pressure.

The Bay State Games, "Massachusetts Own Olympics," provide an opportunity for the state's best athletes to compete with one another. UMass-Boston hosted the soccer competition.

Imaginative Insurance Wins Second Straight Title

INTERNATIONAL

Imaginative Insurance took two of three games to beat O'Brien's Bakery in the International Babe Ruth championship series.

It's their second consecutive title under the helm of manager Jimmy Abdou, who is 40-3 over the last two seasons.

"This was a challenge that we were all up for," said Abdou. "It is not easy trying to repeat. My boys worked as hard as any team at any level in this city."

Imaginative won the first game, 18-5, as George Camia struck out 15. Dave Grogan and Adam Ohara each had three RBIs. Shawn Richardson belted a home run.

O'Brien's took the second game, 15-13, and then Imaginative captured the crown with a 12-6 win in the final game. Dallas Hudgins pitched four innings and struck out six.

"If you ask around the league it is common knowledge that he is the league's most improved player," said Abdou. "He has worked extremely hard."

Grogan, Richardson and Brian French each had two hits. Mike McGuire collected four RBIs.

George Camia, McGuire, Grogan, Richardson, Hudgins and Ohara all batted over .300 while playing for Abdou.

"Those six guys had an amazing run," Abdou said. "It is sad to see them go."

Abdou, a second baseman for the N.A.B.A's Quincy Royals, is not sure if he will return next season.

"I want to enjoy this championship for a while," he said. "I'm not really sure right now. I'm looking forward to helping the Quincy Royals make the playoffs now. I'll make a decision after the season."

Jaehnig Chiropractic Wins Two Play-Off Games

JUNIOR LEAGUE

In Quincy Junior League baseball playoff action, Jaehnig Chiropractic has used excellent pitching, great defense and timely hitting to win its first two games.

In a 14-1 victory against Burke Club, Dave Jaehnig tossed a one-hitter and struck out 14, including the first seven batters to earn the win.

It was the third one-hitter of the season, to go along with a no-hitter, for Jaehnig.

Chris Marinelli and Mo Al Khatib smacked three hits apiece and combined for five RBIs to lead the offensive attack.

John Fitzgerald, Matt Tobin and Matt Jaehnig each had two hits.

Conor Roche broke up the no-hitter with a double in the last inning that drove in Tim Randell for Burke's only run.

Jaehnig Chiropractic - 4
Colonial Federal - 0

Jonathan O'Conner mixed a hard fastball and nasty changeup to hold the powerful Colonial team to only two hits.

John Santon was just as good, holding Jaehnig scoreless after three innings with five strikeouts.

Jaehnig finally broke through in the fourth inning. Tobin singled, went to third on Kevin Donovan's double and scored when Matt Jaehnig laid down a perfect squeeze bunt. Donovan scored when his aggressive base running drew a wild throw to third base.

David Jaehnig drove in an insurance run in the fifth inning on single to center and scored on Marinelli's single.

Ten-year-old Nick Al Khatib made a spectacular play in right field when he nailed a Colonial runner at first base in the last inning.

Nick Malvestri and Dan Scribi had hits for Colonial.

Colonial Federal Opens With Wins

Colonial Federal opened the little league playoffs with a 7-2 victory against South Shore Buick in recent action.

Raymond Marchand pitched a strong game, fanning 11 in six innings. Nick Malvesti had a triple, two singles and two RBIs and played well behind the plate as he threw out two runners on the base paths.

Dave Djerf knocked a two-run single in the fourth inning and Dan Scribi had three RBIs.

For Buick, Mike Arafat was effective, striking out nine before giving way to John Ridge in the sixth.

John Folino blasted a fourth-inning home run while Matt Haskins had two hits.

Colonial Federal - 9
Kiwanis - 2

David Djerf and Nick Malvesti each belted two-run home runs while Ray Marchand had a double, two singles and two RBIs.

John Santon turned in an eight-strikeout performance.

Dennis Layden and Michael Garland each pitched three strong innings for Kiwanis.

Mike McPherson crushed a sixth-inning home run and Andrew Patten added a triple.

Colonial Federal - 9
Lions - 4

Ray Marchand had a double, triple and an RBI and Nick Santon added a double and an RBI, as both players also combined to shut down the Lions from the mound.

Nick Malvesti stroked a two-run single in the fifth and Jeff Green and Dan Reggiannini also singled.

Chris Rooney came up with a big play, gunning down Sean Kane at home plate to end the game.

Jimmy Aikens and Joe Burlo pitched well for the Lions. Brett Martinson, Kane and Drew Loud provided solid hits for the Lions.

Residents Want Cleaner, Sandier Beaches

enjoyed not only in the summer but throughout the year by local residents," said Morrissey.

"The MDC needs to address many problems on the beach,," said Morrissey, "and this meeting gives the MDC the opportunity to view the beach and work with the Quincy delegation to make the beach safer, more structurally sound and more enjoyable for everyone."

The Quincy delegation was expected to point out the need for improvements to the seawall at the Fenno Street parking lot area and the need to continue its improvements of the park at East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive.

Morrissey said the officials will review the ongoing plans and improvements for Caddy Park, as well as the proposed improvements under the "Back to the Beaches" program.

"We want him to see first hand what a big role Wollaston Beach plays in Quincy," added Ayers. "The 27 miles of shoreline affect a lot of people, not only in Quincy but on the South Shore. "And there are a lot of recreational opportunities, " said Ayers, citing sunbathing, sailing and swimming.

He said traffic safety is an issue as well.

Meanwhile, Kelly and fellow commission members were expected to unveil the statistics compiled as the result of a beach survey mailed to all the city's taxpayers in late spring.

More than 2,000 surveys were returned, and two members of the Eastern Nazarene College faculty, Ken Constantine and Michael Roberts, and 14 students, input the survey data. The city's data processing department also was helpful, said Kelly who, along with some commission members finished up the task when the students went home for the summer.

According to the survey, residents said swimming at cleaner, sandier beaches was the number one priority among beachgoers. Many acknowledged they went to the beach only to sunbathe or to walk; only a small percentage went to the beach to swim, Kelly said.

In addition, more than four-fifths of the respondents said they visit other beaches on the South Shore or Cape Cod to go swimming because the water is cleaner and the beaches are sandy.

Another concern which emerged from the survey was that people want to see stepped-up efforts to minimize .pet waste on the beaches. Along Wollaston Beach, which is owned by the MDC, there are 17 stations where mutt mitts are available.

An interesting finding, he said, was that 93 percent of the respondents want to visit the Boston Harbor Islands from Quincy.

Sheets appointed the beach commission last October. In addition to Kelly, members include Douglas Gutro, Margaret Milne, Katie Barrett, M. Jane Gallahue, Robert Galligan, Robert Lescinskas Sr., Anne McDonald, Michael Morad, David Murphy and John Nigro.

The survey not only asked how frequently people visit the beach but specified which beach they favored and whether they also visited a beach outside Quincy.

The survey also asked respondents to rate on a scale of one to five on the cleanliness and water quality of the beaches they visit and what improvements they envisioned.

Public restrooms was one of the responses, as well as a suggestion to fly flags to indicate whether it is safe to swim.

The Quincy health department samples water quality at 10 beaches each Monday, according to Cynthia DeCristofaro, senior sanitarian. Recently, she said, it has rained after the sampling which can raise the level of the fecal coliform count.

She suggested that people wait between 24 and 48 hours after a rain before swimming in the public waters.

Samples are taken at the following beaches: Mound Beach and Avalon Beach in Quincy Point, Broady or Baker Beach in Germantown, Rhoda Street or Rockland Beach in Rock Island Cove, Houghs Neck, off Raccoon Island and Edgewater or Manet Beach, also in Houghs Neck.

On Quincy Bay are Parkhurst Beach in Houghs Neck, Post Island or Heron Beach on Adams Shore and Chickatabot Beach in Merrymount. Other city beaches include Orchard Beach, which faces Quincy Bay, and Nickerson Beach, which faces Dorchester Bay.

There are no lifeguards at the city's beaches, however.

DeCristofaro said the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority and the MDC sample water quality at Wollaston Beach daily, including weekends, at four locations — Milton Rod, Channing Street, Sachem Street and Rice Road.

At some point, the mayor would like to publish a brochure which highlights the beaches as well as some of the other coastline treasures, like Marina Bay and, some day, the Souther Tide Mill, said Kelly.

Morrissey Says Prostate Cancer Research Deserves More Funding

State Senator Michael Morrissey says "prostate cancer research deserves greater attention and funding in Massachusetts."

Morrissey said his amendment to earmark $500,000 for a prostate cancer research grant program was adopted by the full Senate during its Fiscal Year 2000 budget debate.

Morrissey's amendment establishes a Massachusetts-based scientific research grant program focused on prostate cancer prevention, detection and treatment. The program will be administered by the state's Department of Public Health.

"With one in five men estimated to develop prostate cancer, the Commonwealth has an obligation to do its part to find better treatments and, hopefully, a cure," said Morrissey.

Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death among all men.

The American Cancer Society and numerous prostate cancer support groups joined Morrissey in lobbying for greater funding for prostate cancer research. Morrissey stepped up his efforts in the Senate to increase prostate cancer funding after the House of Representatives level-funded DPH's prostate cancer account.

Men diagnosed with prostate cancer face the choice of possibly suffering either impotence or incontinence, Morrissey said. After a standard radical prostatectomy for the treatment of prostate cancer, 65%-90% of men develop impotence. Following a radical prostatectomy, 35% of men have incontinence, he said.

The prostate cancer research grant program will provide research "seed" money, which can be leveraged by researchers for greater federal funding for research, Morrissey said. One state grant recipient last year secured a $453,000 federal research grant with his research conducted using a $15,000 award for prostate cancer research from the Department of Public Health.

Morrissey noted "cancer research money in Massachusetts can lead to job creation." Cancer research money may also tie into an influx of pharmaceutical business, which further boosts Massachusetts' position as a champion in biomedical research, he said.

BUNIONS

Bunions are one of the most common foot ailments. These red, swollen, sometimes painful bumps near the big toe are a result of hallux valgus, a condition where the big toe rotates toward the second toe. Genetics and shoes can play a role in the development of bunions. The inherited shape and mechanics of some feet make them prone to bunions. Wearing tight or ill-fitting shoes is a major cause of bunions. If a bunion causes persistent pain, a podiatrist may prescribe orthotics (special shoe inserts). Another option is surgical correction. There are more than 100 different surgical treatments of bunions, many of which require the foot and leg to be in a cast and immobilized, perhaps for weeks.

It is important that bunions be recognized early and evaluated by a podiatrist. He or she can then offer several suggestions on controlling the cause of the bone deformity so that the symptoms do not arise or become more severe. Recommendations may include exercise, a change in footwear, orthotics, medication and surgery. Let us do what we do best - diagnose and treat your particular foot problems with compassion, knowledge and up-to-date equipment and techniques. We're located at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy. (617-472-3466).

P.S. To relieve pain associated with bunions, wear shoes with wide toe boxes and good insoles, try an anti-inflammatory like aspirin, place cold compresses on the area, or soak the foot.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Avoiding Heat Stress, Potential Complications

As the weather heats up, seniors should try to keep cool to avoid heat stress and potential complications like heat exhaustion, heat stroke, heart failure and stroke.

"Heat and high humidity can put a strain on your body. Seniors are especially vulnerable to prolonged exposure to high temperatures and humidity because of physical changes they've experienced," said Sandra Carlson, RN, clinical education specialist for Dedham-based Visiting Nurse Associates. The non-profit agency is part of VNA Care Network and provides comprehensive home health care to residents of Quincy and the South Shore.

"Knowing the warning signs of heat stress and taking precautions to avoid it can help keep you healthy during the summer," Carlson said.

Temperatures above 90 degrees Fahrenheit and/or high humidity are especially dangerous, but it doesn't take a heat wave to cause problems. If you experience any of the mild signs of heat stress, including feeling hot and uncomfortable, loss of appetite and lack of energy, try these tips for keeping cool from the staff of Visiting Nurse Associates:

- Exercise before 9 a.m. or after 6 p.m., when temperatures tend to be cooler.
- Stay in an air-conditioned public place, if possible, such as a library or senior center. If you are unsure if your town has a senior center or other air-conditioned place for seniors, call your local Council on Aging for further assistance.

If you are unable to go to an air-conditioned place on a hot and/or humid day, try to:

- Stay in the shade and out of direct sunlight.
- Take a slightly cool bath or shower.
- Put cool, damp towers on your body.
- Use fans to keep air circulating.
- Avoid strenuous activities.
- Wear light-colored, lightweight, loose clothing made out of materials that allow sweat to evaporate such as cotton. Avoid synthetic materials like polyester.
- Protect your head and neck when outside by wearing a hat or using an umbrella.
- Drink frequently to replace fluids lost by sweating. Avoid fluids containing alcohol, caffeine, or salt. If you have a problem with retaining water or a special medical condition, check with your doctor about the amount of fluids you should be drinking.
- If you use a stove, try to cook during cooler times of the day.
- Use salt tablets only with your doctor's approval.
- Don't ignore the warning signs of heat stress.

Contact a doctor or other health care provider if the mild signs of heat stress continue for a prolonged period of time after taking these actions. Contact a physician immediately if you are experiencing any of the following serious symptoms of heat stress: breathing problems, chest pain, cramps, diarrhea, dizziness, dry skin (no sweating), great weakness, mental changes, nausea, rapid heartbeat, throbbing headache and/or vomiting.

For more information, call (800) 728-1862.

SNAPPING OR POPPING OF JOINTS

Quite often a patient will demonstrate how their foot makes a "snapping or popping" sound when a joint is moved in a certain way. The patient invariably then asks: "Is this something to worry about?" These "snapping syndromes," as they are called in some text books, are common and often do not cause any harm.

Some conditions, however, can cause more pronounced symptoms and may have to be treated. Most people respond to conservative care like physical therapy, local injections and modifying their activities. Surgical treatment may be necessary in some cases like the peroneal tendons (tendons that pass on the outside of the ankle). The hip (caused by the iliotibial band) and the scapula or shoulder blade (caused by an abnormal relationship between the scapula and the rib cage).

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

RIGID THINKING

One of the claims car makers often make about their products involves improvements in "torsional rigidity." This term refers to the automobile's ability to resist twisting forces. In addition, designers pay great attention to "bending rigidity" and "resonant frequency" (which refers to vibration). Why should these seemingly arcane elements be important to car buyers? In order to avoid the squeaks and rattles that consumers associate with poor-quality vehicles, car makers must produce products with good overall rigidity and natural frequencies (vibrations) that do not overlap among the vehicle's many subsystems. When these factors are taken into proper account, consumers realize the benefit in the form of a "carved from granite" feeling when they drive the vehicle.

Don't neglect your car whether it is owned or leased. It represents a sizable investment. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO invites your inquiries about most anything connected to the care of your car. Our ASE Certified technicians are highly skilled so they can do everything necessary to keep your car in excellent running condition whether that means something simple to complex engine work. HOCUS-FOCUS

Find at least six differences in details between panels.

CRITIC'S CORNER

INSTINCT: If you ask me, you can't miss when seeing a movie starring the inimitable Sir Anthony Hopkins. And, while this flick is a bit weak on plotline, the actor delivers the goods anyway.

Hopkins stars as Ethan Powell, whom we first meet as a patient in a mental institution. In his former life, Powell was an animal behaviorist who once lived for two years with a family of African primates. Arrested for the murder of two park rangers in Rwanda, he has been shipped off to a Florida prison for the criminally insane.

Once there, Powell retreats into himself. He refuses to speak, not even to discuss his case, and he has no contact with his wife and daughter. The only behavior he exhibits in terms of communication is animalistic violence against the brutal prison guards.

Cuba Gooding, Jr. portrays Theo Caulder, a young, idealistic psychiatrist who is determined to crack Powell's silence so that it can finally be determined what exactly happened in that African jungle. Mentoring Caulder is Dr. Ben Hillard (Donald Sutherland).

In a series of flashbacks elicited from Caulder's sessions with Powell, we see the animal behaviorist's life with his beloved gorillas. And, we finally learn what triggered Powell to murder those two park rangers, which won't come as much of a surprise to the audience at that point in the movie.

Layered into this are various subplots revolving around the other inmates, the prison administrators, doctors and guards. As a result, the whole thing gets a bit muddled and loses focus.

This one's rated R due to its violence. Keep the kiddies home!

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) In business, only meet with the associates you know best, for their questions are most predictable. If many answers come to mind, choose the first one – it's as safe a guess as any.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There is much to be learned from the people around you, whether they are near to your heart or far removed. You need new ideas and fresh viewpoints right now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your own counsel and do not initiate any projects for the time being. Examine your motivations closely, as they may be questioned by others.

CANCER (June 21 July 22) Think in terms of "we" instead of "I." Now is the time when teamwork and cooperation could take you to the next level.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You feel drained of energy and willpower. Be cautious of potential manipulators trying to get their way with you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Life looks as bright as a technicolor happy ending. Everywhere you look, someone wants to give you a hug or a pat on the back.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Survey your surroundings carefully before making any adjustments. When redecorating, remember that the most subtle touches often are the most enjoyable.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You are so cordial and congenial, you even surprise yourself. It's so obvious that you have an inside track; people find it pointless to argue.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Take yourself on a little retreat from the pressures of day-to-day life. However, this retreat should include more education than recreation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Get out on the catwalk and show 'em what you've got. The cameras are clicking and the reporters are ready – not to mention the fan club.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A tidal wave of emotion may sweep through your mind, leaving you soaked and bewildered. Get to the highlands as fast as you can.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Love and romance make it impossible for you to think about business matters. Take a few deep breaths and let your head clear.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Peculiarities and puzzles delight you, and there are few mysteries that you will not try to solve. You understand that the universe holds much more than we can comprehend at this time, but that knowledge only encourages you to invent new things and explore new places.

Board Places Taxi Complaints On File

Complaints from Kevin V. Cook, Quincy Police Hackney Officer against the Marina Bay Taxi, Inc, were placed on file Tuesday by the License Board.

Cook, who had inspected the cabs at their site in Braintree, and found some of them in disarray, told the board all he wanted was "cleanliness and more cooperation".

Cook told the board that on a recent inspection on the cabs he cited a "lack of cooperation" and was later told to leave the premises. He complained about that and said "I did not enjoy them asking me to leave" and added "I left in a gentlemanly manner."

Cook said several of the cabs did not have air conditioniong and the company was given nearly two months to have them installed. But, he said when he went back two months later in June, it had not been done as yet.

Citing many bald tires, back to when Marina Bay Tax was located on Sumner St., Cook said he got "tired of waiting for the tires to be replaced" while he waited as the cab company knew he would be inspecting at a certain day.

Cook said with Quincy promoting tourism, the company should be a "little more intent on keeping the cabs they way they should"

Atty. Robert Fleming told the board he thought the company was "making progress" and said as of June, all the cabs were given stickers and all passed inspection. He said cabs run 24 hours a day, and sometimes "do get dirty".

Police Chief T Thomas Frane lauded Cook for "doing a good job" with the cabs as well as his position as a traffic officer. He said he hoped the level of communication would improve and said part of the problem is that the Marina Bay Taxi is located in Braintree when the license is issued in Quincy.

Chairman Joseph Shea said Abdellati Nannaa, owner of the cab company calls him constantly asking him about relocating in Quincy. Shea said he doesn't want the problems repeated from the ones the cab company had on Sumner St. and is looking for a location that is not residential

Shea said he would seek the advise of the law department, and then re-issue rules and regulations to all three cab companies in Quincy.

Shea questioned the citizenship law whether or not a driver had to be born in the United States; if a driver had to obtain a green card; or if they had to live in the City of Quincy.

Beauty Academy Razed For New Bank

The former Quincy Beauty Academy, a 118-year-old three-story building on Franklin Street, opposite Delaney's Pub, was razed Monday to make way for a new branch of the South Shore Cooperative Bank.

The bank, founded in 1890, is headquartered in Weymouth at 195 Washington St. The bank is expected to open early next year.

Said John J. O'Brien Jr., president and CEO of South Shore Cooperative, the new branch will include an ATM and a drive-through.

"Our bank is growing," O'Brien said earlier this winter when the bank first applied for permission to build the new one-story building. Since then, it has received permission from the state Banking Commission to acquire the East Bridgewater Co-operative Bank.

positions. Frane said he has been budgeting those job slots into his operating budget so that the impact of the cost won't be drastic when the city begins to pick up the costs.

"We had intended to expand because of community policing, and it makes sense to take advantage [of this grant]," he said.

Board Continues Request To Hold Irish Festival

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board continued until August 3, a request from Peter Kerr, owner of Bad Abbot's for a one day license to hold an Irish Festival Sunday Sept. 26 in the Hancock parking lot in back of 1546 Hancock St.

Kerr said because of the large Irish community, he thought the festival, which is held in other cities and towns would be good for Quincy.

He said Bad Abbot's has been promoting "Family Day" on Sundays and this would be in conjunction with that.

A musician, Kerr said if he gets approval from the board, he has three top bands in Ireland who will come here to perform.

The festival would be from 12 noon to 8:30 p.m. in a lighted tent and stage. Kerr said he would have a designated area for the sale of beer only.

Projecting that the event would draw between 5 to 6,000 in attendance, Police Chief Thomas Frane said a police detail would be necessary.

Maralin Manning, executive secretary to the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said while the "concept is great" she had concerns about other eating places in the area and their lack of parking during the festival.

Manning suggested that those attending the festival park their cars in the he garage.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he would notify all licensees in the area in case they would want to serve food at the festival.

Three More Take Nomination Papers, Two Others Withdraw

Three more candidates have taken out nomination papers for this year's city election but two others have withdrawn.

Patrick Conroy, 42, of 272 Billings St., North Quincy, a nurse, took out papers for city council at-large. He has run for office in the past.

Jens Thornton, 75, of Orchard St., Squantum, took out papers for the Ward 6 city council seat. Thornton, who is retired, has run several times in the past for the council.

Robert Foley, 71, of 41 Algonquin Rd., Merrymount, an engineer, obtained papers for the school committee.

But two who had taken out papers earlier informed the Election Department that they would not file them.

Paul Holland, Jr. of 195 Centre St., West Quincy, withdrew as a candidate for councillor-at-large and William Donovan of 108 Hamden Circle, Wollaston, as a candidate for the school committee.

Candidates have until July 27 to obtain and file nomination papers for this year's election.

Barry Withdraws, Creates Open School Seat

Stage Set For Council Battles

The stage for battles for seven city council and three school committee seats was set at Tuesday's filing deadline for nomination papers.

Preliminary election runoffs Sept. 14 were all set for the three city council at-large seats, and open council seats in Wards 1 and 6.

A surprise open school committee seat developed late in the day when incumbent Sean Barry informed officials he was withdrawing and would not seek reelection due mainly to new job duties and responsibilities.

Barry has been promoted to Vice President for Institutional Advancement at Quincy College and is in his sixth year on the School Committee.

With three open seats it means that Quincy will have at least two new councillors and one new school committee member take office in January, 2000 in the new century.

And two ward incumbents can virtually be certain of being there with them. Ward 2's Daniel Raymondi, 51, and Ward 4's Michael D'Amico, 24, have no challengers.

Mayor James Sheets, 64, will be seeking a sixth term and has only Robert Boussy, 43, of Farrington St. an opponent. For a while it appeared he would have a major opponent in Paul Harold who then decided not to challenge.

A total of 29 candidates filed nomination papers for nine council seats, three school committee seats and the mayor's office.

The council at-large race figures to be the main political event this year with three incumbents and a ward councillor fighting it out for three seats in a field with three other candidates who could affect the outcome.

Incumbents Tim Cahill, 41; Paul Harold, 51; and Frank McCauley, 71, will be trying to fend off City Council President Peter Kolson, 53, who gave up his Ward 1 seat to run at-large.

Also after one of the three seats are Joseph Finn, 43, of Williams St., a political newcomer and former director of Fr. Bill's Place shelter for the homeless; David McGillicuddy, 58, of Elwood Ave., retired telephone executive and Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, 68, of Clay St., former businesswoman.

McGillicuddy was runner-up two years ago and Stenberg was a candidate in that election.

The Ward 1 and Ward 6 council races have shaped up as this year's election co- features.

Five candidates are after the Ward 1 seat Kolson is leaving to run at-large. They are:

Gretchen Grant, 70, of Bicknell St., at home; Greg Hanley, 33, of Shed St., sales manager; Russell Patten, 25, Babcock St., a June law school graduate; Wil-

Mass. Electric Donates $100,000 For N.Q. Beautification Project

New England Power and its affiliate, Massachusetts Electric, presented a $100,000 check to Mayor James Sheets Tuesday for the gateway beautification project in North Quincy.

In a brief ceremony Tuesday morning at the Adams Inn, officials from the utility presented an oversized check.

The money has been earmarked for sprucing up the area from the Neponset River bridge to Newport Avenue Extension.

In a $25 million project New England Power is installing two new 115-kilovolt underground transmission cables for a distance of about 3.3 miles in Dorchester and North Quincy.

The new cables, which run from Squantum Point along Commander Shea Boulevard, will connect Boston Edison's Dewar Street substation in Dorchester and Massachusetts Electric's Spruce Street substation in North Quincy. Modifications to both substations will be in April

Modernization Work, Loan Payment Lag

Shipyard Seen 'A High Risk'

By MARILYN JACKSON

Not only is the modernization of the Fore River Shipyard 10 months behind schedule, but the shipyard owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries Inc. (MHI), has fallen behind its payment schedule with Fleet National Bank.

Fleet loaned MHI $55 million to revitalize the shipyard. An interest payment of $1.5 million on the loan, guaranteed by the Maritime Administration (MARAD), was due in June.

The Office of the Inspector General of the Department of Transportation, which oversees MARAD, last week urged MARAD to reassess the financial worthiness of MHI in light of the missed payment and MHI's request for a deferral.

Raymond DeCarli, deputy inspector general, in a report obtained by The Quincy Sun, concluded that MHI's risk of default had materially increased.

The City of Quincy, along with Fleet, the Massachusetts Development Finance Agency, the Massachusetts Water Resources Agency and the Commonwealth, is among the entities which have loaned close to $100 million to MHI to refurbish the shipyard and create manufacturing jobs.

Quincy obtained a $7.8 million HUD loan on behalf of the shipyard, and is due a $258,880 payment from MHI. According to documents executed with the federal government, Quincy can't be paid by MHI until the federal-guaranteed loan is paid first.

"This is their first payment," said Councillor-at-large Paul Harold, a vocal critic of the shipyard's owner, Sotirios Emmanouil.

"This is not even into the long-term payback," Harold continued. "The bottom line is that as a result of MHI's non-payment to Fleet, the risk [of the shipyard] has to be reassessed."

But Mayor James Sheets

Exterior Walls Up By August

Crane Library Addition At Half-Way Point

By MARILYN JACKSON

This week marks the half-way point of the $15 million construction project of the Thomas Crane Library, said Ann McLaughlin, library director.

"By the end of August, all of the exterior walls should be up, the granite, brick and brownstone, and people will be able to see what the building will look like," she said.

This week workers will finish laying the red slate on the roof on the additions, except for the rounded roof of the cable studio, which will be copper. That should be installed this week as well, said McLaughlin.

The next phase, once the building is water-tight, will be to install the rough plumbing, the duct work for all the mechanical systems and the stairways.

"The architects say that once the outside is up, [the project] goes very quickly.

"It will take nine months, until next April, to complete the new addition. Then we will shift over to the old building, the H.H. Richardson building, which will take three to four months," she said.

"We've already done some restoration work," she continued. The stone has been cleaned, and the granite and brownstone have been repointed."

In front of the building is a mockup of all the materials which will be used in the new building to give the architects an idea of how the colors will go together and to make sure the colors are what they wanted, explained McLaughlin.

Then, the various city officials, the historical commission and the contractors take a look at the materials before giving their final approval.

"It's a lot more complicated," said McLaughlin, "at least from a lay person's point of view."

She said Stiles and Hart of Bridgewater is manufacturing the bricks, baking them in kilns in an almost antique method. When the bricks were delivered, however, some were as much as a half-inch shorter.

As a result, the recourse of the building had to be reconfigured and additional bricks ordered. However, said McLaughlin, this additional work will not be an added cost.

She said she did not know why some of the bricks were shorter than expected and suggested that less moisture in the clay as a result of a dry season contributed to the problem.

In addition, she said, the brownstone actually is precast concrete. Brownstone is hard to find, and the precast concrete can be replicated.

The red slate used in the roof is authentic, she said. For the granite, the library is using stone from two different quarries. The Pink Sparta granite is from Georgia; the Woodbury granite, a gray color, is from Vermont.

Interestingly, when the Coletti addition was constructed in 1938 as a Work Projects Administration job, the architects obtained quarried stone from Longmeadow, the same quarry Richardson had used in 1881. But this stone was from a different vein and had a greenish, rather than a pinkish, tinge.

In designing the new addition, the architects brought elements of both the Richardson and Coletti buildings to bear to unify old and new., said McLaughlin.

"In the Richardson [building] restoration, another whole series of testing was done, including visiting other Richardson buildings — such as Trinity Church and the parish house in Copley Square and the Ames Library in Easton — and/or comparing photographs to restore the interior as close to the original as possible.

"The original paint around the windows was dark green, not brown," said McLaughlin. "I remember as a child a green storm door to the building," she said, validating a long-ago memory.

McLaughlin, who grew up in Quincy, has worked at the Thomas Crane Library since graduating from college in 1971. She was named director six years ago.

"There will be a lot of woodwork, a light cherry, in the new space," she continued, like the Richardson building, which has wood ceilings and carvings.

The alcoves in the original building will be rebuilt, and wooden floors will be installed, just as they once were. She said the painted walls once were papered with lincrusta, a leather-like covering, and the architects are researching the possibility of using it again. It continues to be manufactured both here and in England, she added.

The center of activity will be housed in the new addition. From a 65-car parking lot, library visitors will walk past the children's room and enter the building which includes a three-story atrium.

The children's room will be about 6,000 square feet of space, about three times its present size, with a circular story room, a special area for a collection on parenting and separate bathrooms for the youngsters.

Behind the atrium will be a large meeting room which can accommodate 150 persons, toilets and a small kitchen. The atrium could be used as a function area also.

In the future, McLaughlin said, "we're hoping to have a cafe off the atrium and we'll put out a request for proposals.

The first or ground level also includes the behind-the-scenes technical area, where books are catalogued, shipped to branches or received. This area is not open to the public, but the large reading area in the Coletti building will remain.

On the second level, accessed by a grand stairway or by an elevator, will be the young adult room, dedicated to the memory of Harry A. And Louisa P. Beede. This level will be the browsing area, with fiction and nonfiction, all the new books, videos and audios.

On the third level will be the reference area, a computer classroom and a suite of rooms for literacy classes. In addition, there will be administration offices, three small study rooms which can be reserved and a Lions room with adaptive equipment for the visually impaired.

McLaughlin said the Quincy Lions Club has donated $40,000 for equipment which will scan printed material and provide

$15,000 Grant To Digitize Granite Images

The Thomas Crane Public Library has been awarded a $15,000 grant from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners to digitize 1,000 images of the granite industry.

Library director Ann McLaughlin said the library's web site already includes some pictures of the early days. "This is exciting," she said.

The web site address is http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/htm.

Several of the images are from the library's Francis Parker Collection. Parker was Quincy's building inspector in the late 1800s and documented hundreds and hundreds of buildings and scenes.

She said the library won't receive the money until October from the state legislature, and the project will extend through the fiscal year which ends next June 30.

"This is a wonderful way for people to see our archival material who otherwise might not be able to see it," she said.

"You'll be able to look at these images wherever you are, not just in Quincy."

Quincy Hospital Children's Safety Day

QUINCY HOSPITAL'S annual Children's Safety Day attracted nearly 200 children from surrounding communities. Among those attending were Quincy youngers (clockwise from top left): Zachary Silverman, age 3, who met McGruff the Crime Dog; Jennifer Ellison, age 6, who got a ride on a stretcher from Fallon Ambulance EMT Steve Orsini; Victoria Barney, age 7, who was fingerprinted by a member of the Citizens' Police Academy Alumni Association; and Matthew Beam, age 5, who donned a fire helmet from the Quincy Fire Department. The event teaches children and parents about safety as well as update important records such as fingerprints and height and weight measurements.

Sheets Seeks Beach Partnership With MDC

Quincy's 27 miles of coastline is one of the city's biggest assets, and Mayor James Sheets would like to promote its mostly hidden treasures.

According to a survey conducted by the mayor's beaches and coastal commission, the majority of those surveyed want their beaches cleaner and sandier so they won't have to go elsewhere to swim.

Quincy has 10 small, city-owned beaches; the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) owns the expansive Wollaston Beach. Only 7 percent of the respondents, 2,145 residents, said they swim at Quincy beaches.

The next step for the commission is to make recommendations for a beach program in fiscal year 2000 that will make the beaches user-friendly to families, Sheets said.

The survey results were formally unveiled at a conference at Mound Street Beach in Quincy Point. Commission members noticed that day that there was no one on the thin strip of sand at the edge of the tidal Town River.

With additional work by the commission, the mayor hopes to promote all the beaches, including Wollaston Beach.

"I would be very receptive to form some sort of partnership with the MDC," said Sheets. "That could include jointly doing recreation programs on the beach, basically participating in keeping it clean.

"The MDC could involve us in beautification, in terms of planting flowers and hanging banners," he said.

"The general feeling is that certain MDC resources are stretched very thin across a substantial area, but perhaps we could work in a cooperative venture."

He said he was proposing a cooperative effort "not because we have any complaints but because working together we all can do a better job and we would be adding to their resources."

Sheets said he has asked Leo Kelly, chairman of the beach commission, to make recommendations to him which then will be presented to various department heads to develop a budget.

Keeping all the beaches consistently clean will be a top priority, and putting sand on the beaches would be another consideration, he said.

The commission may want to recommend an area for picnicking, a pavilion, or an area where families could go down to the beach and barbecue, Sheets suggested. The commission may come back with a recommendation to install the barbecue units, which are welded together on a pole, at certain sites, he added.

Another budget item to be considered would be staffing beached with lifeguards. Presently, the only city lifeguards the city hires are at the Lincoln-Hancock School pool.

Kelly said he was pleased with the survey, which represented an 8 percent response of the surveys mailed out with the real estate tax bills.

And he thanked the two members of the Eastern Nazarene College faculty, Ken Constantine and Michael Roberts, as well as the city data processing department, who compiled the data. More than a dozen Eastern Nazarene students helped input the survey data until their semester ended, at which point some commission members finished the task.

EXTOLLING THE QUALITIES of Quincy beaches, Leo J. Kelly, third from right, chairman of the Mayor's Commission on Beaches, presented Mayor James Sheets, fourth from right, with the commission's survey of residents' beach concerns. With them last week at the Mound Street Beach were Council President Peter Kolson, who is Ward 1 councillor; Michael Roberts of Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy harbormaster Bernie Reisburg, Douglas Gutro, vice chairman of the beach commission, Ken Constantine of Eastern Nazarene College, beach commission members Margaret Milne, secretary, Robert Lesciuskas Sr. and Michael Morad, Mayor Sheets, Leo Kelly, David Murphy of the commission, and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott. At the time of the meeting, no one was using the beach, said Kelly.

Emergency Management Desperately Needs Vehicles

Quincy Emergency Management, a 501c(3) nonprofit agency, is in desperate need of vehicles to perform its day-to-day duties, according to Deputy Director Tony Siciliano.

"We are asking for your help in this matter, and if you can donate one of the following we would greatly appreciate it," Siciliano said.

Specifically, QEA needs the following vehicles:

- 15 passenger van for transportation of personnel.
- Pick-up truck for transport of equipment.
- Donation to help purchase one of the above.

Ryan Calls On Ward 1 Candidates To Reduce Number, Size Of Signs

Ward 1 City Council candidate William Ryan is calling on all the candidates for that seat to agree to reducing the number and size of campaign signs in the ward.

Ryan said he is referring to both signs erected on private property and those held in standouts.

He said numerous large signs would "distract from the beauty and tranquility of Ward 1 neighborhoods."

"And," he added, "in some instances signs can present a public safety hazard when placed in such a manner so as to block the view of driveways and intersections."

Ryan asked that the candidates agree to limiting the size of the signs to 14 inches by 22 inches and the number of them.

Fundraiser To Help Cahill Legal Defense

Councillor Tim Cahill has a fundraiser coming up Aug. 4 but not for his re-election campaign chest. This one is for his legal defense fund.

The committee holding it notes it is doing so "in support of Tim's efforts to safeguard the neighborhoods of Quincy."

CAHILL

More specifically it's to pay his legal fees defending against a conflict of interest charge brought over the proposed controversial Highpoint development on Quarry St.

The city is not picking up Cahill's legal tab. It's coming out of his own pocket. And the pockets of friends and supporters.

"It's going to cost me some money," says Cahill who has retained prominent attorney Tom Kiley to defend him.

Kiley is also defending the city and council in a suit brought by developer Dean Stratouly and his company over the council vote.

The city has allocated $250,000 to fight that.

But the conflict of interest charge brought against Cahill by the Building and Construction Trades Council of Quincy and the South Shore is a separate matter.

The union claims Cahill was in conflict when he took part in council hearings and discussions and voted on the matter because family members own property near the Quarry St. site.

The conflict case is in Quincy District Court where special efforts have been made for a level playing field and to keep the case itself from any possible conflict.

TOBIN

First, Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin called in an out-of-town clerk magistrate (Daniel Sullivan, Attleboro District Court) to determine if a complaint should be issued.

Then Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating called in an out-of-town special counsel (Patrick Bomberg, Plymouth County assistant district attorney) to prosecute the case.

KEATING

Cahill has pleaded innocent and a pre-trial conference is set for Aug. 19 at Quincy District Court.

"We are still attempting to have the case dismissed," says Cahill. "I did not benefit in any way from my vote. I don't feel that I was in conflict."

The union also filed a complaint with the state Ethics Commission which is looking into the matter but at this time saying nothing.

"They've talked to members of my family and others," Cahill discloses.

The fundraiser is being held from 7 to 10 p.m. at Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., coincidentally -- or not -- just down the street from the proposed Highpoint site.

Suggested donation is $20.

"You're not going to raise a lot of money at that price," someone said.

To which Cahill responded:

"Money isn't everything. Just seeing people there to show their support means a lot to me."

Colonial Encampment Saturday In Squantum

Two hundred Colonial Minutemen will set up camp on the shores of Squaw Rock and Moon Island in Squantum this weekend for the third annual Blacks Creek Muster.

The educational event will take place Saturday, July 31 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 1 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the field located beside the Nickerson Post in Squantum.

The Colonial Encampment, sponsored by the City of Quincy, is hosted by Massachusetts Council of Minutemen and First Night Quincy.

Visitors are welcome to walk through the camps and witness military drilling, battle reenactments, listen to live fife and drum music, enjoy the aroma of open fire cooking, learn how to make candles, pottery, leather items and witness colonial wood working in action.

Young minutemen can join in by becoming the latest recruits in the militia. Youngsters will learn military drilling and experience what it was like for a young minuteman in the 1700s.

Mike Cheney, chairman of the Blacks Creek Muster event, said he hopes the event attracts local neighbors. "If it not everyday that 200 colonial minutemen will set up a camp close to your neighborhood," he said.

More than 2,000 people attended the event the first year. Cheney said he expects this year's event will draw 2,000 to 3,000 people.

For more information, call Cheney at 471-1493 or 592-2501.

Highpoint, Condo Trash And Shopping Carts

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Many years ago, the consumate neighborhood pol Tip O'Neill said, "All politics is local." He believed whether you were a city councilor, state rep or congressman that everything began and ended in the neighborhoods of your constituants.

It isn't just in knowing the problems but knowing how to fix them that really counts and gets remembered on election days. O'Neill served in public office for a half-century by remembering his roots.

I thought about this while listing the major issues apparently facing Quincy today. It ain't Kosovo. It ain't the trillion dollar deficit. It Highpoint apartments, condo trash and abandoned shopping carts.

Here are my thoughts. Highpoint is coming back to haunt West Quincy. Looks like it'll be bigger, more affordable and with lots more children. Fewer new traffic lights and the need for a new elementary school. The pols got us into this new mess and don't seem to have a clue what to do next.

Condo trash? My view, if you own a condo and pay property taxes like other homeowners in the city, you ought to get your trash picked up too. Otherwise, they should have a lower tax rate. One city councilor doesn't support collecting condo trash and says those owners shouldn't be treated like a special interest. I thought we all were special interests whether we owned a home, rented or owned a condo or business?

I don't understand the need for a pilot project. We just ought to do it like numerous other municipalities have decided to do. I don't care what previous folks inside City Hall negotiated with condo developers years ago. If you're paying property taxes to the city, you're entitled to the same services as other residential property owners pure and simple.

Finally, shopping carts. I want them at the supermarkets, not abandoned in my neighborhood. When the city council was talking about fineing supermarkets and talking about having city workers collect them around the city, I thought both ideas were foolish. However, now I'm not too sure anymore.

Back on Monday, July 12, I called the Newport Avenue Super Stop & Shop to complain about an abandoned shopping cart of theirs near the corner of Atlantic St. and Newbury Ave. The store manger promised me, they would send someone for it. Two days later, no action. I then drove to the Super Stop & Shop and reported this cart in person to that day's store manager. He again told me, it would be taken away. Today, is more than two weeks later and that abandoned shopping cart moves from one side of this neighborhood intersection to the other. I wish it would just move far away but I really wish Stop & Shop would do as it said. Perhaps, fines aren't such a bad idea after all.

Who would have guessed, shopping carts, houses on a dump and condo trash being the big three issues facing Quincy City Hall, eh?

Democracy And Close Up Foundation

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Democracy is not a spectator sport - for it to survive and flourish, we must all become involved. This is the message I heard from 534 Massachusetts high school students representing 38 area high schools who recently participated in the Close Up Foundation government studies program in Washington, D.C.

For a full week, these students had the opportunity to develop a better understanding of our democratic process. By observing Congressional proceedings, questioning journalists, and meeting with government advisors, the abstracts of history and the process of governing were transformed into concrete experiences. In addition, students were able to share their views with their peers from other areas of the country.

Participants can't help but return home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enshanced enthusiasm for involvement in the democratic process is to be lauded and admired.

The Close Up experience was made possible through the strong support of parents and educators. Also, various companies and organizations make Close Up fellowship funding available to students in financial need. These sponsors include The David and Lucile Packard Foundation and the Prentice Hall School Division. The Millipore Foundation also provides funds for individual student participation.

On behalf of Close Up, I would like to thank all those who helped in the coordination and funding of this year's program.

Lodge began his 13,500 mile state-wide campaign with a 6:30 a.m. stop at the main gate at the shipyard and following various stops in the city, including Angelo's Barber Shop in Quincy Center. He finished up his tour at a coffee hour at the Fenno St. home of Anita Ashby. His entourage consisted of 60 volunteer campaign aides, three buses and two station wagons, guided by city Republican leader Harold Nannis.

At the same time, Joan Kennedy was campaigning door to door in neighborhoods in West Quincy, South Quincy and Quincy Point. OFFICIALS BRIEFED ON JAYWALKING LAW

State D.P.W. Commissioner Jack Ricciardi was in Quincy to meet with local police and traffic officials to brief them on the state's new "permissive" anti-jaywalking law, officially known as the "Pedestrian Control Act." Permissive meant that the statute only took effect if it were accepted by the local government.

To encourage that acceptance, Ricciardi said that communities that failed to accept the law would have all permits for red and yellow traffic signals revoked. To further convince communities to accept the new law, he threatened cutting off Chapter 90 road funds for non-accepting cities and towns. Jaywalkers caught for their first offense would be fined $1, with a $2 fine for second and subsequent violations.

Those attending the briefing were city DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert, Captain Joseph Flaherty and Martin Walsh of the Quincy police and Laurence Donovan, superintendent of meters and signs.

Foot Notes
by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

OSTEOPOROSIS AND STRESS FRACTURES

Stress fractures in the foot can occur with weakened bones. Osteoporosis is a condition that effects a greater number of people every year. This condition causes a progressive loss of the minerals in our bones. Bone formation decreases and there is a gradual loss of bone strength. Although it effects women after menopause, it can occur slowly by age 70, effecting men as well as women. Osteoporosis is caused by other medical conditions including, thyroid imbalances, diabetes and rheumatoid arthritis. Risks include family history, smoking, alcohol use and decreased physical activity.

Treatment of osteoporosis usually includes increasing your physical activity. Walking is the number one recommended way to become healthy again. Mall walking, beach walking and walking at the high school track have become very popular. If you are more active, you can obtain and maintain good health. Increased activity brings risks of stress fracture to the small bones in the feet. Healing can be slow with these medical conditions. The most common finding in these injuries are inadequate shoe gear and support. Store purchased insersoles may offer some help, but may not be enough. Custom made shoe inserts from your podiatrist, called orthotics, can be prescribed to best help protect your feet from this injury.

When it's time to become more physically active, your podiatrist can help using knowledge and precision. With specific examination, testing and risk identification, an exact prescription for custom orthotics are made to reduce the most foot stress. Take the right steps to good health, call (617) 472-3466 for a foot care appointment at 110 West Squantum Street in North Quincy.

Fundraiser For Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Aug. 4

The Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee will hold a fundraiser Wednesday, Aug. 4 as part of a year-long effort to raise $10,000 to restore and preserve the history of the cemetery off Fenno St. near Wollaston Beach.

The event, which will include the appearance of the USS Constitution Color Guard, and Civil War era exhibits will be held from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad St.

The committee selected the August date because that month will mark the 133rd anniversary of the Sailors Home, which opened in 1866.

Another highlight of the fundraising event will be an exhibit of pictures and enclosed models of the Civil War era ships sailors buried at the cemetery served on. The items are being loaned by the Naval War College Museum in Newport, R.I.

There will also be pictures of Black's Creek painted by Mary Smith, Quincy landscape artist and an exhibit of Civil War artifacts provided by Chuck Fazio.

Also participating will be representatives from the New England Historic Geneological Society who have been instrumental in obtaining information on the veterans buried in the Sailors Home Cemetery.

The Proper Ladies, a Civil War reinactment team, will also be featured. Music will be by DJ Mark McGillicuddy.

Tickets are $25 per person and can be obtained by calling 617-472-7423. They will also be available at the door.

The committee is seeking to raise $10,000 through this and other planned events. The money will be used to repair damaged headstones, purchase a stone memorial describing the cemetery's history and listing veterans buried there and to erect interpretive signs that will be visible from Fenno St. The group also wants to repaint the flagpole and the fence that surrounds the cemetery.

In addition, historical information obtained by the committee will be incorporated into a book about the salt water marsh nature trail that is being updated by the nearby Beechwood Knoll School.

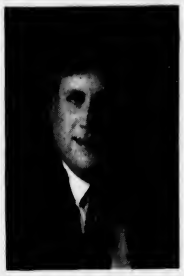
Barry Won't Seek Reelection To School Committee

In a surprise move, School Committeeman Sean Barry informed election officials late Tuesday that he will not seek re-election.

Barry, who is in his sixth year on the School Committee, said he made the decision due to new job responsibilities and plans to attend law school.

Barry was promoted to Vice President for Institutional Advancement at Quincy College in the spring.



"I now have more responsibilities and I feel that I need more time for them," Barry said.

In addition to his new position and plans for law school, he is also teaching history and government at the college.

Barry and Christine Cedrone made local political history in 1993 when they tied in that election with 5734 votes each.

It resulted in a joint session of the City Council and School Committee to decide the winner and Barry was their choice.

Barry served that two year team and was re-elected to a four year term.

SEAN BARRY

Cedrone was elected later.

Barry released the following statement on his decision not to seek re-election:

"There is not a single day that passes where I am not grateful for the opportunity the citizens of Quincy have provided to me. However, as I consider my personal and my career objectives for the next few years, I believe it is in my best interest to decline the opportunity to seek re-election. As a life-long Quincy resident, a Democrat, and as a person who lives and works in this city, I hope that I was able to contribute to public education and quality of life.

"We are fortunate to have a city that belies the impersonal urban image of the times. Quincy is a collection of great neighborhoods with people who care about one another and share an enormous sense of pride and pleasure with what our City offers.

"Working with Mayor Sheets, and my colleagues on the committee during these past six years was an affirmation of the nobility of public service. I am honored to have met them. I am honored to have worked with them. I have every confidence that they will continue on behalf of excellence in public education.

"While I leave now to pursue educational opportunity, I do not rule out a return to public service some time down the road. To my dear friends, supporters and to the citizens of Quincy I offer the thanks of myself and my family."

Joseph Newton Announces For Ward 6 Council Seat

Joseph Newton of Glover Ave., North Quincy, announces he will seek election for the Ward 6 City Council seat being vacated by Bruce Ayers.

Newton, 32, works for the State Street Corporation in the Accounting Operations Department in North Quincy. He is a lifelong resident of Ward 6 and has been active in the community. Newton comes from a family with a long tradition of civil service and political involvement Newton has worked on political campaigns for Sen. Michael Morrissey and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

"Having always been active and involved in the community, I believe as a Ward Councillor it is very important to be easily accessible and informative.. "It is imperative that the concerns of the residents are heard and property represented."

JOSEPH NEWTON

Newton said he understands that Ward 6 is geographically diverse and it is important that the councillor will "fairly represent all areas of Ward 6."

Newton said he is a strong advocate for the everyday issues that affect the quality of life in the community. Issues such as road and sidewalk repair, increased traffic flow, controlled development and the continued effort of cleaning our area beaches are amount his primary concerns for Ward 6, he said.

Newton expressed his interest in balancing ward and city issues that affect the residents of Quincy. Equally important he said is the financial future of the City of Quincy. "With an increase in property assessments and the additional tax increase attached for the Quincy Hospital, we have to carefully scrutinize the City budget," Newton said. "It is in the best interest of our residents to ensure the fiscal fitness of the City of Quincy. The economy has been good for several years and we should have been saving for a rainy day. We owe it to the taxpayers to always watch the bottom line."

OLDER AND WISER

When researchers at the Max Planck Institute in Berlin studied older persons' expertise in the fundamental matters of life, they found that wisdom grows with age. The study's criteria for wisdom included the possession of such qualities as insight, sound judgement, perspective and the ability to weigh conflicting values and generate good problem-solving strategies. When the researchers asked the subjects to think aloud as they responded to life dilemmas, they found that the older subjects consistently outperformed the younger ones on all measures of wisdom. They not only offered more thoughtful, sophisticated advice, but they scored as high as social workers and therapists who are trained to give advice about serious life problems.

Who says things don't improve with age? Our bodies may not be as spry as they used to be, but all you've learned throughout your life can help ease the stress of getting older. You know more clearly what's possible, what's reasonable and what's kind. At Marina Place, a senior living residence, we offer many apartments with views of the Boston skyline, harbor and salt marshes. You'll find friends, support and beautiful surroundings at Four Seaport Drive. Our 24-hour emergency call response system means that help is just a moment away. Questions? Call 617-770-3264.

P.S. Research also shows that the brain's storehouse of knowledge remains intact during old age and it is only the brain's "switches and connections" that deteriorate with age.

QCAP Accepting Applications For Cooling Assistance Aug. 2-20

Due to unseasonably hot weather in recent weeks, Massachusetts has received a $7.7 million federal grant to provide cooling assistance to low-income households.

Locally, the Cooling Assistance Program will be provided by agencies operating the Fuel Assistance Program. Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. is the service provider for Braintree, Milton, Quincy and Weymouth.

Eligible households will receive a one-time cooling assistance benefit of $75, paid directly toward their electricity account. Eligible households living in subsidized housing will receive a lower benefit of $25. Air conditioners and fans will not be purchased through this program.

Most households which received Fuel Assistance this past winter will receive Cooling Assistance. They will be notified of their eligibility by mail and they do not need to submit a new application to QCAP.

Cooling Assistance is also available to households who meet eligibility guidelines, even if they did not receive Fuel Assistance this past winter. People in this category must apply between Aug. 2 and Aug. 20.

Interested residents of Quincy, Braintree, Milton and Weymouth should call 617-479-8181, ext. 101, for further information.

Condo Trash Pickup Expected To Get Go-Ahead

When the City Council meets Aug. 2, the councillors are expected to ask Tom Fabrizo of the public works department to begin trash pickup at the city's condominiums.

The project could have begun this month, according to Fabrizio who has been working with the two dozen condominium associations within the city.

"It's a fairness question," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. "It's taxation without collection."

In 1997, the council adopted a resolution to study the feasibility of picking up trash at the multi-unit complexes in fiscal year 1999.

Then, the council recommended appropriating $60,000 for a pilot recycling program for each section of the city. "That did not happen," said Raymondi.

Now, he would like to see that money used as a pilot trash pickup program at the condos.

Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley questioned why renters who live in buildings with 12 or fewer units would be included in the pilot program.

"Condos have indivuals who pay property taxes," said Fabrizio.

"Rent payers pay taxes too," said McCauley, although they do so indirectly.

But expanding the trash pickup program could lead to bigger and costlier headaches for the city if businesses seek trash pickup too. Businesses pay taxes at a greater rate than residents.

South Shore Mental Health Dedicates Community Center

South Shore Mental Health dedicated its new Community Rehabilitation Center, 12 Hancock Cr., Quincy, with an open house Wednesday from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The Center is home to three programs which work together to support the integration of adults with mental illness into the community. These include the Center's existing Discovery Day Treatment Program, Intensive Community Support Beds, and new Life Enrichment Center.

Discovery Day Program is an adult day treatment program established 25 years ago which serves clients who are experiencing major mental illness. Professional staff provide group treatment in skill-building, insight-oriented and expressive therapies, rehabilitation, and socialization skills.

Intensive Community Support Beds provide temporary residential support for up to 30 days to individuals referred by the Department of Mental Health. The program is designed to offer the necessary supports for individuals who are in transitional situations including adjusting from hospitalization to a community setting.

The goal of the program is to help clients avoid future hospitalization, stabilize their lives, and begin the transitional process of making community and social connections.

Life Enrichment Center was developed out of a client focus group in which clients indicated the need for a social club. Classes have been designed to teach budgeting, cooking, meal planning, and personal daily living skills.

In addition, the Center provides information about resources and entertainment in the community such as libraries, adult classes, YMCAs, museums, movie theaters, and recreational activities. The center emphasizes building social and community connections.

The center was officially named the Janice Worswick Life Enrichment Center at the open house dedication Wednesday. Janice was active in the Discovery Day Treatment Program since its creation.

Legislators Form Air Transportation Caucus

Several state legislators, including Sen. Michael Morrissey, have formed the Legislative Caucus on Air Transportation to develop a more inclusive air transportation policy for the state.

"It is important for my colleagues and the public to understand that the mission of this caucus is not centered around Logan Airport," which has proposed a $25 million expansion.

"In reality, there is not a legislator in the Commonwealth who should not be concerned about air transportation. We especially hope that our friends from outside of the Boston area, specifically those from Worcester and New Bedford, would see the formation of this caucus as an opportunity to advocate for their regions and to change the course of air transportation policy for the better," said Morrissey.

In addition, he has signed onto legislation filed earlier by Reps. Robert DeLeo, D-Winthrop, and Eugene O'Flaherty, D-Chelsea, that would stop any further construction at Logan Airport and promote the increased use of and investment in regional airports.

In conjunction with that legislation, members of the caucus testified before the Joint Committee on Transportation and recently traveled to Washington, D.C., to meet with FAA Administrator Jane Garvey.

Joe Finn Candidate For City Council At-Large

Joseph G. "Joe" Finn, 43, former director of Father Bill's Place interfaith shelter for the homeless, Tuesday officially announced his candidacy for city councillor at-large.

JOE FINN

Finn, who left Father Bill's Place last September after seven years as director to become executive director of Shelter Inc/Family Life Education Inc., a non-profit agency for the homeless in Cambridge, will be making his first run for elective office.

"I admit up front I don't have all the answers", says Finn, "But sometimes, it is more important to have the right questions."

"I believe my greatest skill is that I am a problem solver. I usually bring a wide array of resources and people to bear upon any problem."

Finn, who lives at 15 Williams St., North Quincy with his wife, the former Delores McILmail and three sons, James, 7, Conall, 5 and Michael 2 notes that he has spent his entire professional life in public service, and as a homeowner and parent cares deeply about Quincy.

"There is a real feeling," he said, that there is a need for a national and consistent plan to ensure the appropriate growth necessary for a city this size and at the same time protect the quality of life that makes Quincy unique and a great place to live.

"We need more serving on the City Council with the perspective of planning and foresight that prevents us from a reactive approach to the events that surround us. The unintended consequences of such reactions wind up costing the ordinary citizens of Quincy a great deal."

While at Fr. Bill's Place, Finn created a national model for addressing the problem of homelessness and brought $2 million of new federal money for housing and services for Quincy.

He noted that he has nearly 10 years experience in non-profit management and has managed annual budgets in excess of $2 million.

As chairman of the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance, an advocacy organization of more than 70 non-profit agencies in the state, Finn said he has helped win millions of state budget dollars for important housing and service programs throughout the state.

Among his other accomplishments, Finn pointed to:

With Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services (QNHS), created O'Neil House, permanent housing for former homeless women.

Co-founded with QNHS the Quincy Veterans House named for Sheila McIntyre, one of only a few permanent housing programs for former homeless veterans.

Led the creation of a continuum of care planning process with the City of Quincy that won a national HUD practice award.

Organized Q-HELP (Quincy Hunger Education Learning Project) a unique service learning program that placed students from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools in service agencies in Quincy.

Implemented the first community voice mail programs in the northeast for individuals in employment and housing search.

Finn graduated in 1978 from Siena College in Loudonville, N.Y., with a Bachelor of Arts degree. He holds a Master of Arts in Sociology from the New School for Social Research, Master of Arts in Theology and a J.D. from the New England from the New England School of Law in 1997 and was sworn in to the Massachusetts Bar.

Bentley College in Waltham awarded Finn an honorary Doctor of Human Letters in recognition of his business and management principles to the problem of homelessness.

Finn presently serves on the Board of Directors of the recovery home, Galvin House; the local board of Atlantic House, a clubhouse serving the mentally ill in Quincy and on the Board of Directors of the volunteer group SERVE New England.

Finn was honored by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post as its Citizen of the Year in 1992.

PREGNANCY AND YOUR FEET
Pregnancy can definitely have an effect on your feet and how you walk. There are several factors that play a role like weight gain, a shifting of your "center of gravity," hormonal changes and an actual difference in the way your muscles work. The end result of this combination of factors is more joint and ligamentous laxity. This translates to the foot as an increase in pronation (flattening of the arch) and an out-toe gait (feet turning outward similar to the way a duck walks).
The dimension of your feet actually changes as well. Studies have tracked this to an actual increase of volume due to fluid retention. The feet do not seem to increase in length and width but the increased volume makes shoes feel tighter. Therefore, tighter shoes, postural changes and more loose ligaments and joints can lead to pathology. This may include foot pain, fractures of bones, ingrown nails and sprains. All these conditions are treatable and should not present a risk to the developing fetus.
If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

George Murphy Receives MBTA Award For Distinguished Service

George W. Murphy, Jr. of Quincy, a 25-year employee of the MBTA's Design and Construction Department, was recently awarded the prestigious Francis M. Keville Award at a ceremony held at the State Transportation Building.

The award, named for the late Frank Keville, an MBTA Construction Director who distinguished himself as one of the nation's foremost construction managers, is given to an employee who exemplifies the highest accomplishments on an MBTA project.

"Today, were are here not only to honor Frank Keville's exceptional job performance as past Director of Construction at the MBTA, but also, to acknowledge an employee who exhibit's Keville's work ethic, and spirit of accomplishment," said Secretary and MBTA Chairman Kevin J. Sullivan.

"Keville's philosophy of 'get the job done, but never sacrifice quality for work' is what a Keville Award recipient is made of," Sullivan added.

MBTA General Manager Robert H. Prince, Jr., described Murphy as an outstanding manager, leader, problem solver and team player.

"As an Area Engineer in the Design and Construction Department, he has managed many complicated and challenging construction projects throughout his career. From overseeing contractor operations for the Southwest Corridor Construction Project, and the Forrest Hills Station Project, to his work on a Service and Inspection facility to service commuter rail trains, George's expertise in engineering has guided these projects to completion," Prince said.

"He's worked his way through the ranks, now working on the Green Line Relocation and Garage Construction Project at North Station, a $86.3 million project," added Prince, "and he represents the best of the best in the workforce. We're proud of his accomplishments and to have him working at the T."

Born in Dorchester, Murphy has worked at the MBTA since 1974, working on a host of projects. Since 1990, he has been the area engineer for the North Station Project.

Frank Keville was a 23-year employee of the T until his untimely death in 1989. A native of Boston, Keville directed the construction of the Orange Line Southwest Corridor extension and the Red Line extension to Alewife.

He was recognized as a leading construction manager, and received many awards and honors during his distinguished career. A specialist on tunnel systems, Keville left the T shortly before his death to act as a special consultant to the Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel project.

The T established the award in 1990 to honor the memory and achievements of Keville. Murphy is the fourth recipient of the award. The Boston Society of Civil Engineering has initiated a scholarship in memory of Keville, which is awarded annually to a graduate student in the field of construction management.

Murphy received a commemorative plaque and a $500 savings bond.

Highpoint Remediation Plan Hearing Aug. 5

The environmental engineering firm of Haley & Aldrich Inc. will present its remediation plan for the proposed development site off Quarry Street at a public meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 5, at Quincy Hospital.

The two-hour meeting will be held in Room B-C, 114 Whitwell St.

Kathryn McCue, senior engineer, will outline the plan which calls for a barrier system for the site, which Congress Group Ventures has targeted for building up to 1,641 apartments.

Although the city council rejected the developer's earlier plans to build 1,191 luxury apartments, the developer has subsequently filed a request with the zoning board of appeals for a comprehensive permit to build 1,641 apartments on the Quarry Street site.

A hearing is scheduled at 7 p.m. Aug. 24 at Quincy High School.

The developer also has appealed the city council's decision, which is before the Norfolk County Superior Court. Dean Stratouly, principal in Congress Group Ventures, also has charged that the city is responsible for the cleanup of the site which, after quarry operations ceased, was used as a landfill.

"Congress Group Ventures is still the responsible party under law" to clean up the site, said Public Works Commissioner David Colton who plans to attend next week's meeting.

The consulting engineering firm of Weston and Sampson, which the city hired to review the original Highpoint proposal, is reviewing the remediation plan as well, said Colton.

The plan calls for placing two-and-a-half feet of clean fill over the accessible green space, covered by a half foot of topsoil and a mulched or vegetated surface.

The thick soil cover is considered adequate to isolate contaminated soils, according to the engineers.

In addition, asphalt pavement on the proposed streets on the site will consist of a foot of compacted gravel and/or clean fill, a two-inch base course of asphalt and a one-and-a-half inch thick top course asphalt. Walkways and parking areas will be covered with one foot of compacted gravel, one-and-a-half inches of base course asphalt and one inch of top course asphalt. As an alternative, this material may be replaced with a four-inch-thick layer of concrete.

Building foundations will serve as a barrier to the contamination as well, but until foundations are constructed, a one-foot-thick temporary soil cover will be placed in those areas.

The remediation plan also calls for installing dust monitoring stations, specific site entrances and vehicle barriers and wetland protection measures within the 100-foot buffer zone.

Public written comments on the proposed plan will be accepted from Aug. 6 until 5 p.m. Aug. 25 at Haley & Aldrich Inc., 465 Medford St., Boston, MA 02129, attention Kathryn McCue, senior engineer.

Ethics Are Important In Mortgage Lending

By CAROL BULMAN
Conway Financial Services

It doesn't matter what business you're in -- customers need to be educated about the advantage of working with a reputable company.

I recently had a conversation with a very special person during the "Conway Country" annual golf tournament to benefit the Main-Spring House homeless shelter in Brockton. Conway has sponsored a fund-raising golf tournament for the past 15 years to support the activities of the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless, which runs the shelter.

CAROL BULMAN

The special person I refer to is Dennis Carman, the shelter's director. He gives selflessly, day in and day out, to provide a respectable temporary home for many people in need. I would say this sets him apart -- maybe not from everyone, but certainly from most.

Dennis said something that made me take pause.

He had a read a recent article of mine of the abuses of sub-prime lending, and said that he felt it was important to discuss with the public -- the customer -- the nature of the abuses and then offer alternatives or ways to meet these challenges.

His message was that no matter what business we are in, our customers (in the case of a mortgage company) or guests (in the case of a homeless shelter) need to know the possible abusers of a system so they know that to look for and what to avoid.

It is important for a customer to know that in any business, there are those who will take advantage of the unsuspecting public. Therefore customers must be educated, must do their research, and ask lots of questions. But as I've said in this space before, go with reputation and go with someone you trust, because no matter how many laws and regulations there are, there are still human beings behind them -- either enforcing them or getting around them.

I thought about this as I considered the many variations of interest rates and terms advertised by banks and mortgage companies in the newspapers each week. In this business, we are often asked to substantiate to our customers what interest rates and terms we quote to a customer, and rightly so.

Unfortunately, enough lenders are quoting rates in the paper that cannot be delivered to cause our customers to be suspect of the business as a whole. This is an unfortunate side effect of the active market for purchase mortgages and refinancing loans.

So, what are the safeguards for a customer? The federal Truth-in-Lending-Act requires a lender to disclose to a customer within three days of a completed mortgage application the annual percentage rate (APR). The APR is the interest rate annualized over the life to loan to include points and other charges to the customer. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act requires that we disclose within the same time frame a Good Faith Estimate of Closing Costs, which spells out the fees tied to the loan.

Is there help for the customer at the early "shopping" stages? Lenders need to verbally quote the APR as well, and should review the closing costs, even over the telephone. They should also be asked if that interest rate can be locked or guaranteed and once "locked," how long it is valid. A borrower should get this in writing. If a customer is talking to a lender's representative from a remote location, request that this be faxed or e-mailed.

So, use your common sense. There are many reputable companies out there, thankfully more that are reputable than otherwise. Find out who they are from friends or call the state Division of Banks. Then do your homework and get your rates, fees and terms put in writing so you can make a fair comparison.

There are laws in place to protect you, and you should be aware of them and the governing bodies that will help you steer clear of unethical business practices.

Carol Bulman is president of Conway Financial Services, a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway & Co., that maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top mortgage lenders in the east and originates a full line of mortgage products. Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents and 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Inspector General Sees Shipyard 'A High Risk'

said he is not alarmed. "The money is there; I have a letter stating that.

"When the city was negotiating with the HUD loan program, Quincy received a $1 million HUD economic development incentive grant.

"That money was put in escrow so that if at any time during this startup period there was a delay in getting the funding to MARAD...the money due on the HUD Section 108 loan would come out of the $1 million grant," said Sheets.

"I thought there would be delays in the modernization process because of a lot of the problems that you have in trying to modernize an old shipyard. You don't know what you are going to run into in 21E problems, pollution, labor force, contractors.

"We did not know there would be a problem with the contractor," said Sheets, referring to O. Ahlborg & Sons. "There's a real question of performance.. That's one of the reasons why it is running 10 months behind," pushing the completion date to sometime in October or November.

Once construction of the first ship begins, MHI will be receiving revenues which can be applied to the loans.

Sheets said Emmanouil and Ahlborg are resolving the dispute privately.

"You can't control that. Right now we are having delays in all our [city] projects," said Sheets.

However, he said the city has paid the bank, Chase Manhattan, "so there is no delinquency in terms of the [MHI] payment.

"That money has to be replaced by MHI as soon as the waiver is granted by MARAD," added Sheets.

MHI has asked both MARAD and Fleet to grant a six-month extension to make the "interest only" payment due on the guaranteed loan, but no decision has yet been made.

The non-payment of the interest due Fleet prompted an inquiry by the Inspector General who sent a report to MARAD officials last week.

The Inspector General "has raised a red flag as to MHI's ability to pay back the federal government," said Harold.

"If MHI cannot service only the interest on only two loans, it never was sufficiently financed to begin with," charged Harold.

"The ratio of public to private money is not only unhealthy, it is obscene," he said.

Harold has asked Richard Meade, the city's director of planning and community development, to explain to the council at its next meeting Monday night the financial risk the city faces because MHI has not paid the amount due Quincy and the funds in escrow account were used.

Meade oversees Section 108 HUD loan Quincy obtained on behalf of the shipyard. Last Friday, before he went on vacation, he sent a memorandum to all the city councillors about the HUD loan.

The city was aware of "the very real possibility of delays during construction" which would force MHI to ask that the first interest payment due to the Maritime Administration be delayed for six months until December 1999, instead of June.

The delay means that payments to all other creditors also would be deferred, Meade stated. However, he added that MHI would pay the city no later than Nov. 30, 1999.

Meade's memo followed on the heels of a lengthy report by The Wall Street Journal July 21 stating that the shipyard was facing "waves of financial woes" and detailed the history of MHI, which acquired the shipyard from MWRA.

The Wall Street Journal story was a total exaggeration of what is happening," the mayor continued. "For example, there is no question about a contract to build six ships. That is a firm contract.

"The application was originally sent in [to MARAD] about three years ago. Certainly, everyone knows it must be updated and it will be updated."

But in his report, the Inspector General stated that MHI had not secured a shipbuilding project.

Shipyard owner Sotirios Emmanouil has stated repeatedly it has a contract with Intermare Navigation SA to construct six double-hulled tankers and has been seeking an additional $240 million in loan guarantees from MARAD to build the vessels.

Intermare president Emmanuel Popalexis is seeking $240 million in guarantees from MARAD to build the six oil tankers.

"Mr. Popalexis is one of the finest businessmen in Europe, and he is saying over, over and over again he will build the ships," said Sheets.

"There area number of people who don't want to see [shipyard] competition in the Northeast, who don't want to Sotirios Emmanouil to build the most modern shipyard in this country because he will be able to build ships cheaper than any other yard.

"That will raise questions in Congress," Sheets continued. "He will have a fully robotic shipyard which can build ships for 10 to 12 percent less. He will build tankers, military ships, Navy ships and repair ships. He's a competitor," said the mayor, "he's suddenly a major threat."

Sheets also questioned why the Wall Street Journal had not looked into the money — some $470 million — given outright to the Kirchner Shipyard in Philadelphia to revitalize that yard. "Sotirios Emmanuel is borrowing the money and he's paying the loans back," said Sheets.

In its news account, the Journal noted that Congress amended the Coast Guard Authorization Act to enable the Fore River shipyard to become eligible for federal loan guarantees. The amendment waived the requirement that economic soundness needed to be demonstrated for the revitalization of the Quincy yard.

In addition to the $55 million Fleet loan, the Massachusetts Development Finance Agency loaned $10 million to the project, while the MWRA loaned $7 million. The Commonwealth issued a $6.6 million letter of credit to the shipyard, and the general contractor, O. Ahlborg & Sons loaned the shipyard $2 million, according to the Journal which obtained data from the state.

Unless Fleet and MHI negotiate a deferral agreement on or about Aug. 1, Fleet could demand payment or declare the loan is in default, a Fleet senior executive informed MARAD nearly two weeks ago, according to the Journal.

Last month, when Fleet informed MARAD it had not received its payment, the inspector general urged MARAD to reassess the risk of default on the federally guaranteed loan.

Twice previously the inspector general had argued that MARAD should reevaluate the risk.

In November 1997, the Inspector General recommended that MHI's risk factor rating be reassessed and that evidence of shipbuilding contracts or alternative revenue sources to repay the loan be demonstrated.

However, MARAD, based on an opinion of the deputy general counsel of the Secretary of Transportation, concluded it did not have the legal authority to reassess the risk factor prior to closing the loan

MARAD also stated that the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1996 precluded it from requiring MHI to meet the economic soundness provision or requiring evidence of viable shipbuilding contracts.

But MARAD agreed to reassess the risk in late 1998 to give MHI "the opportunity to demonstrate that modernization is under way and that MHI is aggressively marketing its products."

On July 31, 1998, MARAD determined it had no basis to change its original risk estimate. "The assessment attached to the memorandum showed that the loan guarantee was rated as a high risk," DeCarli's report last week stated.

At that time, MARAD noted that "MHI had entered into a technology transfer agreement with South Korea's Halla Engineering and Heavy Industries, one of the most advanced yards in Asia." But the Inspector General added that fact "would not be sufficient to change the overall risk assessment" of the project.

MARAD also stated at that time ther was a "reasonable basis to conclude that the proposal was still viable."

"They're saying, 'You can invest in MHI, but cannot look at its economic viability,'" said Harold. "That's a crap shoot.

"The bottom line is that as a result of MHI's nonpayment to Fleet, the risk has to be reassessed," he said.

When the Inspector General's staff visited Quincy last month, they learned from MHI attorneys that the shipyard had encountered "unavoidable delays in reactivating the shipyard," that the delays had increased costs and that funds for the June 1999 payment to Fleet were used instead for construction at the shipyard.

"That's like using your mortgage money to buy groceries," commented Harold.

MARAD estimates now that the renovations of the shipyard won't be completed until October.

And, neither MARAD nor Fleet has decided whether to defer the interest payment until December, when another payment of principal and interest is due. The Inspector General asked that MARAD reply within 15 days to its concerns. That date is Aug. 4.

"It's very confusing," said Harold. "I don't know why we advanced five years of money from HUD [to the shipyard]. No one knows from year to year how much money HUD will loan or whether the program will continue to exist.

"Even though it is HUD money, it's still taxpayer money," said Harold.

The storied shipyard opened in 1884 and subsequently was operated by Bethlehem Steel Corp. Until 1964. General Dynamics acquired the shipyard, installed the goliath crane continued to build vessels for 22 years.

MWRA acquired the property for more than $47 million to use as a staging area for the Boston Harbor cleanup operations, then sold a portion of the yard to MHI for approximately $17 million.

"I am concerned" about the HUD loan, said Laura Schiffer, who oversees the Section 108 loan. "This is a great project.

"Quincy is really creative and has been able to leverage funds for numerous projects," she said.

Brockton Snaps 10-Game Winning Streak

Morrisette's Season Over After Great Run

LEGION BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

After running over its opponents late in the season and in the first round of the American Legion South Sectional playoffs, Morrisette hit a roadblock and didn't make it through safely.

Morrisette's 10-game winning streak, and season, came to a screeching halt last week, as Brockton swept them, 4-3, 4-0, in the best-of-three series.

"We had a great run," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "It was exciting. We got beat by a good team. Brockton played well."

In Game 1 Morrisette held a 3-0 lead, and was one out away from a victory, before Brockton rallied to steal the game in eight innings.

With one run already in, and a runner at third in the bottom of the seventh, Morrisette's Rob Celata was clinging to a 3-2 lead. It looked like he might escape the jam as he retired the next batters, but a passed ball allowed Brockton's Chris Conley to tie the game. An inning later, Brett Curran hit the game-winner on a two-out, 0-2 pitch.

"It was a tough one," said Cattaneo. "We played well enough to win. We needed one out to win the ball game but there was one bad pitch thrown."

Morrisette scored two runs in the first, as Billy Walker ripped an RBI double and later scored on Shawn Manning's infield hit.

In the third, Morrisette had runners on second and third with no outs, but only managed one run to build a 3-0 lead.

On most days that would be enough support for Celata. He breezed through the first four innings without allowing run, but his 11-inning shutout string snapped in the fifth as Eugene Julien scored on Aaron Montiero's two-out double. Conley later made it 3-2 on a RBI triple in the seventh.

Morrisette, which overcame adversity all season long, couldn't recover in Game 2 at Adams Field. Brockton's Josh White was just too much, blanking Morrisette with a four-hit shutout.

"The first game took a lot out of the kids and it carried over to the next game," said Cattaneo. "We didn't hit at all. We faced better pitchers than [White] this season. We just couldn't get it going."

For the first part of the year it looked like Morrisette had no shot of making it to the postseason. It got off to a 2-7 start, including four straight one-run losses, and was headed to its first losing season in team history.

But Cattaneo came out of retirement for his 30th season and was able to turn things around, as Morrisette won 12 of its next 13 games.

"I was glad we got this far," said Cattaneo. "I had visions of us not making the playoffs. So it was nice to make it and win the first round. I would call this year a success.

"After 30 years I'm still having fun. If I'm still alive I'll be back next year. We have a lot of younger players so our future looks good."

Cattaneo would like to thank his coaching staff - Bill Corcoran, Jim Maze, Gus Russo - for their help this season.

"They're the ones that make this thing go," said Cattaneo. "They're good people who love baseball."

QUINCY RECREATION DEPARTMENT Boating and Sailing Supervisor Amy Madden (right) and Kate Sweetser (center) and Erin Madden dock at the dock with the department's newest sailing training boat at the pier at Squantum Yacht Club. The boat was donated by the Casey family of Wollaston.

Donation Of Sailboat To Enhance Programs

Recreation Department Launches New Sailing Era

With lots of help from the Quincy sailing community, the Quincy Recreation Department now has a new sailboat and new water to explore as part of its award-winning William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Program.

The Quincy Recreation Department recently launched a CAL 25, which was donated by Frederic and Michelle Casey of Wollaston complete with sails, motor, radio and other equipment.

"This is an outstanding training boat capable of deep water sailing and is ideal for teaching purposes," said Recreation Director Barry Welch, who noted the boat, which has a capacity to hold six adults, will be available to Quincy residents.

Welch said the sailboat fits in with the Recreation Department's plan to utilize a larger vessel in Quincy Bay. "It is the next logical step in a program that utilizes 12-foot O'Day widgeons in the natural lagoon located in Merrymount Park," Welch said.

The project received a great reception from the sailing community, according to Welch, evident by the tremendous help the department received once the boat was acquired.

Commodore Greg Sweetser and Junior Sailing Chairperson Rob Dolbec of the Squantum Yacht Club, were instrumental in producing an agreement to have the CAL 25 moored at the Squantum Yacht Club and to allow lessons to be taught out of the facility.

Ralph DiMattia, of DiMattia Sails and Yacht Systems, and his son R.J. spent more than 30 hours reconditioning the mast and related equipment to make the boat more compatible for teaching purposes.

Steve J. Sheptyck, of Quincy Steel and Welding, did some fabrication work, while Larry Levasseur did work on the motor and electrical system.

Paul Griffith of Continental Marine Services, donated services to move the boat from the boat yard to the Recreation Complex and then to the launch.

Amy Madden, director of the William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Program, and he staff added a new coat of paint and all the finishing touches to make the boat ready for launch.

"We are indebted to them for their support of this activity," Welch said.

He also noted Sen. Michael Morrissey, a former supervisor in Quincy Recreation's Sailing Program, made the original contact with the Caseys, that resulted in the donation of the CAL 25.

The instructional program will be offered to Quincy residents as self supporting fee based program. Initially, lessons will be in the early evenings and will cost $40 for a sequence for four two-hour lessons. Amy Madden will held up the instructional program.

Registration and additional information can be obtained by calling the William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility at 376-1397.

"With 27 miles of waterfront and the prospect of a cleaner Quincy Bay, I am thankful to those citizens who see the value of this activity. I think that this is an ideal time to be moving toward an adult program in Quincy Bay," Welch said.

Quincy Housing Authority Staff, Residents Participate In Annual Softball Game

The sweltering heat did not discourage dedicated staff and residents of the Quincy Housing Authority from participating in the Annual July 4th Celebration and Softball Game.

Mayor James Sheets and City Council President Peter Kolson got into the swing of things by showing the residents and staff just how to hit it out of the park.

The residents, known as Tobin Tigers after State Representative Steve Tobin, have defeated the QHA All-Stars two years in a row.

School Committeewoman/QHA Vice-Chairperson Christine Cedrone and Vinny Scarnici kept the grill hot and the burgers and hot dogs, compliments of the Police Athletic League, cooking throughout the game.

Thanks to Stop & Shop and the Quincy Fire Department, everyone kept cool with either an ice cold drink or an occasional spray of water.

Jack Mather, the Executive Director of the Quincy Housing Authority, presented each child with a gift certificate to either Strawberries or Play It Again Sports in West Quincy.

Donations were made by the Laborers International Union of North America, Local 133, the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 103, the Brotherhood of Painters, District Council 35, the AFSCME Union, Local 1395, Senator Michael Morrissey and Derbes Brothers.

Quincy Comets Bow, 3-2

The Quincy Comets girls' softball team dropped a 3-2 decision to league-leading Middleboro in a recent South Shore league game at Atlantic Middle School.

Middleboro grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but Quincy rallied with two runs in the third. Meghan Driscoll walked and moved to second on Kathlyn Gates' single. An errant throw by Middleboro allowed Driscoll to score as Gates raced to third base. She scampered home on an infield grounder for the go-ahead run.

Quincy held its 2-1 lead until Middleboro pushed across single runs in the sixth and seventh innings. In the bottom of the seventh, Quincy almost pulled out a come-from-behind win.

With Julie Burke on second and Elise Bowes on first, Terrianne Fitzgerald ripped a line drive that was heading towards right field, but it was speared by the Middleboro first baseman to end the threat.

Sheila Foley pitched a strong game with some help from her defense. She fanned seven, walked four and allowed five hits in the complete-game effort.

Win First Two Games With Solid Pitching, Great Defense

Babe Ruth All-Stars Close In On Eastern Mass. Tourney Title

When you allow just one earned run in two games it's tough to lose, unless you get the run support of Arizona Diamondback's Randy Johnson.

But the Quincy Babe Ruth All-Stars have backed up their solid pitching with great defense and timely hitting, en route to winning their first two games of the Eastern Massachusetts 15-year-old Babe Ruth Tournament.

The only Quincy team to win the championship was the 1969 squad. This year's club is two steps closer to matching that feat.

Last Saturday night, Quincy opened things up with a 4-1 victory against Arlington at Adams Field, host of this year's tournament. The next day, Quincy had a 3-1 lead against Lynn in the fifth inning before the game was postponed because of rain. On Monday, Quincy resumed play and held on for the 3-1 win.

"These kids are playing so well right now," said coach Dick Lombardi. "I'm really happy for these kids. They're playing outstanding."

The eight-team tournament is in a double-elimination format, and Bourne, Lowell and Parkway West Roxbury have all been knocked out.

Quincy played Taunton (2-0) Tuesday night (while the paper was in print).

The winner of this tournament will advance to the regionals in Orono, Maine. The World Series will be held in Tennessee.

Against Arlington, Chris Ham kept opposing hitters off-balance, allowing just three hits and no earned runs. Arlington's lone run came on an overthrow.

Right fielder John O'Connell led the way offensively, going 2 for 3 (single, double) with three RBIs. Justin Hall also went 2 for 3 and drove in Pat Bregoli with the go-ahead run in the bottom of the sixth. Pat Jaehnig had a single and scored the first run of the game on O'Connell's single.

Ham also got plenty of help in the field. Third baseman Chris Lockhead, shortstop James LaFleur, center fielder Bregoli, catcher Tom Hughes and left fielder John Fidalgo all displayed gold gloves.

On Sunday, it was Bregoli's turn to shine on the mound and he didn't disappoint. He allowed one run on five hits in the first five innings, and then came back the next day to retire six of seven hitters for the win.

"He's just outstanding," said Lombardi. "He pitched a strong five innings before the rain [Sunday] and we were thinking of not bringing him back out [Monday]. But he came back with two great innings."

Quincy trailed 1-0 going into the bottom of the fifth and then scored three runs before the game was suspended. O'Connell reached base on an error and moved to third on Pete Turowski's double. Both runners crossed the plate on wild pitches.

Ben Bell then walked and Lombardi decided to have Ham pinch run for him. The move paid off as Ham reached third on a wild pitch and scored on Bregoli's single.

When the fifth inning resumed, Quincy had a chance to add to its 3-1 lead but Jaehnig struck out with the bases loaded.

Quincy, though, had more than enough runs on the board for Bregoli. And it got the six outs it needed for the win.

Chiropractic Club Advances To Title Game On Jaehnig's No Hitter

JUNIOR LEAGUE

David Jaehnig tossed his second no-hitter of the season, as the Jaehnig Chiropractic Club squeaked out a 1-0 victory against Burgin-Platner Hurley to advance to the Quincy Junior League Baseball championship game.

It marks the third time in the last four years that it has reached the finals. It will face the winner of the Beacon Sports-Burgin-Platner Hurley game for the city championship.

Two of the premier pitchers in the league hooked up in a classic pitcher's duel. Jaehnig punched out 12 and walked two, while hard-throwing Justin Thorley struck out six, walked three and allowed only three hits.

Jaehnig has now pitched 12 innings in the playoffs, striking out 26 batters and allowing one hit.

The Jaehnig Club scored the game's only run in the first inning. Chris Marinelli got things going with an opposite field single and John Fitzgerald followed with a bunt single. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch, and Mo Al Khatib fouled off several pitches before rolling a soft grounder to the right side of the infield to drive in the game-winning run.

In the third, the Jaehnig Club threatened to score an insurance run. Jim Garrigan led off with a walk and Jaehnig followed with a double off the fence. But center fielder Pat Malone quickly fired a strike to third base to trap both runners in a run down.

Catcher Jonathan O'Connor was solid behind the plate, and Marinelli and Fitzgerald each made a nice defensive play to preserve the no-hitter.

Tony Pepdjonovich hit two balls sharply for Burgin-Platner, while Bob Newcomb, Tom Ross and Kevin Adams were outstanding in the field.

Chris Doherty On AAU Junior Olympic Baseball Team

Chris Doherty of Quincy was recently selected to the South Shore Baseball's AAU Junior Olympic team, which will be competing for the National Championship starting tomorrow in Cleveland, Ohio.

He was the only player from Quincy to make the team.

Doherty played for the 16-year-old Seadogs, which finished with a 15-0 record, and the Morrisette American Legion baseball team this summer.

This fall he will be entering his junior year at North Quincy High School, where he has distinguished himself academically by earning high honors, as well as receiving the Geoff Hennessey Award in North Quincy's Annual Science Fair.

CHRIS DOHERTY

According to AAU coach Rick Delvecchio, Doherty was chosen over many other candidates from around the state because of his versatility, flawless fielding, clutch hitting, and most importantly, his attitude and tenacity.

He showed what type of player he is in a recent Seadogs' game. With is team up 17-1 in the last inning on a 100-degree day, Doherty chased a ball that was hit sharply down the first base line toward the dugout and made a diving catch to get the out.

Earlier in the season, he saved a no-hitter for Corey Nadler when he fielded a wild throw from shortstop and then dove to tag the runner out at first.

Although his primary position in first base, Doherty also plays third, pitcher, and when called upon, catcher. Last season at North Quincy he shut out B.C. High, 7-0.

Jack Sullivan Receives MWRA Employee Recognition Award

Jack Sullivan of Quincy, a plumber and pipefitter at Deer Island Treatment Plant, was recently honored by the MWRA Board of Directors and fellow employees.

Sullivan was presented with the MWRA Employee Recognition Award for Excellence in Performance."

Sullivan was nominated and elected by co-workers for his contributions to the MWRA's Apprenticeship Program.

An MWRA employee since 1993, Sullivan is chairman of MWRA's Joint Apprenticeship Training Committee.

The Apprenticeship Program was created in 1993 to create a stronger future for both the Deer Island Wastewater Treatment Plant and its workers. The Program features on-the-job training as well as classroom work. Fourteen workers at MWRA have earned new credentials and upgraded skills as a result of the program and Sullivan's contributions.

"Jack Sullivan is one of the most dedicated people I've met," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald. "Jack has been a strong proponent of the Apprenticeship Program at Deer Island from the beginning. The program has improved through his participation and interest."

When a suitable technical physics course (required for apprentices) could not be found at a local school, Sullivan designed and implemented a course at Deer Island to satisfy the apprentice training requirement. He and six other journey level Deer Island employees taught the course.

"Jack is the kind of MWRA employee that ratepayers should be proud of," MacDonald said. "Apprentice training is good for our workers and good for our facilities too. Everybody wins, including Jack, whom we congratulate on his receiving this well deserved accolade from his coworkers."

American Cancer Society Offers Tips For Skin Cancer Prevention

SLIP, SLOP, SLAP For Sun Protection

When enjoying the fun of the summer sun, the American Cancer Society urges you to SLIP on a shirt, SLOP on some SPF15+ sunscreen and SLAP on a hat every day.

Basic skin protection while in the sun can help prevent the risk of skin cancer. The American Cancer Society estimates that more than one million new cases of skin cancer will be diagnosed this year. The most serious form of skin cancer, melanoma, is expected to be diagnosed in about 44,200 persons nationally and in about 1,200 persons in Massachusetts in 1999.

A recent survey commissioned by the American Academy of Dermatology showed that fewer than one-third of Americans currently examine their skin for signs of melanoma, and more than half don't know the signs of melanoma. Only about one-third of Americans even know what melanoma is.

When treated in its earliest stages, melanoma can be cured. If not treated early, the disease can quickly spread to other parts of the body and can be fatal. Of the estimated 9,200 skin cancer deaths this year, 7,300 of them will be due to melanoma, according to the American Cancer Society.

Since the 1970s, the incidence of melanoma has increased about four percent per year.

While early detection is important, the most effective way of fighting skin cancer is prevention. The American Cancer Society recommends the following sun safety tips:

1. Use a sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Sunscreens should be reapplied every two hours, or after swimming or perspiring heavily. Use a sunscreen even on cloudy days and while you are swimming; the sun's rays can reach through three feet of water.

If a sunscreen causes a skin reaction, try a different brand. People with sensitive skin may want to choose a sunscreen that is PABA-free.

2. Decrease sun exposure between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. The sun's rays are strongest during the midday hours. Try to plan outdoor activities for early morning or late afternoon.

3. Wear clothing that protects your skin. Hats, visors, and long-sleeved shirts offer the best protection against the sun's rays.

4. Be aware of surfaces that reflect. Water, sand, concrete and snow all reflect the sun's rays. Be sure to take precautions when boating, skiing or walking on the beach.

5. Don't use sun lamps, tanning parlors, or tanning pills. They can be just as harmful to your body as the sun.

For more information about skin cancer, call the American Cancer Society's information line at 1-800-ACS-2345.

Fitting In 30 Minutes Of Fitness

Here are a few suggestions from the experts at the National Cheese Institute and the New England Diary Promotion Board on how to fit 30 minutes of physical activity into your busy day.

Remember to eat a well-balanced meal that is "up to par" filled with nutrients like calcium.

• Enroll in exercise classes. There are approximately 1,000 commercial athletic and fitness clubs in New England. With so many new types of fitness classes, it's much easier to find a class you like. For example, try cardioboxing or kickboxing at the local gym.

• Exercise at lunchtime. Power walk or run along the Charles River or a local path for 30 minutes and then eat lunch at your desk.

• Stay motivated. Instead of watching TV or taking a catnap, exercise! Go to the gym for 30 minutes of weight training or take a brisk walk around the neighborhood.

• Recruit friends and family members to take part in the fun and spend time together as you exercise. You can work together to keep each other motivated.

• Move those large muscles in your arms and legs by moderately increasing the intensity of common activities such as gardening, dancing and pushing a baby carriage.

• Walk that dog! Just 15 minutes in the morning and 15 minutes in the evening will give you the recommended 30 minutes per day.

• Plan a picnic in the park and take along the soccer ball, basketball or tennis racket. Work up an appetite playing a sport that makes your bones stronger and then enjoy a healthful outdoor meal.

• Leave the car at home and take public transportation to work - the walk from the stop to the office will do you good.

• After dinner, go for a walk with the entire family throughout the neighborhood and to the local frozen yogurt shop. Splurge on a low-fat chocolate and vanilla swirl topped with your favorite fruit.

• Fill a backpack with cool beverages and some nutritious snacks like fruit, carrot sticks, cheese sticks or granola bars and take a hike in the Berkshires or the White Mountains. Bring along a nature book and identify the leaves and birds.

• Play tag with the kids in the community pool. Swim some laps or have relay races.

• Jump rope. A long-time kid's favorite is an excellent calorie burner for adults, too.

• When it's raining, go power walking at the local shopping mall.

A Thought For The Week

A wise man once said, "No single man makes history. History cannot be seen, just as one cannot see grass growing." Another wise quote comes to mind... History is the biography of mankind. Just as names make news, history is about people. Records of ancient, medieval and modern times are not primarily about events that took place. They are about things people did, how they reacted and how they responded.

The Old testament is more than just the relating of events. It is more than just the writings of Hebrew poets and prophets. It is the story of people. It is the history of God's dealings with His people. It is like Emerson said, "There is properly no history, only biography."

Does it not make sense that if we are to understand the present, evaluate the past and anticipate the future, we must do so on the basis of the personal interaction of men with their environments, and each other and with God?

CRITIC'S CORNER

TARZAN: I admit it. I am an unabashed Tarzan fan and have been since my first viewing of an old Johnny Weismuller (my favorite screen Tarzan) rendition. My only problem with Weismuller's Tarzan was his primitive speech. In Edgar Rice Burroughs' books, Tarzan was a well-spoken, educated man. Originally raised by apes (he was orphaned as a baby in the jungle), Tarzan did leave the jungle to be educated in England. However, he returned to his beloved jungle. At least, this is how Burroughs originally intended it.

In this unbelievably beautifully-animated Disney version, Tarzan (Tony Goldwyn) does speak articulately. However, he has a special bond with his gorilla family. When humans aren't around, the gorillas speak freely with one another. It is only when people are present that they revert back to their grunts and primitive chest-pounding.

Tarzan's ape mother is voiced by the wonderful Glenn Close. Minnie Driver provides the voice for Jane, the human woman Tarzan finds himself drawn to. Papa Gorilla is Lance Henriksen, a stern taskmaster. Young Tarzan, though, does have his playmates, a young gorilla (Rosie O'Donnell) and a baby elephant (Wayne Knight).

While the plot revolves loosely around an evil hunter (Brian Blessed), it doesn't really dwell on that. The main focus of this flick is personal relationships and family ties. However, that's not to say it's sappy or overly sentimental.

Rated G, this is a movie for the entire family, even the youngest! Don't miss it. It's the animated hit of the summer.

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You have traveled to exotic and mysterious places in your mind and have brought back souvenirs from every place. Don't be afraid to share them with people.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Things have gone marching off in a direction that you don't quite understand. You don't need to approve, but don't make a fuss just yet.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You have performed the motions; now you'll have the pleasure of knowing why they were right. Sometimes it's necessary to work the problem several times over in order to understand the answer.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Nothing seems to turn out quite as you expected, but you're still able to remain positive. Actually, the chaos around you is quite funny; sit back and laugh.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You are a commanding and powerful presence; luckily, you feel benevolent toward fellow humans. Approach all endeavors with passion and precision.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Everything and everyone seem questionable, but you're not sure to whom the questions should be addressed. Avoid the counsel of strangers.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is not the best time to start new projects, although you may be eager to charge ahead. First, make sure that you haven't started something and forgotten about it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Let your relationships progress to the next step. Identify what you need to improve; there are areas where you should give more and areas where you could give less.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your inner artist, musician or decorator refuses to be pent up any longer. Creativity flows from your fingertips to any available medium.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Anything is up for negotiation at this time, and you are the best person to spell out the terms. Remember the value of a poker face and a steady tone of voice.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Under a calm facade lurks a natural disaster waiting to happen. Yes, that's a metaphor for you; you may want to warn people to look out for an explosion.

PISCES (February to March 20) Your normally hectic pace is a bit calmer at this time, and you find yourself attacking problems in a much more calculated manner. You find that more focused energy achieves greater results.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Multifaceted eclectic and constantly curious, you seem to have a knack for almost everything. You like to have your fingers in many pies at once. D. SCOTT DEWARE, New England Director of SCI Escape School and president of the Deware Funeral Home, makes a point during an Escape School presentation on abduction prevention and survival at Beechwood on the Bay.

Deware Funeral Home Helps Children Avoid Abduction

The Deware family Funeral Homes of Quincy and the Beechwood on the Bay in North Quincy teamed to host SCI Escape School presented by local funeral director and child safety expert, Scott Deware.

The SCI Escape School program was created to help children avoid being abducted and give them techniques to escape if it should happen. The program has been presented throughout the U.S. and has been highlighted on national TV including The Oprah Winfrey Show, Sally Jesse Raphael, Good Morning America and 48 Hours. It has also been featured in the New York Times and Parent Magazine as well as many local and national publications.

SCI Escape School is different than other programs because it teaches children to identify strangers not by what they look like, but how they act. The program also teaches that all the rules change in a dangerous situation.

"SCI Escape School is a wonderful way to teach children how to recognize potentially dangerous people and situations, and how to escape when they find themselves in places they should not be," says founder Robert Stuber. "One of the reasons abductors are so successful is that we don't teach our children how to get away from them. Our ignorance helps the abductor,".

How did a local funeral director get involved with the Escape School?

"A little over a year ago SCI hosted an Escape School in Quincy," said Deware. "We had over 500 children and parents in the hall. It was standing room only".

Deware said he was so impressed by the program that he mentioned to Escape School founder Bob Stuber that if the opportunity ever came up he would love to become more involved in the program. To Deware's delight, he received word informing him that he had been selected as one of 12 persons nationwide to be personally trained and certified by Stuber to present the Escape School program to others. Since then Deware has presented programs to thousands of children and adults throughout the northeast.

"The safety of children should be the priority for everyone in this community," said Richard Winkelman, funeral director at the Deware Funeral Home. "We are proud to be associated with Scott Deware and his efforts with SCI Escape School."

Using role-play with some of the children, Deware was able to present potentially life-saving information in a non-threatening manner.

"It is a wonderful program because both the kids and parents can learn so much new information," said Deware. "Also, it is great to present a program in Quincy." "I have traveled all over the northeast and this is my first opportunity to provide a program for my own home town.

"If this information saves a single child, it impacts me personally." "Nothing is more painful for a funeral director than to conduct a service for a child."

SCI Escape School is sponsored nationally by neighborhood funeral homes and cemeteries affiliated with Service Corporation International (SCI) including in the Quincy and South Shore area the Deware Family Funeral Homes in Quincy. The program is always offered free. There is no cost to a community to host. Those who work at these SCI affiliated firms are concerned with the quality of life in their communities. As parents and grandparents themselves, they are dedicated to ensuring the safety and well-being of all children and seniors.

For additional information regarding SCI Escape School, including how you can host a program in your town, call Scott Deware at 1-800-344-7526 or the Deware Funeral Home at 617-472-1137.

Joe Pearson Honored For 40 Years Of Service With Auxiliary Police

By JAY SABATINO

Senior Deputy Chief Joseph Pearson was recently honored at a retirement party at the George F. Bryan V.F.W. Post given by the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association (QAPA).

Pearson has worked as a volunteer with the Quincy Auxiliary Police for a record 40 years. His tireless devotion and involvement with this city could be a roadmap and example for young people, those who are comfortable with middle age, or retirees, to enhance their lives with being involved with the city.

Joe will probably never know the full impact of his 40 years' effort for Quincy. His example of working and making a difference as a volunteer is outstanding and has to be a richly rewarding experience.

Thank you, Joe. We are appreciative!

Deputy Director of QEMA and Auxiliary Police Chief Tony Siciliano presented Joe with one of the many proclamations he received that evening. Joe received other official proclamations for public officials, including: Gov. Paul Cellucci, State Rep. A. Stephen Tobin, Sen. Michael Morrissey, MEMA Director Quireio M. Iannazzo; Cong. William Delahunt; Mayor James Sheets; QEMA Youth Services and Junior Management; QAPA President Robert Bianchi and Chairman of the Board Dale F. Solander.

JOE PEARSON (right) was recently honored at a retirement party at the George F. Bryan VFW Post for his 40 years of service with the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association. Pearson, who received numerous proclamations, is joined by Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management.

The Association would like to publicly thank the following for their help in making this a memorable event:

(Sabatini is the public information officer for the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association.)

ENC Chemistry Professor Co-Author Of New Book

Lowell H. Hall of Quincy and a professor of chemistry at Eastern Nazarene College(ENC), is a co-author of a new scientific book entitled "Molecular Structure Description: The Electrotopological State."

Co-written with Lamont B. Kier, professor of medicinal chemistry at Virginia Commonwealth University's School of Pharmacy, the book was unveiled at the American Chemical Society's National Spring Meeting in Anaheim, CA and is now available through Academic Press.

Hall and Kier have now published three books and 70 scientific papers together based on their research using a topological approach to molecular structure. The books and papers have grown out of their development of a pharmaceutical software package called Molconn-Z which uses mathematical models to predict molecular activity and narrow the research field for new drug development. The Molconn-Z software has been licensed to four software companies and is widely used in the pharmaceutical industry.

Hall explains that on average a drug company will have to spend about 10 years creating up to 10,000 synthetic organic compounds before they can bring one new drug to the marketplace. Prozac, he says, took 17 years.

Victory To Re-Open N.Q. Shaw's By October

Victory Super Markets, which has acquired the Shaw's Supermarket in North Quincy, expects to reopen the store in mid-October, according to Arthur "Jay" DiGeronimo Jr., company president.

Shaw's closed the store July 17, and Victory took possession of it last Monday.

The store will be converted into a "Market Square at Victory" store, similar to its supermarket in Kingston.

Victory plans to add and replace cases in the "Power Aisle" and install a new front-end register system. Painting and decor changes, along with electrical, plumbing and HVAC work, will take about three-and-a-half months, DiGeronimo said.

He described the Market Square concept as featuring expanded produce departments offering more than 450 varieties of fruits and vegetables from around the world, a courtyard cafe coffee and cappuccino bar and an array of freshly prepared, ready-to-eat and heat-and-eat meals.

The Market Square also will offer a full-service butcher shop, a home-style deli, a bakery, a floral shop and a natural food center.

In the interim, hiring of new staff has begun, and hiring and interview schedules are posted at the store.

"During the past 14 years, we have acquired seven existing supermarket locations," he said, "and have been highly successful with integrating new staff into the company fold."

Victory expects to add 750 employees for the three stores it acquired from Shaw's — the ones in North Quincy and Waltham and the former Star Market in Norwell — to its existing work force of 2,000.

"Victory is excited to add these stores to our company," said DiGeronimo. "All three stores were very busy stores prior to our acquisition. However, due to the extensive renovations needed to adapt them to the Market Square concept, we decided that closing all three was necessary to do it right from the start. We hope our new customers will feel the wait will be worth it."

BUSINESSMAN and Quincy resident Simon C, Fireman signs a copy of his newly released book, No Justice, for Quincy Hospital CEO Jeffrey Doran. The book chronicles Fireman's experience with campaign finance laws. Fireman donated $500,000 to Quincy Hospital to construct an Imaging Center for Women, named in memory of his daughter, Joan Fireman Berenson, who died of breast cancer.

CLUTCH PERFORMANCE

Is the clutch going the way of the dodo bird? It seems there are a lot fewer vehicles equipped with manual transmissions than there used to be. According to one automobile research firm, however, drivers who like to manually select shifting points for themselves seem to be on the rise. Of the 15 million vehicles sold annually in the U.S. each year, the percentage with manual shifts increased to 14% this year from 12% last year. The majority of drivers still prefer the convenience and ease of the automatic transmission. And, for those who like the best of both worlds, there are the new hybrid shifting systems that allow drivers to drive in automatic or shift without a clutch.

No matter what type of transmission your car has, regularly scheduled maintenance can greatly extend its life. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your car. Our friendly, ASE certified professional service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Give us a try. We'll earn your trust! Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: The latest generation of transmissions are continually variable transmissions (CVT) that feature computer-controlled belt-and-pulley systems that continuously adjust in response to speed.

THE CLAM FLATS at Wollaston Beach were opened for the first time in more than 10 years Monday and Earl Robichaud of Houghs Neck had no trouble stacking a few buckets full.

After A 10-Year Absence

They're Digging Clams At Wollaston Beach

Clamdiggers have returned to Wollaston Beach after a more than 10-year absence.

The flats were opened Monday to commercial diggers only and approximately 40 showed up, hauling away by day's end an estimated 10,000 pounds of clams.

The clams are taken to a purification plant in Newburyport before being sold to eating places.

The green-light for digging at the flats which had been closed because of polluted Boston Harbor water, was flashed by Shellfish Warden Andy Ayers.

Leo Kelly, chairmen of the Mayor's Coastal and Beaches and Commission, welcomed the opening.

"This is great," he said. "It is another sure sign of Quincy Bay and Wollaston Beach getting cleaner. The city's beaches are clean and swimmable. Wollaston Beach is on the way."

Kelly said the diggers are limited to six racks of clams -- 300 pounds -- per day.

Kelly, who grew up in Houghs Neck and dug clams himself as a youth, was asked if he would eat the clams now being dug at Wollaston Beach.

"I sure would after the purification," he said. "Quincy clams are the best in New England. Sweet, soft shell. Great as steamers and fried. The best."

Layoff Notices Called 'A Formality'

Sheets 'Confident' On Hospital

By MARILYN JACKSON

The uncertainty of the proposed affiliation of Quincy Hospital with the Boston Medical Center was underscored Tuesday when some 1,100 hospital employees received layoff notices.

But Mayor James Sheets, along with hospital and union officials, said the notices were a formality.

"Under federal law, every employer with 100 or more employees must give 60 days' notice of an impending closing," said Dennis Gorman, associate director of the Massachusetts Nurses Association which represents two bargaining units at the hospital.

The layoff notices stated that the hospital employees would no longer be employed by Quincy Hospital as of Sept. 30, the end of the hospital's fiscal year, but if plans proceed as anticipated, they will be offered at the newly constituted facility.

The 282-bed hospital, now located on Whitwell Street, opened 108 years ago.

"This notice would have been issued whether or not Quincy Hospital becomes a new entity," said Gorman. "The city of Boston did the same thing when Boston City Hospital merged with Boston University School of Medicine to become Boston Medical Center (BMC)."

The law requires an employer to notify its employees at least 60 days before the business closes, even if arrangements have been made for the employees to be hired by a successor, said Mary Sweeney, vice president of strategic services at the hospital, in a prepared statement.

Meanwhile, Sheets said that the clinical affiliation with BMC is progressing.

Quincy Medical Center has been incorporated as a private, non-profit, charitable corporation as the hospital's successor.

Until the new 15-member board of trustees is finalized, an interim board of four has been appointed which will continue the affiliation efforts.

Health Department Tips:

How To Prevent Heat Exhaustion, Other Illnesses

With the long hot summer continuing with little relief, Quincy Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue is offering advice to residents on how to prevent heat exhaustion and other heat related illnesses.

She urges residents to follow this guideline:

•Drink plenty of water.

•Eat light and choose foods high in water content, such as fruits, salads, and soups.

•Avoid alcoholic and caffeinated beverages which increase water loss and can dehydrate the body.

•Cool the skin with cool cloths and take cool baths or showers.

•If your living quarters appear too difficult to ventilate, try to seek comfort in an air conditioned shopping mall, senior recreation area, library or movie theater.

•Cut back on physical activity and rest at the first sign of fatigue, lightheadedness, or feeling hot.

•Wear loose, light-colored and lightweight clothing. If outdoors, wear a hat and try to stay out of the direct sun as much as possible.

•Recognize the symptoms of heat stress, heat exhaustion, and heat stroke:

Heat Stress: Early warning signs are general discomfort, lack of energy, and loss of appetite.

Heat Exhaustion: Severe cramping of muscles due to excess sweating and loss of salt from the body due to exertion and / or high temperatures. Rest in a cool place and replenish lost fluids and salts unless on a

Sheets: Library Director 'Acted In Good Faith'

When Ann McLaughlin was named library director of the Thomas Crane Public Library six years ago, she suggested to the library's board of trustees that trust expenditures should be reviewed monthly, she said.

Last month, the board agreed but it was not before an audit, requested by McLaughlin, which discovered she had apparently used some of the funds inappropriately.

"I thought I was doing what I was instructed to do," McLaughlin said.

At issue were checks made to political fundraisers for Mayor James Sheets and Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill, to lunches with the Quincy Lions Club and other organizations in the city and to researcher-historian Stan Nikkel who is working on a book detailing the history of the library.

Sheets, who appoints not only the library director but the trustees, said he met with McLaughlin and two trustees, Arthur Ciampa and John Luongo, last Thursday to discuss the Thomas Crane Library Foundation, a 501 (3) C non-profit corporation, which oversees about 15 separate trusts and is separate from city funds and the newly implemented controls over the use of the funds.

In addition to the board's monthly review of expenditures, checks must have two signatories, instead of one. McLaughlin alone had been responsible for making out the checks.

After the audit, Luongo and trustee Sandra McCauley told McLaughlin that there were a couple of expenditures that should not have been made with trust funds, McLaughlin said.

"I immediately repaid $970," said McLaughlin. "I had no idea that I was doing anything that was going to create a situation like this. Everything in the trust accounts is carefully documented.

"The board said I should go to these fundraisers and be reimbursed, and I believed I was acting on those instructions," she said.

The trustees agreed that the lunches with the Lions Club were part of her community outreach, said McLaughlin.

As for the payments made to Nikkel, McLaughlin said she wrote checks to him after the trustees had told her that the work should be stopped.

"I was paying him for the work he had completed, as spelled out in his proposal," she said. Altogether, he was paid about $6,000. "I would never defy the board," she said.

"The main thing I was upset about was the monies paid to Nikkel to write a history of the library," said MacCauley. "We had specifically told Ms. McLaughlin in June 1998 that we did not want him to do it. He was charging $20,000, plus printing, and we were running short of money.

"If anything, we should have had bids from at least three people, but Ms. McLaughlin said she didn't feel that was the way to go about it.

"We said we shouldn't fund it [with trust funds] and she said she would find a way to get the book completed. She said the trustees should be raising more money for the library instead of worrying about writing a history," McCauley recalled.

McCauley said during

SPOILING YOUR GRANDCHILDREN

According to a recent poll, grandparents are doting on their grandchildren in ways previous generations may only have thought of doing. Of the grandparents surveyed, 55% said they had purchased a gift for a grandchild in the past month, which is up 8% from a decade earlier. Four in ten grandparents indicated they had taken a grandchild out to a restaurant, an 11% hike from ten years ago. And, nearly a third of those surveyed said they had taken a grandchild shopping which represents a modest (but significant) increase of 3% from just a decade earlier. All this shows that grandparents are more involved with their grandchildren than their own grandparents were.

Grandchildren are one of life's grand delights. You no longer have the day-to-day responsibility that can exhaust one, and you do have all the pleasures that only young children can bring. Council Approves Health Center Sale At $550,000

The city council Monday night agreed to sell the vacant John F. Kennedy Health Center to the AFL-CIO's Union International Systems for $550,000.

The company was one of two firms which had submitted offers for the property.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton said that Global Naps, which had also offered to purchase the city-owned property, had withdrawn its offer.

Global Naps had bid $425,229, while the AFL-CIO had bid $425,000. Colton said he had first negotiated with the highest bidder, Global Naps, and was able to secure a better offer of $550,000.

When Global Naps withdrew its offer, Colton said he was then allowed to negotiate with the AFL-CIO and get them to match the higher offer.

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold asked why would the AFL-CIO offer more money when it was the only remaining bidder.

Colton replied that the city would not sell the property at the AFL-CIO's lower offer.

Although the two-story, 18,914-square-foot building on a 25,346-square-foot lot is assessed at $1,083,600, it was appraised at $485,000, Colton said. The building was constructed in the 1940s and renovated during the 1950s.

Arline Goodman, a candidate for Ward 5 councillor, who has questioned the disposition of the public building since first learning of the proposal, submitted a letter to the councillors, asking them to read the appraisal report before making a decision.

The appraisal report stated the building's value is $485,500 "as is," noting that the potential net income would be $200,131, including payment of taxes.

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin said he earlier had asked to postpone action on the disposition of the city-owned building until he obtained more information.

Monday night, he said the site needs new ceilings, windows, upgraded electrical service, a modern heating, ventilation and air condition system and changes that would make the building handicapped accessible. In addition, the building has asbestos, which must be removed.

According to the appraisal, the estimated cost to make the repairs would be $1.4 million; however, Colton said when he requested bids for the city to upgrade the building, the estimates came in even higher at $1.51 million.

"The city of Quincy has gotten its use out of the building," said Councillor-

No Cheney-Kelly Sidelight

No sign -- not yet, anyway -- of a Mike Cheney-Leo Kelly vote-delivering contest as a sidelight to the Ward 1 city council race.

Cheney, who served as both Ward 1 councillor and at-large is managing Greg Hanley's campaign.

CHENEY

KELLY

But Kelly, who was elected to six terms as Ward 1 councillor and almost made another run this year, says he does not intend to get involved.

"I have no plans to back or manage the campaigns of any of the candidates," he says. "But I'd be happy to advise them if any of them should ask.

"No, I don't have any plans to really get involved. Not at this time, anyway."

At this time?

Leo, is that leaving the door open?

SPEAKING OF HANLEY, he lives at 32 Shed St. in Germantown. And hopes that's a good omen.

That's the same house Ed Graham lived in when he was Ward 1 councillor in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

THE 29 candidates who filed their nomination papers at last week's deadline have until Aug. 12 to change their mind. They have until 5 p.m. that day to withdraw the papers and keep their name off the ballot.

There are two definite preliminary election runoffs Sept. 14 for the open Wards 1 and 6 city council seats.

And, right now there are enough candidates--seven--for a preliminary election contest for councillor at-large.

There is some speculation, however, that one of the seven might drop out by the Aug. 12 deadline. If that happens, there would be no preliminary council at-large election.

AND, IF YOU are not a registered voter and want to cast a ballot in the preliminary election Sept. 14, City Clerk Joseph Shea reminds you have until Wednesday, Aug. 25 to register at City Hall.

SHEA

There will be preliminary contests for councillor at-large (if one of the seven candidates doesn't drop out) and in Wards 1 and 6 where there are open seats.

YOU MIGHT SAY it was something old, something borrowed and something new for Senator Michael Morrissey when he won the Hustler Class National Championship off the Squantum Yacht Club the other day.

The new was the championship--his very first--which he shares with his crew, his 11-year-old son, Jim.

The borrowed was the Hustler. His Squantum neighbor, Bob Murray, let him use his. The old was an old sail from one of Morrissey's old Hustlers.

MIKE MORRISSEY with his prized Edward Gallagher Trophy as Hustler Class National champion.

Morrissey started sailing as a youngster with his father, Arthur, and has won some races down through the years but this was his first national championship.

OOPS! In The Sun's article last week on candidates who filed nomination papers for this year's city election, Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley's age was listed as 71. Actually, he's 69 going on 70 (Dec. 27).

Sorry about that, Frank. You don't look a day over 68 and you might pass for 65.

REMEMBER THE STORY about our good friend Charlie Sweeny and the roses?

SWEENY

Charlie sent away for a special rose bush he saw advertised in a magazine, planted it and faithfully watered it day and night.

But no darn roses, he kept complaining to his better half, Betty.

But one day after a round of golf, Charlie came home and immediately checked the rose bush. And, just like magic--there were roses on it--at last.

Charlie later was proudly showing off his roses to a neighbor. The neighbor took a close look. "Charlie," he said, "those are artificial roses."

CHARLIE'S LILIES

Betty was so tired of hearing about the rose bush without roses that the day Charlie went off golfing, she went off buying a few artificial roses and neatly wired them to the bush, camouflaging the wire.

Anyway, Charlie still runs into people kidding him about his roses which he takes in stride.

But he wants them -- and you -- to know that he is now into lilies. And is growing the real McCoy. No artificials. And he has a photo to prove it.,

(He's now thinking of taking another crack at those roses.)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD view of Quincy Hospital was postmarked in 1919 the year that the City took over the operation of the facility. Opened in 1890, the original buildings and the three acre parcel of land were a gift to the hospital corporation from William B. Rice. His home on Adams Street later became the Rice Eventide Home. For almost 30 years, until the city took it over, the hospital was almost entirely equipped and maintained by along list of benefactors including the well known Quincy families of Adams, Rice, Faxon and Gordon.

Challenge Cup Returned To QYC

Aug. 5 - 11
1951
48 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

The historic Quincy Bay Challenge Cup returned to Quincy for the first time in 27 years won by Jim Smollett.

Smollett, commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club, was at the tiller of Charlie Winslow's fleet Star-Black Roger. The last time the trophy was won by Quincy was in 1924 when the "grand-old man of American yachting" Charles Francis Adams won with his class R boat-Lightning.

LONG ISLAND BRIDGE OPENS

The $2.6 million bridge to Long Island Hospital opened this week with ceremonies headed by Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin and Boston Mayor John Hynes.

The structure was the longest viaduct in the U.S. that was not a public highway. Steel was erected by Bethlehem Steel.

With the opening of the bridge, ferry service from Eastern Ave. in Boston ended, saving the 1,200-bed hospital an estimated 30 percent on operating expenses.

LEGISLATION ENDS BAY POLLUTION

After a century of protests to end pollution in the bay, legislation passed this week that would end the operations at Moon Island. A deep rock tunnel was planned from Columbia Circle in Dorchester to Deer Island where a treatment plant was scheduled for construction (a similar plant was planned for Nut Island).

The new sewer by-pass would end the daily discharge of 40-135 million gallons of sewerage from being released at Moon Island into the bay.

Rep. William Jenness was successful in amending the legislation to tie Squantum sewers into the new system.

What If You Had Only Eight Minutes To Live

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

What if you only had eight minutes to live?

The Massachusetts Legislature is currently considering a bill that would provide Good Samaritan protection to those involved in the distribution and use of automatic external defibrillators. Trial lawyers predictably oppose the measure. For your protection, however, as well as theirs, the measure should be passed.

Each year in this country, more than 250,000 individuals die of what is called sudden cardiac arrest. This is a condition in which the heart begins to fibrillate and ceases to function effectively as a pump. When this happens the need for defibrillation is urgent - the chances of recovery decline roughly 10 percent a minute, and after eight minutes there is little or no chance of survival.

The situation today has changed dramatically. In recent years, automatic external defibrillators have been developed. They are reasonable priced and easy to use.

Nationally, the American Heart Association has trained thousands of individuals in the use of these new machines as part of its basic four-hour CPR course. Several companies across the state, among them Fidelity, Gillette, Channing L. Bete, Inc. and Hewlett Pachard have taken the lead in making sure these life-saving machines, and staff trained in their use, are available in the workplace for the protection of their employees. However, much remains to be done.

Liability concerns are one main barrier to the wide scale distribution of the device. Many employers and many landlords are concerned that their good deed, in making these machines available to their tenants and employees, will not go unpunished. Their concern is that in the litigious world we live in, they will be sued by the heirs of those for whom resuscitation efforts prove unsuccessful,. Landlords are particularly skittish in this regard because they lack the more direct interest employers have in protecting their employees.

Yet in a large, high-rise building, such as the one I work in, it's far more effective to have the building security staff equipped with these machines and trained in their use, than to leave it up to individual tenants. Building security staff is typically present 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and they have the ability to commandeer elevators. Traffic in Boston and the fact that my office is on the 35th floor make it unlikely that a local ambulance could reach me within 8 minutes. The chances are not ones I would stake my life on.

This problem in reaching a victim holds true for many other places across the state: malls, golf courses, beaches, sports stadiums and other populated places. This bill could help to encourage businesses to have Automatic External Defibrillators on site and train their employees in their use. Statistics show that when portable defibrillators are made widely available in a community, death rates from sudden cardiac arrest decline substantially, sometimes as much as 50 percent. That would translate into saving 3,000 lives each year in the Commonwealth.

Where Is Sgt. Boston Corbett's Grave?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

What are the sources in literature for the two "opposite premise" sayings on each of the two arch entrances to Hancock Cemetery on Hancock Street in Quincy Center??? While one saying reads, "From Dust Thou Come And...Unto Dust Thou Shalt Return", the other saying reads, "This Mortal Shall Put On Immortality". Are both opposite sayings from the Scriptures, I ask you? While one saying denotes a terminal conclusion, the other saying denotes a beginning conclusion.

I have been searching in this cemetery for the grave of Sgt. Boston Corbett, whom I have been informed was secretly buried here in the mid-1890's. While I have never identified his gravestone in said cemetery, I have been further informed that he may have been laid to rest in an unmarked grave with no gravestone on it. Can readers of the Quincy Sun provide any information on the precise whereabouts of Sgt. Boston Corbett's grave?

Corbett was the Union Cavalry Sgt. who shot President Lincoln's assassin (John Wilkes Booth) in a northern Virginia tobacco drying shed on 26 April 1865, twelve days after Booth shot President Lincoln in DC's Ford's Theater on 14 April 1865, but his precise role in the death of Booth remains a matter of sharp controversy, even among knowledgeable Civil War historians and military analysts.

Any information from interested readers is welcome!!!

Super Rice Cakes

Our daughter Nancy's customer Greg who was having his hair cut at her barbershop recently brought her a sample of the seasoned risotto he sells. which she later prepared for her family.

When I was babysitting there, and found some leftovers. I made rice cakes out of the leftovers, with just a few ingredients.

Super Rice Cakes
left over rice (1-2 cups)
2 tablespoons flour
1-2 eggs (depending on amount of rice)
2-3 tablespoons grated romano cheese
3 tablespoons olive oil
bread crumbs or corn flakes crumbs for coating

In a bowl, mix the rice, egg, flour, grated cheese and blend. If mixture seems too thin, add a bit more flour. Place the bread crumbs on a piece of wax paper, and take the mixture out by tablespoons and coat with crumbs.

Fry in hot oil turning until they are golden brown. Drain on a paper towel. Serve hot. I used a spicy cocktail sauce and I got raves when Nancy came home from work.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

FINDING THE RIGHT RUNNING SHOE

Runners should choose the athletic shoe type best for their bio-mechanical needs. There are five basic running shoe categories: motion control, cushioned, lightweight training trail and stability. Motion control are best for people who overpronate, wear orthotics, have flat feet, or are heavy runners. Stability shoes are ideal for the midweight runner with normal arches looking for comfort and durability. Cushioned shoes offer the least medical support and encourage foot motion, ideal for runners with rigid feet and high arches. Lightweight training shoes are best for runners who want a light second shoe for fast-paced training. Finally, trail shoes should be considered by those who run off-road and need extra traction and protection from stone bruises.

We firmly believe in helping you help yourself. We'll make recommendations as to how you can help keep your feet healthy and happy. From choosing the appropriate foot wear, to preventative care, to dealing with hereditary concerns, to simple pampering, we'll take the time to answer your questions and explain any procedures. We want you to be as informed about and actively involved in your foot health care as we are. Our office is located at 110 West Squantum Street in North Quincy; call 617-472-3466.

Hint: Running shoes are made with straight, semi-curved and curved lasts. Your podiatrist can tell you which last is preferable for your foot type.

Tamara Erdley Honored For Quincy Hospital Newsletter Stories

Tamara Erdley of Quincy, public relations specialist at Quincy Hospital, recently received two writing awards for newsletter feature stories she wrote for the hospital's quarterly newsletter, A Healthy Outlook.

The awards were presented by McMurry Publishing, a Phoenix, Arizona-based publisher.

Erdley won first place for best feature story in the newsletter category for an article titled, "The Real E.R." The article examined a day in the Quincy Hospital's emergency department and showed how different an actual emergency department is from the one portrayed in the television show ER.

Also in the best feature story newsletter category, Erdley received third place for an article she authored titled, "The Road Home: Preparing for Independence." The story chronicled a patient's progress from the emergency department, from in-patient unit to Transitional Care Unit (TCU). The TCU is often considered the bridge between hospital and home for many older patients.

"We are very proud that Tamara's stories captured the imagination of our readers and the McMurry editors," said Renee Buisson, associate vice president of Public Relations. "Our goal is to educate the community about health matters and interesting stories such as Tamara's help send the right message."

TAMARA ERDLEY

Erdley has been with Quincy Hospital for more than a year. Previously, she was public relations coordinator at Buffalo General Hospital in Buffalo, N.Y.

She received a bachelor's degree in communications from Plattsburgh State University in New York.

Sheets Still Optimistic, Harold, McCauley Skeptical On Shipyard

When the modernization of the Fore River shipyard is completed, it will be worth $250 million, a quarter billion dollars, said Mayor James Sheets Tuesday.

"Within the next six months, there will be more than enough equity to pay out the loans," said Sheets.

At Monday night's council meeting, Richard Meade, the city's director of planning and community development, explained why Quincy has not received its third interest payment on a $7.8 million loan it obtained through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for the shipyard owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI).

The amount due in June was $258,880.

Meade said the city used a portion of a $1 million economic development incentive grant from HUD to make the payment to Chase Manhattan. However, an official from HUD said the MHI must replace that money in that escrow fund by Nov. 1.

"We are current," said Meade. He added that MHI was forbidden to pay the city directly because the loan agreements executed with MARAD specified that that guaranteed loan, issued by Fleet must be paid first.

Sheets said last week and again Tuesday that the MHI money due Quincy is in the bank.

Fleet has loaned MHI $55 million to revitalize the shipyard, and the first interest payment of $1.5 million was due in June. In late May, MHI asked MARAD to extend the due date until December. At that time, MHI will owe two interest payments plus the first payment on the principal.

"I expect the waiver will come, in my opinion" said Sheets, "and then MHI will make the payment."

McCauley described the payment arrangement as "voodoo financing," a term presidential candidate George Bush coined in 1988 to describe Ronald Reagan's economic policies.

When Councillor-at-large Paul Harold pressed Meade on how the city would be affected financially if MHI defaults on its loans, Meade said the city stands third in line, only behind the federal government and the commonwealth.

Meade said the city could go after the yard itself to recover the loan.

When asked about the 20-year debt on the loan, Meade said the city would not have to make up a default but that HUD would cut back on the economic development funds it disburses to Quincy.

Harold said he was annoyed he only learned of the details of the shipyard's financial woes when he read a July 21 report in the Wall Street Journal .

That was the same day the Inspector General of the U.S. Department of Transportation issued a report urging that MARAD reassess the financial worthiness of MHI in light of the missed payment and MHI's request for a deferral.

The report concluded that MHI's risk of default had materially increased.

The City of Quincy, Fleet, the Massachusetts Development Finance Agency, the Massachusetts Water Resources Agency and the Commonwealth have loaned close to $100 million to MHI to refurbish the shipyard and create manufacturing jobs.

"Are we going to be paid in December?" Harold asked Meade.

"Every individual shipyard expert turned thumbs down [on the viability of the Quincy yard]," said McCauley. One, Tim Hollingsworth, said it was a "lousy, disastrous idea and the chances are that it will fall apart. In shipyards, the booms are short and the busts are very long.

"Yet the mayor is saying there will be a keel laying in the next several months. I hope we're not facing a boondoggle embarrassment to the city," said McCauley.

Sheets again reaffirmed his belief that the shipyard will begin building ships within the next six months.

"We fully expected there would be problems modernizing the shipyard. For $80 million, we have taken an old yard, full of rusted equipment, filled with toxic waste and converted it to the most modern technological shipyard in the country," said Sheets.

"We will be part of a new shipbuilding era. It's nothing short of miraculous. When we are done, we are going to have a lot of shipbuilding contracts.

"As the Boston Globe said in its recent editorial, it's not time to be faint of heart, to be doubters," the mayor said. "It's time to take it forward and build the shipyard, and that's what we're going to do."

Edward Shine, Sr. Honored As Elks District Deputy

Edward F. Shine, Sr. has been appointed to serve as a District Deputy to the National President of the Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks of the U.S.A.

A member of the Quincy Elks Lodge, Shine, was deputized during the 135th Elks National Convention, held recently in Kansas City, MO..

Shine, who lives in Braintree, will serve the Circle District of Massachusetts, one of 260 districts nationwide. Duties will include assisting newly elected National President James Varenhorst of Ludington, Michigan, in promoting and coordinating the organization's charitable and philanthropic programs for the year. Irish Festival Set For Sept. 26

The License Board gave Peter Kerr, owner of Bad Abbot's a one day license to hold an Irish Festival Sunday Sept. 26 in the Hancock parking lot in back of 1546 Hancock St.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he had recent meetings with City Engineer Jack Gillon and Rhonda Merrill, director of tourism and both said the festival was a "do-able thing".

Shea said Gillon suggested that public parking be in the Ross Parking Garage so that other restaurant owners would not be concerned with the traffic. Shea said even though it would be "Football Sunday", "everyone is enthusiastic" and there would be plenty of parking.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue asked for a list of all of the vendors that would be participating in the festival.

Addressing the board, Kerr said he was receiving "positive feedback from the Irish community as well as the City of Quincy.

He said if he was granted the permit Tuesday, he would call the three Irish bands from Ireland, who are waiting for a call to perform at the festival.

The festival will feature a lighted tent and stage with a designated area for the sale of beer only.

The rain or shine event will be held from noon to 8:30 p.m.

Rev. John Swanson
School Committee Candidate

REV. JOHN SWANSON

Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, announces his candidacy for the Quincy School Committee.

A Quincy native, the son of Carl and Louis Swanson, he grew up in West Quincy and attended the old Willard School. Married to the former Martha Morath, the couple lives in Wollaston with their two daughters, Cassandra, 5, and Stephanie, 9.

Swanson is a graduate of Massasoit and Eastern Nazarene College and holds a masters degree from Andover Theological School and a Certificate of Study from Virginia Seminary.

Following graduate school, Swanson began his professional career as chaplain and senior counselor at Maine Maritime Academy in Castine, Maine. While at the academy, Swanson developed a peer counseling program that became a model for the state.

A Navy Reserve Chaplain for over 10 years, Swanson saw extensive service with the Seabees, the U.S. Coast Guard and the Submarine Force. His last duty assignment was with the Third Marine Division, Okinawa, Japan.

Rev. Swanson has served parishes in Maine and Massachusetts. He is adjunct professor of history and ethics at Eastern Nazarene College and is a drug and alcohol counselor at Right Turn in Quincy.

Since becoming pastor at Union Congregational Church in 1994, Swanson has designated several community programs and has worked to make the church available to and more a part of the community. Recently, the church began a monthly children's ministry to neighborhood children and hosted the Quincy Interchurch Council's Vacation Bible School.

Swanson has two primary reasons for running for School Committee: Stephanie and Cassandra. They attend the Beechwood Knoll School.

Rev. Swanson's goal is to be actively involved in his children's education. He believes he is extremely qualified to achieve that goal by bringing his talent and wisdom to the School Committee. He is committed to his beloved City of Quincy and cares deeply for the education of its children.

"I believe that with my background and experience that I can contribute toward improving the education of our children. My skill as a pastor and my ability to relate to people of diverse backgrounds especially in areas of conflict will be an asset," Swanson said.

"My concern for my daughters' education and those of other children of Quincy drives my commitment to my city and our schools," he added.

Council Meeting Sept. 8 On Rent Controls

Landlords of the city's government-subsidized elderly housing will be invited to a special meeting of the City Council Sept. 8 to discuss the council's proposal for the city to establish rent controls.

The proposal calls for the city to establish local preferences, priorities and income limits and, at the same time, take into consideration the owner's right to obtain a fair net operating income.

Tax incentives could be offered to an owner to continue in effect low-income use restrictions previously in place. In addition, the city would recognize a formally organized tenant association which could negotiate housing costs with an owner.

The council is expected to adopt a home rule petition by Sept. 21 which if approved by the state legislature would block landlords who obtained low-interest-rate construction loans from prepaying their 40-year mortgages and setting new rents at considerably higher market rates.

Residents of three elderly housing complexes — Wollaston Manor at 91 Clay St., Granite Place at Granite St. and Hancock Court at 25 School St. — are vulnerable to these potential rent hikes.

Residents of other HUD developments also could find themselves in the same predicament in the coming years, said Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott. Those developments Town Brook House on Brackett Street, Fenno House at 540 Hancock St., Quincy Point Homes at 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy House on Revere Road and the 75 units at 310 Water St., which is managed by the Wollaston Evangelical Lutheran Church.

However, the non-profit organizations which manage elderly housing are sensitive to the financial circumstances of the seniors, most of whom live on fixed incomes.

"I think we should get input from both sides," said Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley who noted that Wollaston Manor had met previously with members of the senior citizen committee as well as organizers of the Mass. HUD Tenants Association.

The home rule petition would authorize the city to regulate the rate of housing rents without pre-empting federal law, explained Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, chairman of the senior citizen committee.

Under U.S. Housing and Urban Development regulations, property owners are eligible to pay off their mortgages in 20 years and must notify tenants of their intentions a year in advance.

"We made a pact 25 years ago that safe, clean, decent, secure housing would be made available [to seniors] for the rest of their lives," said Council President Peter Kolson.

"Along the way, Congress changed the rules of engagement and will allow [the property] to be flipped over one year at a time.

"We cannot allow that. If the rents are [raised] high enough, many would be homeless if they cannot afford the current going rate. This is an issue of decency and common sense," said Kolson.

Similarly, the state legislature is considering an enabling act which would require not only city council or board of selectmen approval but resident approval to address the possibility of wiping out the affordability of housing for the elderly.

In Quincy, this issue would be especially drastic because seniors comprise nearly 30 percent of the city's nearly 90,000 residents.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who is a freshman legislator, said Quincy's delegation is in full support of the pending state legislation but urged a letter-writing campaign for the city's position.

"This is key to Quincy's senior population. There are thousands of seniors out there," said Ayers.

"When we talk about seniors being displaced, they have no idea of what they could face," added Raymondi.

Condo Trash Pilot Pick-Up Approved

The City Council Monday approved a pilot project to begin picking up trash at 18 condominium complexes for a year.

Tom Fabrizio of the public works department said the cost of the project will be $58,656 and will begin Sept. 1.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton said Resource Waste Inc. will handle the work.

The cost to pick up trash at all 117 condominium associations would be $474,000, Colton said. If this experiment is successful, Colton said he would include that sum in his budget request for fiscal year 2001.

The following associations will benefit from the pilot project: The Hill at Furnace Brook, SunnyLea at Quincy Square, Captain Cove, Pollard Place, Cranch School, Grandview Condos at 100 Grand View Avenue and at 111 Warren St, Greenleaf Condo and the Mellen Bray House.

Also, Sea View Condos, The Falls, South Gate Condo, Quincy Towers, St. Moritz Condo One, 77 Adams Place, Edgewater Place, Von Ruhr condos at 28 Cross St., and the condos at 179 Presidents Lane.

"It's a fairness question," reiterated Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

In 1997, the council adopted a resolution to study the feasibility of picking up trash at the multi-unit complexes in fiscal year 1999.

Sheets 'Confident' On Hospital

These new trustees include Jeffrey Doran, the present chief executive officer of Quincy Hospital, as president; Paul Drew of Boston Medical Center as treasurer; Sheets and Kevin Madden, the city's personnel director.

Under the home rule petition, which Quincy has submitted to the state legislature, the proposed board of trustees will include four mayoral appointees, four Quincy hospital staff members and six BMC staff members as well as the dean of the Boston University School of Medicine or his designee and the new chief executive officer

The mayor said Tuesday he continues to believe the city will receive the necessary funding to facilitate the transfer of Quincy Hospital from the public sector to the private sector. The city has pledged $33 million and federal officials have given a verbal indication that it could provide $23 million, he said.

"Right now, we're waiting to see what's going to happen to the [state's] supplemental budget," said Sheets. Gov. Paul Cellucci has asked the legislature to appropriate $12 million to facilitate the transition.

All along, Sheets has looked to a Sept. 1 deadline to accomplish all the financing. That is the date at which Boston Medical Center could withdraw from the memoranda of understanding it has executed with Quincy.

Oct. 1 would be the official date for the new affiliation to become effective.

Throughout the afternoon Tuesday, Sheets, hospital officials and representatives of the Quincy Hospital labor coalition met to ensure that all the agreements regarding the hospital employees would be implemented on Oct. 1 as well.

Should BMC withdraw from the agreement, Sheets said not only the city but the state would be financially impacted.

"We'd end up paying $7 million just on unemployment compensation in the first six months," said Sheets. "The state would have to pay the same amount. We pay half."

Gorman said the cost to the state would be far more significant should Quincy Hospital close. "Not only would 1,100 be unemployed, but there is an incentive to keep working. These individuals are taking care of people who are in need, the poor and indigent," said Gorman.

"If Quincy is closed, the nearest local hospital would be South Shore or one in Boston or in Milton, which would be a significant change," he said.

To date, two memoranda of understanding have been executed. "The operative agreements among the city, Quincy Medical Center and BMC are being negotiated," Sweeney stated. "The medical staff leadership from both hospitals are fully engaged in planning the clinical affiliation for QMC.. Discussions have focused on how to strengthen the services of both organizations through the affiliation."

Sheets said he probably will have to return to Washington within the next couple of weeks to advocate on behalf of the hospital.

"We are working diligently to achieve successful movement of all these components and continue to be confident that the conversion will occur Oct. 1, 1999," he said.

MERRYMOUNT SCHOOL STUDENTS collected 21 milk jugs full of aluminum pull tabs to benefit the Shriners Hospital. The tabs are recycled and the money will help support the hospital. Stamos Accents Community Involvement, Qualifications

Jim Stamos, candidate for the Ward 6 city council seat, accented his qualifications and community involvement at a recent fundraiser at the Adams Inn Steamers Gazebo, North Quincy.

Stamos said that although a large crowd of Ward 6 residents and local business people attended, he was able to speak to most of them on a one-to-one basis.

Later, speaking to all present, he said:

"I have been a community activist for over 20 years. I have worked hard during that time on issues that residents of Ward 6 are concerned about.

"I am a family man, a homeowner, and a taxpayer. I am a business owner and a community leader. I have been a union member and a union steward. I have been the president of a large professional organization. I have plowed the city streets and cleaned the city parks.

Flynn & Co. Sells Former Alves Photo Lab

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Senior Vice President Jay Nuss has brokered the sale of 14 Storrs Avenue in Braintree, a deal worth $512,500.

The 19,000-square foot industrial/warehouse building changes hands from Parkingway Realty Trust to Simsbury Associates, a Boston-based developer of assisted living facilities that will both renovate and occupy the site. The building is the former home of the landmark Alves Photo Lab.

According to Simsbury Representative Bill Giovannucci, the interior renovations are underway and should be completed this fall, converting the entire facility to office space. Both Simsbury Associates and a second tenant, a software developer currently based in Rhode Island, will relocate their headquarters to the Braintree building.

Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski said he is encouraged by the move of two remote corporations to the South Shore.

"This area continues to attract up-and-coming businesses that have outgrown their urban facilities. More and more businesses are finding the South Shore to be the more practical alternative to overcrowded and high-priced office space in the city," Talkowski said.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. is a full service real estate firm specializing in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate and real estate auctions. For more information, call 617-479-9000.

Accounting Team/ARI Celebrates Grand Opening

The Accounting Team/ARI recently celebrated the opening of its new office in Quincy Center with a reception hosting its clients, business and community leaders and city officials.

Accounting Team is the temporary staffing agency in the organization while Accounting Recruiters International (ARI) is the permanent placement division of the company. Both units specialize in financial and accounting personnel ranging from CFO positions, to accounting managers and accountants, bookkeepers, payroll and receivable staff.

Accounting Team/ARI focuses on its "partnership" with clients, working with them to solve staffing needs. "We offer 24-hour hotline access to address client emergencies after normal business hours," said Accounting Team/ARI President Michael Alcott. "Knowing our clients' needs and acting as their partner for staffing, helps us get the right person to get their job done."

Alcott, who was born and raised in Quincy, said he is excited about the expansion of Presidents Place (Suite 504-S) at 1250 Hancock Street across from the Quincy Center T Station. "This is a great opportunity to expand our presence and better serve our clients throughout Greater Boston," he said.

Mayor James Sheets, who cut the ceremonial ribbon, expressed his pleasure with yet another business choosing Quincy. "Quincy has great access to public transportation, major highways and good parking. We are very happy to have Accounting Team/ARI in Quincy."

How To Prevent Heat Exhaustion, Other Illnesses

sodium-restricted diet. If left untreated, heat exhaustion can lead to heat stroke.

Heat Stroke: An extreme and serious condition where the body temperature rises sharply. Symptoms can include delirium, disorientation and coma. Heat stroke is life-threatening and is most likely to develop during a heat wave where the humidity is high and the temperatures are at or above 90 degrees F for three or more consecutive days. A person suffering from heat stroke needs to have their body temperature lowered by cooling the body surface with water and be transported to the hospital for immediate treatment.

For any severe reactions to the heat which can not be alleviated by rest and fluids, seek medical attention immediately.

NOTE: Victims of heat stress are often the very young, chronically ill and elder citizens. For the elderly living alone, make sure to contact neighbors, friends and family if you need assistance, Do not ignore the early warnings signs of heat stress and make sure to follow the advice described above.

Commissioner Gallahue also urges residents to follow two suggestions from the John Hopkins Medical Letter:

Do not rely on fans. If the temperature is 90 degrees F or above, fans alone usually cannot protect against heat-related illness.

Talk to your doctor about medications. It may be possible to alter a particular drug or dosage that could cause a problem. Under no circumstances should you change your medication on your own.

Foy Stepping Down As City Auditor

store founded by his grandfather, Robert E. Foy, in 1899, when he was appointed by Mayor Walter Hannon as treasurer-collector for a year.

One of the Foy's stores was located on Hancock Street in Quincy Square, opposite the Masonic Temple. The other was located at the corner of Franklin and Water Streets in South Quincy. The landmark stores closed many years ago.

Foy served consecutive one-year appointments under Hannon and Mayors James LaRaia and Arthur Tobin for a decade before he was elected to his first three-year term as city auditor by the councillors.

Foy was re-elected to his sixth third term in June 1997.

"When you get to be my age, it's not a surprise" to announce intentions of retirement, he said.

"I have worked with five different mayors," he said, referring to Mayors Francis X. McCauley and James Sheets. "They all have different styles, they're all good mayors," he said.

What has been most rewarding, he said, is to have worked for the city for 27 years and see it progress as it has, said the lifelong Quincy resident.

Sheets: Library Director 'Acted In Good Faith'

her review of the trust expenditures, she had discovered Dr. Nikkel had been paid over a period of time after the directors told her not to do so.

McLaughlin said this week she was optimistic that she could secure a grant for Nikkel to continue his work and that he would not have to be paid from the trust funds. Nikkel also has offered to meet with the trustees to discuss his project.

At issue is that some members of the board think that the library history could be compiled by volunteers, similar to the anecdotal political history former Mayor Frank McCauley is compiling.

"The matter of the book has not yet been resolved," McLaughlin said. She also said that the trustees may consider having a formal audit conducted of the trust funds.

The board of trustees is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. Monday at the Adams Shore branch of the library.

McLaughlin said she asked that the trust funds be audited to see whether some of those funds could be better invested so that they could earn more interest.

She said some of the funds were earning less than 1 percent annually.

Altogether, the trust funds amount to between $100,000 and $150,000, McLaughlin said. Language regarding some of the funds stipulates that only the interest, not the principal, may be used for library

The largest trust fund, established in memory of Thomas Crane, has been drawn down to only a few thousand dollars, she said. Approximately $150,000 was used for the construction of the new addition, she explained.

McLaughlin said when the results of the audit were released during the June 28 trustees' meeting, she volunteered to resign. "I was really devastated," she said when she learned of the findings.

"I went to the city solicitor and voiced my concerns."

During last week's meeting with the mayor, Sheets was supportive of McLaughlin, she said.

"I think she has an excellent track record," Sheets said again Tuesday. "She was an assistant under Warren Watson before I appointed her director.

"She has been the driving force on working toward the new $15 million addition and renovations to the library," said Sheets.

"Without her efforts, we would not be in the position to extend this beautiful, historical library.

"She has done a tremendous job," he said. As for her actions, he said, "I believe she acted in good faith. If she thought it was something wrong, she wouldn't have done it.

"She has a good solid character, and I have faith and confidence in her and still have that same faith and confidence," said Sheets.

TURF TOE

Turf toe is an injury related to the large toe joint. It is called turf toe because it is seen often in athlete's who play on artificial turf. In the South Shore, indoor soccer is very popular with several excellent facilities. However, the combination of artificial turf and more flexible, lighter shoes seem to be the culprit, in general, the sport of football seems to create more turf toe than other sports. Movements like running, cutting and quick "push offs" apply great forces against the large toe.

Symptoms of turf toe may include pain, swelling and a decrease in motion of the large toe. The athlete will be more aware of the pain as he or she pushes off the toe at the start of sudden movement (like the burst of a block). If the condition is not tended to it may become a serious injury making even walking difficult. Treatment includes rest, ice, compression and a possible change, of athletic shoes (stiffer soles).

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

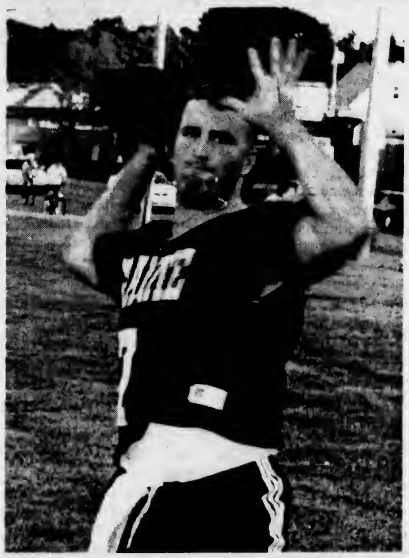
Quincy Granite Debuts In Inaugural Season Aug. 14 At Veterans Stadium

Semi-Pro Football Team Aims For Solid Start



By CHRIS POISSON

Sean Halpin and David Harris have known each other for only six months and in that short period of time they've added something to Quincy that has been missing for a long time - a semi-professional football team.

The two met back in February through mutual friends and quickly discovered they both shared a passion for football. Halpin mentioned he wanted to bring a team back to Quincy, and on May 14 the Quincy Granite held their first practice, courtesy of architects Halpin and Harris.

Halpin, 22, shined on North Quincy's football team from 1990-1994. He helped the Red Raiders become Super Bowl champions in 1992 when they defeated Arlington. Halpin went to play college football at the University of New Haven (1994-95) and the University of Massachusetts at Boston (1997). Last year he played for the Charleston Townies of the Eastern Football League.

Harris, 28, played high school football at Boston English High School where he graduated in 1990. A year later he moved to Quincy from Dorchester with his wife. He's coached the West Quincy Elks of the Quincy Youth Football League for the last three years, and before finding the Granite he played five years of semi-pro ball for the EFL's Boston Cowboys.

Now the two will bring their talents to the same field for the same team. Harris is an offensive guard and also a defensive tackle, who will be on the field the same time as Halpin, a middle linebacker. "Halpin is the head-hunter," says Harris. "I'll open up the holes and he'll come flying in behind me."

No matter how successful they are on the gridiron, it's their efforts off the field that has meant more to a community which hasn't had a semi-pro team in 30 years. The 1969 Quincy Giants, who played just one season, were the last team. Before the Giants there were two other semi-pro teams in Quincy, the Morrissey Club (1959-1965) and the Manets (1946-1949).

"We don't want this to be just throwing a football around," says Harris. "We want to make this into a dynasty where kids can play for many years.

"I think bringing football back to Quincy will be successful. It will get people out of the house instead of sitting inside and watching TV. Kids and parents will

14-Year-Olds Advance To State Tournament With District 4 Title

The Quincy Babe Ruth 14-year-old baseball tournament team dropped its first game in the state tournament to Norwood, 7-1, but bounced back in the second game of the double-elimination tournament to beat Somerville, 13-3.

Quincy advanced to the state tournament by capturing the District 4 Division title at French's Common Field in Braintree. It beat Hanover, 6-2, Hingham, 5-4, and a tough Braintree team twice, 12-9 and 5-4.

In the Norwood game, Quincy got off to a slow start as Norwood scored four runs in the first inning on a walk and three hits.

Quincy got on the scoreboard in the second with walks to Steve Pizzi and Bob Muollo. Pizzi scored on Marc Lopez' double to left field.

Strong Norwood pitching kept Quincy bats quiet for the balance of the game.

Dennis Thomson and Chris Dolbeare played well defensively for Quincy. Pitcher Brian O'Hanley gave up seven hits and a walk.

In the second game, Quincy's bats came alive against Somerville. Somerville scored two first-inning runs and one in the second before Quincy answered with two runs in the third.

George Phipps started things off with a hard single up the middle, followed by singles from Lopez, Dolbeare, Thomson and Pizzi.

Quincy scored six runs in the next inning on the strength of singles by Muollo, Donahue, Lopez, Brian O'Hanley and Thomson. Pitcher Dolbeare hit a two-run double.

Quincy closed out the scoring with five runs in the sixth inning on singles by second baseman Mark Dondero, O'Hanley, Pizzi, a double by Muollo and singles by Ryan Hemphill and Mike DeAngelo.

Strong relief pitching by Pizzi kept Somerville batters in check. He allowed only two hits, a walk and struck out six in picking up the win.

Quincy will play the winner of the Taunton-Peabody game at Billings Field in West Roxbury.

TIME TO PUT YOUR FOOT DOWN

In its most recent study on anti-lock brakes (ABS), the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety found that automobiles equipped with the advanced braking systems were more likely to be involved in fatal crashes than cars outfitted with conventional brakes. The Institute points out that these findings have more to do with driver's unfamiliarity with ABS than with any failing of anti-lock brakes themselves. While most drivers have been taught to pump the brake pedal of cars with conventional brakes in order to prevent wheel lockup and skids, anti-lock systems automatically and rapidly "pump" the brakes, thereby preventing lockup and skids. Instead of pumping the brake pedal themselves in panic situations, therefore drivers in ABS-equipped cars must learn to press hard on their brakes, ignore the pulsing sensation in the brake pedal, and maintain the pressure throughout the stop.

Don't hesitate to ask any questions about your brakes or about anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. We also use the AllData CD-Rom based system for the very latest maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). HINT: ABS employs sensors at each wheel that determine when a wheel is about to lockup, a condition that causes the tires to lose traction.

After 30 Year Absence, Semi-Pro Football Returning To Quincy

be able to watch a good football game without having to wait in traffic on their way to Foxborough on Sundays."

The Granite are a part of the New England Football league, comprised of 12 teams: Haverill Highlanders, Eastern Massachusetts Mavericks, Western New Hampshire Roughriders, Rockingham Cougars, Boston Bandits, Lowell Nor'easter, Lawrence Lightening, Bay State Bulldogs, Tri-Attleboro Rhinos, Massachusetts Havoc and South Shore Stars.

Quincy will play an eight-game schedule with home games held Saturday nights at Veteran's Memorial Stadium. And the new era kicks off on Aug. 14 when the Granite clash with the South Shore Stars at home at 7 p.m.

The Granite's entry into a new league was not a smooth ride, though. Their first choice was to join the well-established EFL, but the league's territorial rule denied them entrance. The Randolph Oilers stated that the Granite would be violating the 25-mile radius territorial right. They feared the Granite might take away some of its players and fans, so they voted against the expansion team.

Halpin and Harris worked around the politics and eventually found a home in the NEFL. Once in the league, their next step was to find a coach and the No. 1 guy on their list was North Quincy High School coach Ken McPhee. His availability, however, was uncertain.

McPhee recently accepted a new position as the Social Health Coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools, which required him to step down as the NQ football coach after 18 years at the helm. Halpin, who played for McPhee for two years, quickly made an offer, and McPhee jumped on it.

"At first I wasn't sure if he would be able to," says Halpin. "Once I found out that he wouldn't be coaching because of his new job, I went to his office and talked about it, and he said that sounded good."

"I decided this was a way for me to keep my hand in it," says McPhee. "I really wanted to continue to coach high school but the time constraints were just too much, so I decided this was one way to keep myself going at it. It's a nice deal."

With McPhee, the Granite have some local flavor to the team which they hope will attract the fans. And many of the players on the team played ball at North Quincy and Quincy, which should also help draw the crowds.

The 45-man roster has not been finalized yet, but there are a number of players that have already locked up a spot. Jeremy and Nathan Gott, Liam Higgins, Derek Epps, Gary Rowdon, Brian Raftery and Peter Fitzpatrick hail from North Quincy, while Charlie McCall, Mike Elder, Frank Calabro, Peter Kolson, Dave D'Olympio, Matt Fratarillo and Jim Hatfield come from Quincy.

"The players add a little local flair to the team and I think we're going to get good crowds. I really do," says McPhee. "I've heard nothing but positive things."

Although the roster isn't set, McPhee has picked his supporting cast. Joining him on the sidelines are Mark Giordani (defensive coordinator), Greg Wilson (offensive coordinator), Tony Green (linemen coach), John Sarianidds (linebackers coach), John Flynn (defensive coach), Steve Brudrick (trainer) and Joseph Desmond (treasurer).

So far, the Granite have scrimmaged two teams, the Boston Cowboys and Rockingham Cougars, during their 12 weeks of practice. This weekend there will be a league jamboree, and then opening day arrives the following week.

The players and coaches are optimistic about how they'll perform in their inaugural season.

"We held our own in our first scrimmage and that was a plus for us," says McPhee. "We weren't sure that would happen. I'm optimistic about the season. The kids have really progressed and we've got some real good players."

"I think we'll do pretty well," says Quincy's Jason Vaga, a 27-year-old defensive tackle who played four years with the Randolph Oilers. "We'll surprise a lot of teams. I think we'll have a chance to go undefeated because the Boston Cowboys are probably the second best team."

The season opener is less than a month away and the team anxiously waits for the opportunity to knock around some players other than its own. But the real story is the two local kids who were driven to bring football back to Quincy after a 30-year absence.

"They were the forerunners of this whole thing," says McPhee. "They put this thing together long before I got here. It's a game they love playing."

Taking Part In 20th Annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge

Local Cyclists Riding For Cancer Research And Lost Loved Ones

By CHRIS POISSON

The 20th Pan-Massachusetts Challenge will take place this weekend with 20 local residents participating to benefit The Jimmy Fund at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The Pan-Mass Challenge serves as the largest fundraiser for The Jimmy Fund, having raised over $34 million for cancer treatment and research.

The riders can compete in the one-day race, a 108-mile journey from Sturbridge to Bourne, or they can leg out the two-day, 194-mile trek from Sturbridge to Provincetown.

Over 2,000 riders, 75,000 sponsors and many volunteers take part in the event, and each rider must raise a minimum of $1300.

Of the 20 Quincy residents, there's a mixture of experience. There are the veterans who know the ins-and-outs, second-year returnees who know what to expect, and the rookies who've heard the stories.

The McDermott brothers, Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick (ninth year) and Quincy Police Patrolman Chris (eight year), have raised over $17,000 in their eight rides together.

The brothers make the ride every year in the memory of their mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in December, 1989. They have also recently lost their uncle, Commander Joseph McDermott, US Navy Retired, to cancer.

"There has been no greater pain in our lives than the loss of our mother," said Patrick, who was sidelined last year because of hip replacement surgery. "To lose her life at such a young age is indeed a tragedy."

"When she died, I had a tough time with it," said Chris. "I wanted to do something in the memory of my mother. And to do something to stop cancer, if I can."

"It was good to get involved so we could give some tribute to my mother," said Patrick. "We found this to be a great opportunity, and we both enjoy bicycling."

For new-comer Jeff Stapleton, he decided to get involved after his father, Robert Sr., passed away in April from kidney cancer. Also, his mother, Barbara, has lung cancer.

"In light of all that, I decided to do it," said Stapleton. "The goals are high. Having to raise $1300 made me a little reluctant at first. But with both parents having cancer I decided this was good to get involved in."

Stapleton had raced for the American Lung Association the past three years, and heard about this event from some friends at the Mass Bay Club, who will join him on the two-day trip.

WARD 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott (left) and his brother, Quincy Police Patrolman Chris McDermott (holding daughter Caitlin) with a picture of their mother Patricia in anticipation of this weekend's Pan-Mass Bicycle Challenge. Patricia McDermott died from cancer 10 years ago.

"From what I've heard, it's just awesome," said Stapleton. "It's unbelievable. They say the only thing you ask yourself afterwards is why you didn't do it before."

Lauraine Gillespie, also competing in the Pan-Mass Challenge for the first time, is doing it to just to help in the battle against cancer.

"I'm doing it because it's for such a good cause, and at the same time it's a challenge for me, personally," said Gillespie.

Christine Miller, who will be in her sixth race, also used participate because it was for a good cause. But then something hit closer to home.

"In my third year my mom was actually diagnosed with breast cancer," said Miller. "She's doing well with it right now. But I guess that's my new reason for doing the race."

Beth Schratz, who lost her mother, Patricia, to cancer in 1996, raced for the first time last year. Although she was nervous at first, she had a great experience and will be back on the road to Provincetown on Saturday.

"I was very nervous last year," said Schratz. "The last time I rode a bike it had a horn and tassels on it. I was a nervous wreck. I had no idea what to expect. But it was just an incredible feeling, getting together with everyone who were there for the same reasons. It's just an incredible ride."

The race is no easy task for the participants, many of whom say climbing the hills is the hardest and most enduring part of the route.

"The hills are pretty brutal," said Patrick. "When you hit a hill sometimes you think you're on your last breathe. But then you realize there is a kid going through chemotherapy and you start not to worry that much."

"What I'm going through is nothing compared to them," said Chris. "Every thing that I'm going through ends on Sunday."

"It's an emotional weekend," said Miller. "You'll be going up a hill, thinking how tough it is and then you'll see someone ride by with a picture on their shirt of a five-year-old who died of cancer. And that inspires you."

15-Year-Olds Bow But Hold Heads High

BABE RUTH

By CHRIS POISSON

The three ingredients the Quincy Babe Ruth All-Stars mixed in during their first two games of the Eastern Massachusetts 15-year-old Babe Ruth tournament vanished last week.

Solid pitching, great defense and timely hitting were a no-show for Quincy (2-2), as it fell to Taunton, 11-4, last Tuesday and Arlington, 8-4, last Thursday to get knocked out of the double-elimination tournament held at Adams Field.

The 1969 team remains as the only Quincy squad to ever win the championship.

Arlington, which lost its first game to Quincy, reeled off six straight wins to win the tourney and advance to the regionals in Orono, Maine. Arlington beat Taunton, 8-7, in the final game thanks to Marc Albano's sacrifice fly that scored Pat Murphy in the eighth inning. Murphy was named the MVP of the tournament.

"The difference from the first two games was our pitching wasn't as strong and our defense wasn't as strong," said coach Dick Lombardi. "We knew going into the tournament that we needed good pitching and defense because the other teams were strong, which we did in the first two.

"I'm real happy for the kids. They played well. We finished third in the tourney. If we won the Arlington game last Thursday, who knows. I know the kids are disappointed but they have nothing to be ashamed of."

Taunton took an early 4-0 lead after two innings, but Quincy came back to score three runs in the sixth to pull within striking distance. In the seventh, though, Quincy crumbled as Taunton answered with seven to run away with the game.

"The game was a lot closer than the score," said Lombardi. "It was a 4-3 game then Taunton turned it back on again and started whacking the ball."

Quincy had its chances to put more up on the scoreboard. In the bottom of the fifth it loaded the bases with no outs, but failed to get a runner home.

Ben Bell started the game and was relieved by Chris Lockhead, who pitched a strong five innings before the seventh-inning meltdown. Tom Hughes closed out the game.

Quincy looked like it was going to rebound from the loss after it jumped to a 3-0 lead against Arlington in the next game. But some defensive lapses in the bottom of the second allowed Arlington to score five runs and eventually the win.

James LaFleur started on the mound but had to leave the game early after getting hit by a pitch in the fourth. Chris Ham, who beat Arlington in the second game of the tournament, relieved LaFleur.

Ham had two hits and two RBIs and Pat Bregoli had a hit and one RBI to pace Quincy's offense.

"Both Arlington and Taunton were solid hitting teams," said Lombardi. "And we made a couple of errors and they capitalized on them. Give them credit. They ended up making the fewest mistakes and that's why they made it to the finals.

"They're only 15-year-old kids and people look at them like they're Major League ballplayers. But they're young and they're going to make mistakes."

Lombardi felt the tournament was a success and hopes that Adams Field will host more action in the future.

"It was a great tournament. The other teams were in awe of the park. The people had a good time. The kids put on a great show. It was eight days of great baseball."

Recreation director Barry J. Welch praised the Hershey Youth Program and the Quincy Track Club for their commitment to the health and welfare of the young participants from the community.

"The Hershey Program is accessible to all and provides positive benefits for all who take part," he said. "The Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to sponsor such a quality event."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Swimmer's Ear Season

As the heat increases, so will the time your child spends in the water.

Swimming, camp water sports, and sprinklers can cause Swimmer's Ear.

According to Harvard Vanguard pediatrician Dr. James Cooley, Swimmer's Ear, which is different from a middle ear infection, is an inflammation of the outer ear canal irritated by water that stays in the ear too long.

1. For ear pain that lasts more than two or three days, your child should see a doctor.

2. For Swimmer's Ear, the usual remedy is a prescription ear drop, though, is most cases, the infection will usually go away on its own.

3. A child with Swimmer's Ear shouldn't swim for 2-3 days.

4. When back in the water, make sure they dry their ears after each swim.

5. If your child feels water in the ear, have them tilt their head and jump up and down to release the pressure.

If you have any questions about ear pain, you should contact your physician.

Don't Get Ticked Off This Summer

If you're planning a summer picnic, hike in the woods or other outdoor activity that puts you near tall grass or overgrown brush and vegetation, remember to be aware of tick-borne diseases that are common during this time of year.

If they are caught in the early stages, they can be effectively treated.

Tick Attacks

Lyme disease, which is native to Massachusetts, is the most prevalent tick-borne disease. More than 70,000 cases have been reported in North America in the last 10 years.

Symptoms of Lyme disease are flu-like and may include a fever, headache, muscle ache, fatigue, and a mild stiff neck. Many people also develop the telltale rash, called erythema migrans, that is often called a target, or "bulls-eye," rash.

However, you may not be able to recall a tick bite and may not develop the characteristic rash. Due to these factors, and the fact that lab testing can be unreliable at the early stages, you should be aware of the possibility of contracting Lyme disease. Caught at an early stage, most people can be effectively treated with antibiotics.

Another less common but serious tick-borne disease is Rocky Mount spotted fever. Most of these infected display flu-like symptoms, and more than 90 percent develop a generalized rash. Early antibiotic treatment has been effective, so it is important to recognize the symptoms early.

DR. RAYMOND WONG

Additional tick-borne illnesses have been identified in our area, although they are significantly less common. Erlichiosis, Babesiosis and Tularemia are also transmitted by ticks and can require special diagnosis. These diseases also carry flu-like symptoms and a fever. If untreated these tick-transmitted diseases can be quite severe.

Avoiding Tick Ailments

To prevent tick-borne diseases follow these simple suggestions.

- Stay out of brushy vegetation.
- Wear long, light-colored pants and shirts so you can spot the ticks.
- Use a tick repellent containing DEET, but make sure to read the labels for children's formulas. If your child is under two, consult a physician first.
- Check for ticks regularly after being outdoors to keep them from attaching and passing on disease.
- Check your pets for ticks to make sure they are not bringing the insects into your house.
- Consult your physician to see if you are a candidate for a recently-introduced vaccination if you feel you are at risk.

If you have any suspicion about being bitten by a tick or you are suffering from flu-like symptoms and fever, be sure to talk to a physician.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

The touch in a handshake can mean "Hello," "Goodbye," "Congratulations," "Sympathy" and a lot of other things. Because man has a soul, his touch differs from the pawing touch of an animal. Man combines the touch of the physical with the spiritual. The loving touch of a mother's hand can ease the pain of a child's bruise. A slap can inflict pain physically and spiritually.

There are contrasts in both the physical and spiritual touch. Some are pleasant. Some are painful. In a spiritual sense, everybody touches the lives of others everyday by what we say... what we do...how we act. The touch on others can be good or bad. It can bring a touch of happiness or unhappiness. It can bring a touch of moderation and mercy; a touch of harshness or hatred. All of us touch someone with nearly everything we say or do everyday.

And, incidentally, we sometimes wonder how - or if - the weekly thoughts you read here, reach out to "Touch you" as we hope they do?...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

CRITIC'S CORNER

SUMMER OF SAM: A friend of mine, a dark-haired woman, was 22 when the Son of Sam was rampaging through the boroughs of New York City, gunning down young women with brown hair. She recalls the terror she felt whenever she had occasion to go out socializing. She remembers how she'd NEVER sit in a parked car with a beau while the Son of Sam was still at large. Fear reigned, and young women were frightened and helpless.

This Spike Lee offering recalls that summer of horror with this flick. However, lest you think this is some sort of docu-drama on the exploits of David Berkowitz (the Son of Sam), think again. This is a frenetic, fast-paced, furiously emotional and explosive look back at that sweltering summer. We are constantly barraged with grainy clips of neighbors fighting, young couples coupling, and people pointing fingers of blame at others they'd known their whole lives. In effect, the audience never really gets a chance to catch its breath.

As it all works out, we can see the failure of this movie at the box office as a testament to Lee's treatment of Victor Colicchio's screenplay. Even Pulitzer Prize-winning New York columnist Jimmy Breslin, who supplies the narrative, can't rescue this uneven film.

It is unfortunate that the cast can't live up to its other film achievements. We have none other than John Leguizamo, Mira Sorvino, Adrien Brody and Ben Gazzara gracing this cinematic piece. However, even they can't pull off a cohesive drama. Their talents are basically wasted.

All in all, those who lived through that summer will probably find it interesting at best. Others, with little or no knowledge of it, will simply be bored.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You have a direct line to the powers that be. Perhaps you don't understand completely, but you definitely have more of a clue than anyone else.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your best intentions may be misinterpreted at this time. Observe the actions of your friends and co-workers, but save criticism for later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) People appreciate the quality of your work and understand that you will be successful. Don't be surprised how many friends – and fans – come out of nowhere to congratulate you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Now is not the time for your customary bluntness or humor. Simple statements from you could be taken the wrong way and trigger arguments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Share your boundless strength and enthusiasm with other people. By doing what is important to you, you inspire and assist your peers.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Devote some time and energy to your personal life. Go on a date with that special someone. If you don't have one, now's the time to look.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your mind and body are equally impressive, making the overall package stunning. It's a good time to meet someone.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It may be impossible for you to find solutions to every interpersonal problem at this time. All involved parties should take some time to think about things.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Life is a warm and enjoyable experience right now, and interesting people keep coming your way. Don't hesitate to soak up the sun and fun.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) There is no way to ignore all the items that have piled up on your to-do list. Forget what everyone else is doing and worry about your responsibilities.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Coincidence and serendipity are major forces at this time. However, do not underestimate the effect that your words have on others.

PISCES (February 19 March 20) Happiness and productivity will be achieved if you do things on your own. Other people will want to ask questions that you are not in the mood to answer.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: The way you live is too cutting edge to escape comment. However people are as likely to copy you as to criticize. As long as no one hinders your progress, they can do what they like; you rarely notice. "Live and let live" is your motto.

Lack Of Sand Postpones Annual Sand Castle Contest

Tony's Clam Shop, Matilda's Boardwalk Cafe and the Ward 5 Community Association announces the seventh annual Children's Sand Castle Contest on Wollaston Each originally scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 8 has been postponed due to lack of sand on the southern portion of the beach.

"Each year there seems to be less and less sand along the southern portion of Wollaston Beach," said Karen Djerf, co-owner of Tony's Clam Shop. "This year the southern end of the beach is rockier than ever.

"Although it's still a popular spot for sun bathers, there just isn't enough sand to allow the scores of children we usually attract to build sand castles. We are really disappointed because this has been such a popular tradition," Djerf said.

"Community organizations, residents and businesses have been doing their part to revive Wollaston Beach through sponsoring recreational activities, beach clean ups and storm drain stenciling but, now more than ever, the MDC needs to follow through with their promise to rebuild sea walls, add sand, and improve landslide improvements along Wollaston Beach," said Douglas Gutro, president of the Ward 5 Community Association.

"Important efforts are underway to improve water quality along the beach, but landside improvement including new sand are equally important and urgently needed," Gutro added.

Event sponsors noted that they are willing to host this popular event if the MDC would bring in some sand before the end of the beach season.

Tony's Clam Shop, located on Quincy Shore Dr., Wollaston Beach, has sponsored its annual Children's Sand Castle contest for six years. Each year participation has grown. Last year more than 80 children and their families participated in this popular summer event.

A recently released analysis of survey results undertaken by the City of Quincy's Beaches' and Coastal Commission reaffirmed the popularity of Wollaston Beach. Sixty-six percent of respondents visit Wollaston Beach on a regular basis. Of those who visit Wollaston Beach, most desired clean water, more sand, and various landside improvements.

Survey respondents also requested organized recreational activities, including volleyball and sand castle contests along Quincy beaches and coastal areas.

More than 2,000 Quincy residents returned surveys.

In April, the Wollaston Beach Task Force issued $6 million worth of recommendations to city and state officials to improve water quality at Wollaston Beach. Various agencies and organizations are working toward implementing these recommendations.

Fr. Bill's Place Food Fest Aug. 18

The License Board gave Michael Cheney, chairman of the Fr. Bill's Place Food Fest and Auction a one day license to hold the event Aug. 18 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Summer House at Marina Bay.

The fifth annual food fest will benefit Fr. Bill's Place.

Cheney said 20 restaurants will be cooking gourmet meals and desserts and "come together under one tent with a taste of Quincy."

Local wine distributors will be on hand with a selection of wines to sample.

The auction will feature items donated by local businesses, sporting memorabilia, entertainment packages, and tickets to sporting events.

Cheney said there are 50 volunteers ready to donate their time and effort for the event.

Cheney said all proceeds will benefit Fr. Bill's Place and that all of the restaurants involved are donating their food.

Tickets are $50 and may be purchased at the mayor's office at city hall.

Council Approves Health Center Sale At $550,000

at-large Francis McCauley. "It's time to accept the offer."

He noted that the mayor's comprehensive plan for the city's schools calls for relocating some of the offices, previously housed in the health center, be relocated in the vocational technical school, when that space no longer is needed for school purposes.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico charged that "somebody wasn't watching the building and let it sink to disrepair. The building has become obsolete," he continued. "It's unfortunate to sell because of the cost to upgrade it."

Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill, chairman of the finance committee, said that during the past decade, building regulations and codes had changed. Making a building ADA-compliant, removing asbestos, is costly. The city is aware of that, he said.

"The city has gotten its money's worth," he added.

"We want the public to be assured we have considered all options," Durkin continued, noting that Fire Chief Thomas Gorman has commented previously that the city's fire houses are obsolete.

Executive Secretary John Keenan that particular site is inappropriate for a new central fire headquarters because it is at one of the city's busiest intersections, where Adams Street forks off Hancock Street.

A fire station there "would make traffic worse," said Keenan. In addition, the only bays in the building are at the rear. It would be cheaper to tear it down and build anew, but, because of its location, it's not feasible, he said.

When D'Amico asked how the proceeds of the sale would be used, Keenan said the money could be used for the library project, if there is a shortfall, or for other capital needs.

Added Public Works Commissioner David Colton, "It definitely will be building-related."

Board Transfers Shaw's Beer And Wine License To Victory

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted unanimously Tuesday for the transfer of the retail beer and wine license from Shaw's Supermarket at 475 Hancock St., to Victory Supermarkets.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the vote is subject to approval from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

According to Arthur "Jay" DiGeronimo, Jr. president of Victory, the family owned business would open in early October.

Stating he was hoping to open on time because he is "paying rent" and also so customers of Shaw's "won't establish their business elsewhere".

He said his family has owned Victory Supermarkets since the 1960s and now have 15 markets in Central Massachusetts.

When Patricia Thornley of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association expressed concern over the proximity of the liquor aisles near the children's items, such as baby's formula, DiGeronimo assured her that the aisles would be segregated from each other.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said he would set up a neighborhood meeting for a "better understanding of how the changes will affect the neighborhood."

Shea indicated that the meeting would not have a bearing on the beer and wine license, because "the great supermarket fight is over" referring to other supermarkets in the city who all received their beer and wine licenses following opposition.

He said the board "wouldn't go back, but go forward" and that the beer and wine licenses in the markets have been a "positive situation."

DiGeronimo who showed renovation plans to the board said that Tuesday would be senior citizens discount day, and buses wold be available for service to area senior citizen's complexes.

He said there would be a courtyard cafe coffee and cappucino bar and an expanded produce department.

DiGeronimo said there will install a new front-end register system along with painting and decor changes.

Steven Beane will manage the market.

Police Chief Thomas Frane suggested employees attend ID and TIPS classes.

Atty. Robert Fleming, representing Shaw's said that Shaw's will still be functioning at Star Market on Granite Street having recently acquired that store, but that the Shaw's on Quincy Avenue has been sold to the Quincy Municipal Credit Union.

Hanley Brunch Sunday

Greg Hanley, candidate for the Ward 1 city council seat, will hold a brunch Sunday at 10:30 a.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club.

"Everyone who lives in Ward 1 is welcome to come and have breakfast even if it's just to listen to what their neighbors and I have to say about the future of Quincy and our own neighborhoods," Hanley said.

Hanley said he has been campaigning door-to-door and the breakfast will allow him to reach a larger audience.

McGillicuddy Drops Out, Backs Finn

No Council At-Large Preliminary

Stearns Company, Inc., of Hingham, Steel and Precast Erectors, guides the first steel truss into place in the attic space of United First Parish Church. Sixteen steel trusses are being rigged in the church, replacing the eight 171-year-old timber trusses which are cracking.

There will be no preliminary election for city councillor at-large, this year's political main event.

David McGillicuddy withdrew as a candidate Tuesday, reducing the field to six candidates and eliminating the need for a preliminary run-off Sept. 14.

The six remaining candidates will square off in the final election Nov. 2.

Seven candidates are required for a preliminary election for the three at-large seats.

The only preliminary election contests now will be for the open council seats in Wards 1 and 6.

McGillicuddy, a retired telephone company executive and runner-up in the at-large race two years ago, said he was stepping aside for family reasons and the fact he felt unable to devote the necessary time to his campaign to win.

McGillicuddy, 58, of Elmwood Ave., Wollaston, immediately threw his support to Joseph Finn, 43, of Williams St., a political newcomer and former director of Fr. Bill's Place shelter for the homeless.

McGillicuddy not only will back Finn but will also serve as his campaign manager, he said.

McGillicuddy urged his supporters to remain involved in this year's race.

"I would encourage all of you to examine the remaining candidates and get involved," he said. "This election may be the city's most important. Our future is not as bright as it could be."

McGillicuddy informed City Clerk Joseph Shea of his withdrawal in a brief letter Tuesday. Thursday is the last day for candidates to withdraw.

Later in a statement, McGillicuddy said:

"It is with deep regret I announce my withdrawal from this year's race. When that challenge concerns family, there is no choice. I must focus my attention on family."

McGillicuddy said he told his campaign committee:

"I regret I can not dedicate the time to this race that it will take to win in November. When you are the candidate you must give 100 and 10 percent all the time.

"I would not ask supporters to continue working hard if I can not dedicate all my attention to this race."

Although McGillicuddy's withdrawal eliminates a preliminary contest, the at-large race remains this year's main election attraction.

City Council President Peter Kolson jump-started the interest when he decided to give up his Ward 1 seat to run for an at-large seat all three of which are held by incumbents up for re-election.

The three are Tim Cahill, Paul Harold and former Mayor Frank McCauley.

The other candidate in addition to Finn is Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, former businesswoman and a member of the Silver Haired

$78 Million Earmarked For Fore River Bridge Rehabilitation Project

The Legislature's passage of a Capital Supplemental Budget includes approximately $78 million for a major rehabilitation of the Fore River Bridge, announces State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Ronald Mariano.

"This section of Route 3A from Quincy to Weymouth is in serious need of rehabilitation," Mariano said. "The drawbridge deck of the bridge will be replaced and a completely new electrical system will be installed."

The Massachusetts Highway Department plans to continue operating the bridge during the rehabilitation process.

"Every effort will be made to keep the level of traffic congestion low and to provide for pedestrian safety across the bridge. The bridge is heavily traveled and must be upgraded to meet stricter safety standards," Morrissey said.

The rehabilitation of the bridge is designed to improve traffic flows and the structure's overall safety.

The legislation requires the governor's approval before funding will be allocated. The legislative delegation is hopeful that construction will begin shortly after the governor signs the capital supplemental budget into law.

Sandra McCauley Resigns From Library Board

The resignation of Sandra J. McCauley from the Thomas Crane Public Library Board of Trustees has been accepted by Mayor James Sheets.

Mayor Sheets said Tuesday he had sent a letter to McCauley with "deep appreciation for her years of service and particularly for her leadership in helping to bring the addition and renovation to construction."

Sheets added "she'll be very much missed."

McCauley tendered her resignation effective Aug. 9 stating recent developments concerning her report on the June audit of the library trust funds presented to the board.

SANDRA McCAULEY

McCauley raised questions after a recent audit, requested by Library director Ann McLaughlin. McLaughlin had apparently used some of the funds inappropriately, and was told some of the expenditures should not have been made with trust funds.

One of the expenditures was money paid to researcher-historian Stan Nikkel who is working on a book detailing the history of the library.

McLaughlin paid Nikkel $6,000 for the work he had completed.

Shipyard Gets Six-Month Extension On First $1.5 Million Payment

The U.S. Maritime Administration last Friday granted a six-month extension to Massachusetts Heavy Industries to make its first interest payment of $1.5 million on a $55 million MARAD-guaranteed loan from Fleet National Bank.

The payment was due in June.

MHI has borrowed nearly $100 million to modernize the Fore River Shipyard and resume the construction of ships. The modernization work is 10 months behind schedule, according to Mayor James Sheets.

He said he expected the waiver would be granted to defer the loan payment.

Shipyard owner Sotirios Emmanouil has stated repeatedly it has a contract with Intermare Navigation SA to construct six double-hulled tankers and has been seeking an additional $240 million in loan guarantees from MARAD to build the vessels.

MARAD has not made a decision on that proposal, and the Inspector General's office of the U.S. Department of Transportation has urged MARAD to re-evaluate the credit risk of the plan. The Inspector General reiterated its advice when it learned of the payment delay.

Fleet had informed MARAD of the payment problem in mid-June, and Fleet could have demanded payment or declared the loan was in default. Shipyard officials had asked for the deferral because the shipyard had encountered unavoidable delays in reactivating the shipyard and that the delays had increased costs.

Funds for the June 1999 payment to Fleet were used instead for construction at the shipyard, according to MHI attorneys.

With the deferral, MHI will be allowed to pay its other obligations, including a $258,880 payment it owes the city on a $7.8 million loan it obtained through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Although that payment also was due in June, MHI could not pay Quincy until the federal-guaranteed loan was paid first. With the deferral however, MHI can now make the payment.

The city had used a portion of a $1 million economic development initiative grant from HUD to make the MHI payment and maintain the loan in a current status. MARAD had told MHI it must repay the escrow account by Nov. 1.

Sheets said the city had applied for the $1 million grant in anticipation of construction delays.

"I thought there would be delays in the modernization process because of a lot of the problems that you have in trying to modernize an old shipyard," Sheets said as he explained why the city had applied for the $1 million grant. "You don't know what you are going to run into in 21E problems, pollution, labor force, contractors."

Sheets said that once construction of the first ship begins, MHI will be receiving revenues which can be applied to the loans.

"Within the next six months, there will be more than enough equity to pay out the loans," said Sheets, adding that when the modernization of the Fore River shipyard is completed, it will be worth $250 million.

SENIOR LIVING

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD AND HEALTHY

There are currently about 50,000 centenarians living in the U.S., and recent research shows they are healthier than most people might expect. According to a Harvard University study on centenarians, those who live to 90 or 95 are, as a group, healthier than people 10-15 years younger. Contrary to previous studies that suggested that nearly all those reaching 100 should suffer dementia, the new research shows that up to 25% of centenarians have no dementia. With all respect to overall health, it seems those who are strong enough to make it to age 95 show signs that they have a significant number of good years left. This helps dispel the notion that very old age is necessarily linked with deterioration.

Keeping your mind alert and your heart connected to friends and family is the best way of ensuring your well-being and good health. Maintaining and improving your health is simple at Marina Place. Sheets Tells Fellow Mayors At Meeting

High-Speed Ferry Service Here To Nova Scotia 'A Real Possibility'

By MARILYN JACKSON

High-speed ferry service from Quincy to Gloucester to Shelburne, Nova Scotia, is a real possibility, according to Mayor James Sheets, who hosted the sixth annual meeting of mayors and other officials from the Maritime Provinces and southeastern Massachusetts last week at the Adams Inn.

Service from Quincy to Gloucester could easily dovetail into the plans which Sen. Bruce Tarr, D-Gloucester, and Nova Scotia officials are exploring for a high-speed, single-hull vessel to begin service between the two ports, perhaps as early as 2002. Sheets suggested the link from the South Shore to Gloucester could be via Harbor Express, which already provides commuter boat service to Boston and Logan Airport from the Fore River Shipyard.

"It would take an hour from Quincy to Gloucester and another six hours to Nova Scotia," said Sheets. The ferry service was just one idea proposed during the three-day conference of SEMACA, the Southeastern Massachusetts Atlantic Canada Association.

"The object of the conference is to create economic ties and tourism ties between southeastern Massachusetts and the Maritime provinces," said Sheets. Last year's conference was held in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

At the conclusion of the event, the delegates adopted three resolutions, the first of which was to decide to meet next year at Happy Valley-Goose Bay, Labrador, and to continue to maintain and expand the economic, cultural and tourism ties between the two regions.

The officials also resolved to support the concept of an Atlantic Trade Corridor, stretching from the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador to Key West, Fla., and including all the coastal states and provinces which touch the Atlantic.

In promoting ferry service between Gloucester and Shelburne, the officials said they recognize the need for such a service which not only would facilitate exchanges in commerce, academia and the arts but would further promote tourism.

The conference also was an opportunity for Quincy to showcase many of its attributes.

A trolley tour took visitors to the Fore River Shipyard and to the Quarry Hills Golf Course to highlight what can be accomplished through public-private partnerships and to Aslanis Seafoods which already imports product from Lockeport, N.S., observed Mayor Sarah Huskilson.

The group also visited Marina Bay, where restaurants and shops and entertainment are mixed with residential development.

"My eyes are much more focused because of what I've seen and heard," said Charles Gillespie, a councillor from Moncton, New Brunswick, who was attending his first SEMACA conference.

"There's potential for us both," he said, noting that Moncton once had flourishing shipbuilding and railway industries. The city, he said, has just taken over the airport and wants to promote tourism.

"Many Greater Bostonians have a lot of roots in New Brunswick," he noted, "and a lot of people are coming home. These are people who left in the 1940s and are returning home. They are still Canadians," he said.

Just recently,

HEADING TO LABRADOR IN 2000, Dr. Anthony Cicerone, director of Canadian studies at Bridgewater State College, Dennis Peck, director of economic development in Labrador City, Labrador, and Mayor James Sheets discuss next year's Southeastern Massachusetts Atlantic Canada Conference, to be held at Happy Valley-Goose Bay, Labrador, in front of a Goose Bay mural. Sheets hosted this year's conference at the Adams Inn.

$4.5 Million Approved For Center Concourse

A $4.5 million appropriation for the concourse Burgin Parkway-Hancock St. link has been approved by the House and Senate and awaits Gov. Paul Cellucci's signature, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

Mayor Sheets said since the state had already designated the contractor that will be used for the project, the construction will be able to begin as soon as the contractor is able.

He said Governor Cellucci will be breaking ground at the parking lot in the area of the new furniture store formerly Paperama in about two weeks.

Sheets said there are "major retail stores seriously waiting to locate in the Parking Way the minute the contractor starts to construct the concourse."

Truman Did Stop, Then Didn't

They say when you hit 39 your memory begins to slip a little.

Having reached and passed 39 a while ago (okay, long ago), mine must be on a greased slide.

A couple of weeks ago I recalled traveling with Democratic presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson aboard his campaign travel in October, 1952 and the "whistle stop" it made here in Quincy.

STEVENSON

I also said that sometimes campaign trains just whistled but didn't stop. And, as an example, cited Harry Truman's campaign train roaring through Quincy in 1948 without stopping.

TRUMAN

Not so, says Paul Judge of Deep Channel Drive, Berlin, MD, a reader and a former Quincy resident.

"Your memory is failing," he writes. "Harry Truman did not roar through Quincy in 1948. He stopped at the church (First Parish) in Quincy Sq., visited the burial chamber of the Presidents Adams and gave about a five minute speech from the steps of the church. I was there.

"I was 16 years old and a student at Quincy High School. It seemed most important to me to see the President of the United States, so I took an early bus from Houghs Neck and got to the church in plenty of time for President Truman's 7 a.m. stop.

"A subsequent lifelong career in Washington, D.C., enabled me on many occasions to meet or be present with President Truman's successors from President Eisenhower to Bush. The awe of being in the company of a President has never diminished from that chilly fall day in 1948.

"Lastly, of all the publications I receive I look forward most to the arrival of The Quincy Sun. I love my hometown and I appreciate being kept up to date by your fine weekly newspaper.

He's correct. Truman did stop in Quincy. But he also roared through Quincy, too. Seems I got my years a little mixed up.

He stopped here Thursday, Oct. 28, 1948 while on his "Give 'em hell, Harry!" re-election campaign.

It was four years later, Saturday, Oct. 18, 1952, that he sped through Quincy enroute to Brockton campaigning for Stevenson where I covered him.

It was just nine days before Stevenson's own train stopped here Oct. 27, 1952. Apparently Truman knew Stevenson would stop here so he sped onto Brockton instead.

At Legion Parkway in Brockton Truman, in fine form, told a crowd of about 20,000 not to believe Republican campaign "hooey" but to look at the Republican record in Congress.

Police said Truman--campaigning for Stevenson--did not draw as big a crowd as he did stumping for himself in 1948. And that Rocky Marciano drew a bigger turnout after winning the heavyweight title.

Back in Quincy that morning the report was that Truman's train "thundered past the Quincy Depot so fast that spectators could not even detect signs of life by peering through windows."

Maybe just as well for those aboard the train. Standing at the station were youngsters from the Presidents Hill area carrying "I Like Ike" signs.

Quincy was still a Republican town back in those days. In fact the city went for Tom Dewey over Truman in 1948 by 1,453 votes.

And in 1952, World War II hero Dwight Eisenhower, running as a Republican, rolled by Stevenson by just under 10,000 votes here.

Thanks to Paul Judge for helping to straighten things out and for the nice plug about The Sun.

TOMORROW IS FRIDAY the 13th and it's going to be a lucky day for two of this year's city election candidates.

City Clerk Joseph Shea and Asst. Clerk Maureen Hallsen will be drawing the names of the candidates for position on the Sept. 14th preliminary election ballot.

And, of course, everyone wants that No. 1 spot which observers say is good for extra votes.

There will be only two preliminary run-offs.

Names will be drawn for position in the two preliminary election run-offs for open council seats in Ward 1 and Ward 6.

The Ward 1 candidates are: Gretchen Grant, Greg Hanley, Russell Patten, William Ryan, and William Weed.

The Ward 6 candidates: Maryann Mahony, Joseph Newton, James Stamos and Jens Thornton.

David McGillicuddy's decision to withdraw from the council at-large race eliminated the need for a preliminary election contest there. Seven candidates are required for a preliminary election for those three seats and now there are only six.

A SUNDAY BRUNCH fundraiser for Ward 6 candidate Maryann Mahony is coming up Aug. 22, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at The Summer House, Victory Rd., Marina Bay. Donation $20 per person, $35 a couple.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD view of Quincy Hospital was postmarked in 1919, the year that the city took over the operation of the facility. Opened in 1890, the original buildings and the three acre parcel of land were a gift to the hospital corporation from William B. Rice. His home on Adams Street later became the Rice Eventide Home. For almost 30 years, until the city took it over, the hospital was almost entirely equipped and maintained by a long list of benefactors including the well known Quincy families of Adams, Rice, Faxon and Gordon.

Excavation Of Blast Furnace Near Completion

Aug. 12 - 18
1956
43 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Roland Wells Robbins, archeologist heading up the excavation of the John Winthrop, Jr. blast furnace, said the work was 90 percent complete.

The West Quincy site, adjacent to the Hall Cemetery, was deeded to the city for $1 by the cemetery corporation for the permanent preservation of the foundations of the furnace. Constructed in 1644, it was the first producing iron works in the country, pre-dating Saugus. Winthrop was the son of Bay Colony Governor John Winthrop.

In addition to the excavation work, Robbins' contract with the city included photographing and cataloguing all the artifacts. That work would be completed by Labor Day.

PERMIT FOR NEW SQUANTUM CHURCH

A permit was granted for the construction of a new Star of the Sea Church at 101 Bellevue Rd. It was the same site as the recently razed church building.

Construction costs were listed at $200,000, with the construction beginning this week. A spring completion date was anticipated.

DELEGATES SPORT HARRIMAN BUTTONS

Two Quincy delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, Ida Lyons and Joseph McDonough, raised eyebrows with their Harriman for President buttons.

While it was generally assumed that Adlai Stevenson had the nomination wrapped up, the buttons for Averell Harriman showed there was a grassroots campaign building for the popular New York governor. While McDonough sported a Harriman button, he said he would cast his first vote for president for Congressman John McCormack as the state's favorite son.

Meanwhile, national party leaders were asking out loud if it was time to break the old taboo and nominate a Catholic. The last time the party tapped a Catholic was 28 years prior, with the nomination of Al Smith.

Two Catholics under consideration for the nomination were Sen. John Kennedy and New York Mayor Robert Wagner. Both were unannounced candidates for vice president.

QUINCY-ISMS

Arthur Morrissey of Colby Rd. was named to represent the state in a U.S.-Canadian competition among apprentice pipe fitters at Purdue University. A member of Local 275, Morrissey had already won numerous state and local competitions. He was employed by Metherall and McCausland in Wollaston. . . A son was born at Quincy City Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Olin Taylor of Taft St. . . At a ceremony at the police station, a check was presented to the Quincy Police Boys' Club to enter a baseball team in the Pony League. On hand were Chief William Ferrazzi, Patrolman Guido Pettinelli and William Draicchio, club treasurer. . . Twelve-year-old Kenneth MacDonald won the annual one-mile swim from Snug Harbor to Baker Beach, with a time of 14 minutes and 50 seconds. Last year's winner was Peter Landry. . . The city was seeking state money to purchase extra land for the Gridley Bryant School. Land had been taken from the school property by the state for the Quarry St. extension. . . Nine members of the Houghs Neck Community Council were scheduled to pump gas at Marster's gas station on Sea St. for "Fill-Up Day." Funds were raised for the council's building fund. Building Fund Chairman Arnold Beresen said there was approximately $10,000 in cash and pledges for the proposed community center. Volunteers for "Fill-Up Day" included Alexander MacLeod, Anthony Centamore, Ross Centamore, Frederick MacDonald, James Dennis, Herbert Morgan, Stephen Sparks and Edward Magee. Mrs. James Laing and Mrs. Harold Little were co-chairmen for the council's next fund-raiser, an arts and crafts fair at the Atherton Hough School. . . Rep. Harold Putnam, a Republican candidate for Congress, said that if elected he would locate his district office in Quincy, "the heart of the South Shore." . . . David Coletti and Alicia Dunn were recently married. . . John Noonan was chairman for the Quincy K of C's couples' outing. . . The Downey brothers of Holbrook Rd., John and Francis, were serving in Korea.

Quincy Hospital Employees Appeal for Your Help

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As employees of Quincy Hospital and a resident of the city of Quincy for the past 28 years, we feel that it is necessary to inform the residents of this city of some very important facts regarding the hospital.

Unfortunately, for as long as we can remember The Patriot Ledger has only emphasized the negative issues surrounding Quincy Hospital. The employees of Quincy Hospital have demonstrated a joint effort to support the proposed affiliation with Boston Medical Center by agreeing to a 10 percent cut in benefits. This is a deal that requires additional state and federal funding to go through.

We understand that the residents of Quincy are concerned about tax increases secondary to the millions that the city must provide, but it is important to understand that if the deal does not go through, it will also cost the city millions to close the hospital. You can be assured that not only will taxes increase, but we will suffer losses in all municipal departments.

Why are the employees willing to lose in this deal? Let us begin by saying that employees of Quincy Hospital have years of longevity and commitment to the institution. It is not easy to close the doors on something that has been an integral part of one's life for more than half their years. The familial relationships that make up the cohesive nature of the staff are very important to us. That concept is displayed every day in the excellent care provided to our patients.

How often have residents been comforted by a familiar face providing care to themselves or a family member? In a city where 17 percent of the population is comprised of senior citizens, of which 60 percent rely on Quincy Hospital for their care, where does this leave them? Or what about the $6-$8 million worth of uncompensated care provided yearly to the uninsured or financially needy? Where will they continue to seek care? These are important questions to consider as residents of Quincy.

Contrary to the popular press, it has definitely not been proven, not even studied adequately for that matter, what burden surrounding hospitals will incur if Quincy Hospital closes. It is not clear that hospitals to the south can handle an additional 30,000 patients in emergency department visits. It is not clear what effect long ambulance transport times will have on patients' well being.

Since we do not know, and if you assume the worst, people may die because of this closure. We would not want to worry about our relatives or ourselves having to travel to other area hospitals with life threatening illnesses such as a heart attack or stroke. Quincy Hospital emergency room has one of the fastest response times in the nation treating heart attack victims with the appropriate medication to increase survival.

We are not perfect, yet neither is any other health care institution. One thing is for sure though, we do care about our community! We shudder at the thoughts of the facility closing, cutting off top-notch health care to the 85,000 residents of this city.

Residents of Quincy, we need your help to obtain the state and federal funding needed to assure the affiliation with Boston Medical Center. Please write to your local politicians, as the clock is ticking. Someday it may be a matter of life or death!

Concerned About Sidewalk Repairs Beyond Whitney Rd.

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

I am very pleased that our City Council plans to repair many sidewalks in all six wards of the city.

Upon examining the Priority List for Repairs, I was very disappointed to learn that no sidewalks beyond Whitney Road were on the list. Ward 5 goes to Elm St. and Miller Stile Rd. Has anyone attended a wake at Sweeney's Funeral Home and walked on Miller Stile Rd. across from the Chamber of Commerce? That is also Ward 5!

The floods from the Town Brook several years ago severely damaged sidewalks on Bigelow St. between Elm and Miller Stile as well as Miller Stile Rd and Revere Rd. Who listens to residents who have reported injuries from falls on damaged sidewalks in this neighborhood of Ward 5?

When will these streets of Ward 5 appear on the list for sidewalk repairs? This neighborhood of ward 5 should not be overlooked and forgotten about as we also pay taxes and vote in this city.

Arline Goodman
Revere Road
Candidate for Ward 5 City Council

'Steel Magnolias' Aug. 13-14 At Quincy High Auditorium

Back again for their second production are members of the Quincy Alumni Dramatic Association, the group will be presenting "Steel Magnolias" by Robert Harling.

Cast and crew have been hard at work preparing for the Aug. 13 and 14 performances at 7:30 p.m. in the Lloyd Hill Auditorium at Quincy High School.

Tickets are $8 and will be available at the door the nights of the show.

Set in the south, "Steel Magnolias" is the story of six women who through good times and tragedy, embrace the importance of friendship, relationships, family and the bonds that come from being women.

"The play has an uncommonly good balance of comedy and drama," said Bret Batson, who is directing the production. "It is simply a great story, I think that is what everyone was drawn to."

The cast includes Margaret Kolson as Truvy, Lisa Harvey Foss at M'lynn, Erin Flaherty as Shelby, Amy Parsons as Annelle, Marina Cramer as Clairee, Theresa Dern as Ouiser and special guest Chris Sherriff as the Radio Announcer.

The tech crew includes set designer Kristin Fluhr, stage manager Tanya Kutasz, and lighting and sound directors Kevin Glennon and Sam Rodger.

"I have never been so confident or comfortable working on a show. We have so many talented people in the show, cast and crew alike," said John Killilea, the show's producer.

"It's been a labor of love bringing this production to the community, but the work is just part of our collective philosophy that no community, no matter how large or small, can have enough of the performing arts."

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

HAMMERTOES

Hammertoe is a condition in which the toe bends in a claw-like position. Most often due to a misalignment of the toe joints, hammertoes can occur in any of the foot's four smaller toes. It happens most often in the second toe, when a bunion angles the big toe toward and under it, pushing it up. A person with high or low arched feet is prone to developing hammertoes because the toes tend to stay in a bent position. Ill-fitting shoes or socks that bunch the toes together can aggravate hammertoes and cause pain on the bony top area and at the end of the toe. Constant friction may cause a hard corn to develop over the bony area.

If surgery is the recommended course of action to get rid of hammertoes, you'll be glad to know that today's techniques make the process easier and faster, and recovery is much more comfortable than just a few years ago. If you are a victim of hammertoes, consider professional help. Our techniques are up-to-date, with three basic goals: to relive pain, restore function and improve appearance. For a consultation, please call us at 617-472-3466, 110 West Squantum Street in North Quincy.

P.S. Treating hammertoes usually involves wearing deeper shoes, using shoe inserts or pads and paring down corns. Surgery is sometimes recommended to straighten the toe or remove the prominent area of bone.

Judi's Coconut Cake

You'd never expect to receive a recipe in a doctor's office while you're having a yearly check-up.

But it happened last week when I was there when I met Judi. She was telling me about this great cake recipe she had so I told her to mail it to me and I would print it. So here it is Judi.

Judi's Coconut Cake

1 white cake mix
1 can condensed milk
1 large pkg. flaked coconut
1 can of cream of coconut
1 16 ounce cool whip

Make cake according to directions adding half package of flaked coconut to batter.

After baking, leave the cake in the pan and poke holes into the hot cake. Pour the can of cream of coconut over the cake and half can of the condensed milk.

For the topping, mix the cool whip with the remaining half can of condensed milk and 1/4 package of the flaked coconut.

Spread the cool whip mixture over the top of the cake and sprinkle remaining coconut flakes on top. Refrigerate. It's best if made a day before.

Katie Connolly Awarded Medeiros Scholarship

Katie Connolly of Quincy has been awarded a four-year, full-tuition scholarship to Boston University as part of the University's Cardinal Humberto Medeiros Scholarship Program.

Connolly was one of 14 seniors from Catholic high schools in the Archdiocese of Boston chosen to receive the honor.

The Medeiros Scholarship Program, established in 1986, honors students from local Archdiocesan high schools for their academic achievement, demonstrated leadership skills, and contributions to their schools and communities. The Medeiros Scholars, who all ranked in the top 10 of their graduating classes, represent the most distinguished students in Boston's Archdiocesan schools.

Connolly is a 1999 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree. In high school, Connolly was a member of the National Honor Society, recipient of a Harvard Book Award, and valedictorian of her senior class.

She is the daughter of Mark and Myrla Connolly of Silver Street.

With this year's recipients, Boston University has enrolled 211 Medeiros Scholars and contributed more than $13 million in scholarships to students of the Archdiocese. At the ceremony honoring the scholarship recipients, Cardinal Bernard Law, Boston University President Jon Westling and Chancellor John Silber presented the students with their awards.

The Medeiros Scholars were selected by a four-person committee that included representatives from Boston University and the Archdiocese of Boston.

High-Speed Ferry To Nova Scotia 'A Real Possibility'

(Cont'd from page 3)

Parliament has allowed dual citizenships among Americans and Canadians, he added.

Labrador City Mayor Darrel Brenton said he came to the Quincy conference to find opportunities for his region to diversify. "We have the largest iron ore min in North America, but we are so dependent on it, we are trying to diversify.

"We have a lot of natural resources, such as hydropower, which already supplies the Northeast." A major construction project during the next seven years will produce a power plant which can provide 3,000 megawatts of power, he added.

"In addition, we have just discovered a major silica deposit, which can processed for computer chips," he said, noting he is looking for markets for this resource.

Roger Birt, deputy mayor of Charlottetown, boasted that one of his hometown exports is Lori Kane, who was playing in the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournament in Sutton. "She has won $1.6 million in her career, but she hasn't won a tournament," he said. "And, we're the home of 'Anne of Green Gables.'"

Birt said he was looking for new ways to welcome the 1.3 million tourists which visit his town of 135,000 year-round residents and was impressed by the development at Marina Bay and the city's signage, provided by the Quincy Partnership.

"Shelburne is the second largest ice-free harbor, eight to 10 miles long, and does not need to be dredged," added Lockeport Mayor Huskilson whose hometown is a 15-minute drive to Shelburne.

She predicted that a ferry service would enhance the tourist season, expanding it to nine months of the year. "And we're the closest to the Gulf Stream," she said.

She said she was one of the mayors who advocated no exploration of Georges Bank by the petroleum industry until 2012 to coincide with the United States' moratorium extension. Canadian waters encompass about one-sixth of the area of Georges Bank, she said.

Arthur Fitt, mayor of Stellarton, Nova Scotia, about 100 miles northeast of Halifax, said he will bring home some new ideas for his community of 5,000 to help promote tourism. His town is home to Sobey's, a huge grocery chain, and boasts two ports as well as an airport.

At a mini-expo, several local organizations — the Taunton Chamber of Commerce, the Plymouth County Development Council, the New Bedford Office of Tourism and Marketing, the Bristol County Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Fall River Area Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Quincy Historical Society and the National Park Service — distributed pamphlets promoting tourism and economic opportunities in their respective areas.

Likewise, brochures from the various Canadian communities and provinces were exchanged as well.

Businesses too provided information about their firms, including SAR Engineering and Industrial Heat Treating, both of Quincy, and Earth Tech, a consulting engineering firm working in Quincy.

Said Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, at the conclusion of the conference, "We were able to strengthen partnerships for economic development for southeastern Massachusetts and Canada and to network throughout the East Coast and build strong relationships with other economic development agenices, such as in New Bedford and Brockton."

Many of the participants were interested in how Quincy 2000 was created and what it has accomplished, he added.

$291,000 For Adams Crypt

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Rep. A. Stephen Tobin announce the Legislature's approval of $291,000 in funding for the Adams Crypts at the United First Parish Church.

The appropriation was included in a $500 million capital supplemental budget.

John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the only father-son presidents, and their wives, Abigail Adams and Louise Catherine Adams, are enshrined at the United first Parish Church. "The money will be used for the maintenance and upkeep of the Crypt," Morrissey said.

The church has allowed tours to be conducted under an agreement with the National Park Serv ice since 1993. The tours and maintenance of the crypts are conducted by volunteers. In addition to historic preservation grant from Sec. of State William Galvin, and fund raising efforts lead by church parishioners, more money was needed this year to ensure that visitors will be able to view the crypt next year.

"It is necessary that we preserve the Adams' Crypt," Tobin said. "To have one man of such stature from the city is remarkable. To have two is extraordinary and we must do what we can to preserve their legacy."

The Quincy legislative delegation earmarked $291,000 to the church to ensure that the crypt would be open next year. "It would be an embarrassment for the stat the city if we could not keep this historical location available to the public," Morrissey said.

The Capital Supplemental Budget is currently before the Governor awaiting his approval. The legislative delegation is hopeful that he will sign the budget into law soon to make the funding available in the near future.

The yard sale is sponsored by the Snowman Fair Committee.

Breakfast For Greg Hanley Attended By 200

More than 200 persons attended the breakfast held last Sunday at the Quincy Yacht Club for Greg Hanley, candidate for Ward 1 Councillor.

The free breakfast was held to allow people to meet Hanley and discuss the issues that effect them personally. "It was a pleasure to see so many new faces sharing in a great meal with lively conversation."

Hanley said the campaign has received a significant amount of support from neighbors and union groups. Noting that an additional 55 families have come forth to volunteer and support the campaign Hanley continued. "that most people expressed concern over many of the major issues facing the city today." He named the Quincy Hospital, the High School, Highpoint, and its impact to the city, the Shipyard and the potential increase in taxes to pay for all the projects the city has planned."

Hanley told the group that the single most important commitment that he could make is that "when you call me, I'll be there! Whether you call me for information about city services or if you want to talk about some issues, I promise to be responsive."

Hanley noted that "Many of the best ideas come from the people and not the politicians, and to the people of Ward 1, I'm all ears!"

Those who would like to call Hanley to discuss an issue or to volunteer in the campaign may call him at 472-1005.

Supplemental Budget Includes $250,000 For Drainage Project

A Legislature-approved Capital Supplemental Budget earmarks funding for two important portions of the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project, local legislators announce.

"This is the largest single drainage project the Massachusetts Highway Department has ever undertaken," said Sen. Michael Morrissey. "This is a very complicated project which needs more work, but securing this funding gives us a good start on moving this project forward."

The budget includes $250,000 to repair the tide gates on Quincy Shore Drive. The Metropolitan District Commission owns the tide gates, some of which have been inoperable for several years.

"The tide gates are essential to ensuring that the high tide does not contribute to flooding upstream during heavy rainstorms," Morrissey said. "It is a crucial part of the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project that will direct the flow of water coming from upstream."

The nature of the project requires all repairs, construction and restoration to start downstream at the base of Furnace Brook Parkway and work upstream to Cunningham Brook in Milton.

"Currently, two gates are help open with cabling and one is closed," Rep. A. Stephen Tobin said.

In addition to the $250,000 for the tide gates, the capital supplemental budget earmarks $300,000 to pay for easements associated with the project. Easements run along both public and private property adjacent to Furnace Brook in Quincy and Cunningham Book in Milton.

"There are between 60 and 70 permanent and temporary easements necessary for this project," Rep. Bruce Ayers said. "The easements must be secured before the bids for contracting on the project can move forward."

The Quincy legislative delegation said it will continue to work closely with Milton legislators, city officials and residents on this project. The city is working with the MDC on an agreement to allow the city to operate and maintain the gates.

The capital supplemental budget is currently before the governor awaiting his approval. The delegation is hopeful the governor will approve the budget and release the funds in the near future.

Cahill Reports Over $10,000 Raised For Legal Defense

City Councillor Tim Cahill reports over $10,000 was raised at last week's fundraiser to help finance his legal defense against a conflict of interest charge regarding the proposed Highpoint development.

He said more than 300 attended the event held at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry St. near the controversial Highpoint site.

"I was overwhelmed," he said. "More people turned out than I had hoped for. Three hundred actually signed the guest book and there were others who did not."

Cahill noted that there were two other fundraisers going on the same night -- one for the Quincy Partnership and the other for the Old Sailor's Home Cemetery restoration but his still drew a large turnout.

"I was very happy," he said. "The majority of those attending were from the Highpoint area but there were others from other sections of the city.

Cahill said that throughout the night the message he received from those attending was "don't back down, don't give in."

Cahill is paying for his own legal expenses in the case.

A conflict of interest charge was brought against him by the Building and Construction Trades Council of Quincy and the South Shore.

The union claims Cahill was in conflict when he took part in council hearings and discussions and voted on the matter because family members own property near the Quarry St. development site.

Cahill who has voted against the proposed development has pleaded innocent and a pre-trial conference is scheduled for Aug. 19 at Quincy District Court.

people to put a little extra effort into maintaining their properties in the spirit of a cleaner, green Quincy," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments.

More than 75 nominations have been received by the Park Department to date. Honorable Mention will be given to all nominees that meet the minimum standards of the contest. Prizes will be awarded to Honorable Mention winners as well. Judging will occur throughout the months of August and early-September.

"Last year we received a very favorable response from people who were flattered that their friends and neighbors would take the time to recognize their work. If you have a friend or neighbor who you think deserves recognition for their efforts, I encourage you to give us a call and nominate them. It is a small gesture that will go a long way toward approaching the work of your Neat Neighbor," added Koch.

Seniors Urged To Help Save 'Hospital On The Hill'

By JOHN NOONAN
Chairman
Quincy Council On Aging

In 1880, a small health care facility, privately owned and operated, opened its "hospital-upon-a-hill" doors as a community hospital to serve the health needs of all Quincy residents regardless of race, creed, color, or age.

For 30 years, the hospital struggled to serve the people of Quincy through bequests, endowments, charges to patients, and charitable contributions. The facility, like many hospitals of today, suffered troubled financial times.

The facility's 25-bed capacity was totally inadequate to meet the increasing demands for medical and health care services of a fast growing Quincy population.

The facility was primarily established to serve those who suffered a highly infectious disease, smallpox, which was quite common in the 19th century. At which time there was no effective treatment for the disease, which killed up to 40 percent of its victims.

Because of the miracles of medicine, technology, and vaccination the World Health Organization declared smallpox extinct in 1980.

There were 20,000 employees working in the Bethlehem Steel Company's Fore River Shipyard and its affiliate the Victory Plant at Squantum during the height of World War I. Serving the industrial health needs of defense plants in Quincyt also became a problem for the little community hospital.

The need for emergency services locally became quite evident when, unexpectedly, an accident occurred on the Old Colony Railroad in the rear of the Adams Academy in August, 1890. Many lives were lost in that accident.

Workers in the Quincy granite quarry industry also looked to the small hospital to provide needed health services.

The officials of the hospital appealed to the City of Quincy Mayor and City Council for assistance to prevent the facility from closing its doors.

Quincy's People Render First Aid To Ailing Hospital

The City was authorized under the provisions of Chapter 148 of the Acts of 1896, to raise by taxation, no more than $5,000, to be appropriated for the maintenance and support of the hospital. For the next several years sums of money ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 a year were appropriated. In 1918 the amount was upped to $7,000 because that was the year of the great influenza epidemic which took its toll of Quincy residents.

However, donating such sums of money for a most charitable cause, no matter how worthy or deserving, came to a halt. The people of the Commonwealth, at the 1917 election, ratified and approved an amendment to the state constitution. The amendment, called the Anti-Aid Law, prevented the appropriation of city or public funds to educational, charitable, religious or other institutions including infirmaries of hospitals, not wholly under the exclusive control of the city, state, or federal government.

The hospital in Quincy officially became the Quincy City Hospital on March 1, 1919. Quincy was later authorized to construct and maintain a hospital "for the reception, care and treatment of persons who by reason of misfortunate or poverty may require temporary medical or surgical relief for sickness or injuries."

Quincy's 'Hospital Upon A Hill' Is Dedicated To Serving All Peoples

In his report of the Hospital Department Henry M. Faxon, Chairman of the hospital five member Board of Managers, wrote on Jan. 1, 1921 to Mayor Joseph L. Whiton:

"The City is to be congratulated in the acquisition of the very desirable lot containing 182,230 square feet, purchased in March, 1920, of Mrs. Helen L. King and adjoining southerly the original hospital grounds. On the brow of the hill commanding extensive views of Quincy Bay and the approaches to Boston Harbor, this lot affords an ideal location for additional buildings, which can be erected without interruption of the current operations and activities of the Hospital."

Through the years, Quincy City Hospital suffered the pains of health, growing pains, because it was necessary to keep pace with the progress of medical science and the field of public health. Being a municipally run hospital, dependent upon Quincy's taxpayers to keep abreast of the times, it did expand its services and outreach services.

THE HOSPITAL'S ADMINISTRATION Building, a long-time familiar and friendly landmark.

But new buildings do not stay new all that long. The City of Quincy suffered through the "best of times and the worst of times." Following World War I there was the great Depression and changes in industry, manufacturing and shipbuilding that had a great impact on the city's economy.

World War II saw the revival of the Bethlehem Steel Fore River Shipyard and industries that were converted to aiding the war effort.

Throughout the good and bad times there was the Quincy City Hospital which became an even stronger link in serving the health and medical care needs of an ever increasing cosmopolitan population.

Quincy became a city comprised of neighborhoods. Generations of neighborhood families looked to Quincy City Hospital for all types of medical care such as emergency and maternity services over the decades.

My sister was born at the Hospital in 1918. I followed two years later. My wife gave birth to our son in 1952 and two years later to a daughter.

Our Hospital Was Always There

For generations of families the Quincy City Hospital was always there for us. For newcomers who came to live and work in Quincy the Hospital was also there for them. For the influx of minorities, then and now, the hospital doors were always open.

Most importantly, the hospital through the years, fulfilled its mission of providing care and treatment for persons, who by reason or misfortune or poverty, required temporary medical or surgical relief for sickness or injuries.

Seniors Urged To Help Save 'Hospital On The Hill'

For Quincy's elderly population, then and now, the hospital upon Hospital Hill became "our" Hospital. As one who has lived my lifetime in Quincy and, presently, as a senior advocate through my position as a member of the Quincy Council on Aging, the most often question heard today is, "what will happen to us if our hospital is forced to close its doors after all these years?"

Quincy seniors live today in fear, but also with great hope, that our hospital, will continue to serve us in our golden years, as it has in the past.

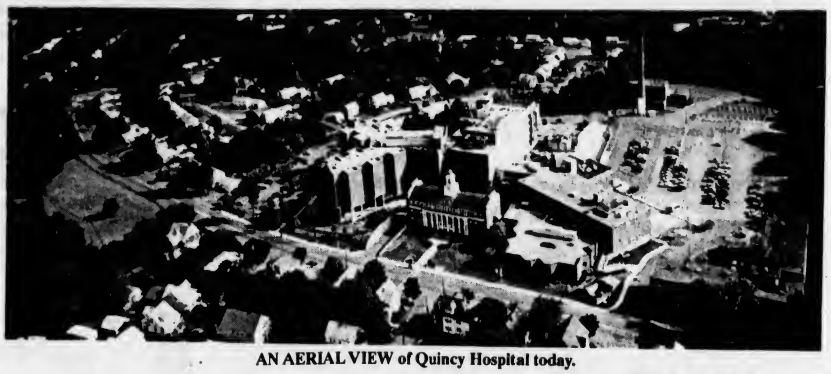
In 1998 Mayor James A. Sheets, himself a senior citizen, stated in his mid-term address:

"Why should our seniors not dream of living out their lives in their beloved Quincy? Are they too old to dream? I think not."

The Mayor is working tirelessly to ensure our hospital will remain open. He has legion of supporters in that cause.

Reasons Why Quincy Hospital Should Remain Open

There are many reasons why Quincy Hospital should remain open to serve the entire Quincy community.



Take the Emergency Department which is staffed by competent professionals. On any given day some 80 emergency patients are seen. Add that to weekends and holidays when the numbers seen will increase, some 30,000 visits to the ER are cared for annually. A large percentage of these patients are elderly.

Should there be no Quincy Hospital ER, where would these patients go or be rushed to receive the urgent or emergency care needed?

What about families with low incomes and struggling to make ends meet? These residents are part of the Quincy community and their health and medical care needs are being met by a most compassionate staff.

Quincy's elderly population keeps increasing and living longer. There are some 18,500 today who are considered to be the elder corps. If you consider age 50, the baby boomer age, there are according to City Clerk Joseph Shea's current census statistics, 30,165 men and women registered in Quincy who are 50 years old or older. Of these 18 are age 100, nine age 101, four age 102, four age 103, and four age 104.

Like the energizing bunny commercial, Quincy's elderly population which is the largest of any city of comparable size in the state, keeps on growing, and growing and growing.

AN AERIAL VIEW of Quincy Hospital today.

Seniors Are Being Asked To Rally One More Time For Our Hospital

Mayor Sheets, his administrative assistant Bernice Mader, Hospital CEO Jeff Doran, the City Council hospital committee and special task force committee headed by former Mayor and Councillor-at-Large Frank McCauley, the nine hospital unions who agreed to take pay cuts, the hospital professionals, members of the city council, the Quincy state legislative delegation, and other support groups have been working endlessly to secure necessary legislation to keep Quincy Hospital open.

But they need back-up help from Quincy's senior population. State legislation is required to allow the proposed affiliation with the Boston Medical Center to become a reality. But the time is short and the need is now. No bill in the legislative hopper is passed simply because it is a good bill.

A phone call to key legislators is essential. Quincy's state delegation: Senator Michael Morrissey, Rep. Ron Mariano, Rep. Steve Tobin, Rep. Bruce Ayers all support the legislation but they need senior constituency back up to convince other key legislators that Quincy Hospital, one of two municipal hospitals in the state, needs the allocation of funding in the special supplementary budget that has been filed.

Govérnor Paul Cellucci has included $12.1 million in the Fiscal 2000 supplementary budget bill to aid Quincy Hospital.

If Quincy's seniors would make one telephone call to key state legislators they will have taken one of the most important steps towards keeping Quincy Hospital open.

When calling key legislators seniors should emphasize the importance of supporting passage of LINE ITEM 1599-3970 in the Fiscal 2000 supplementary bill now before the legislature.

Key legislators and their telephone numbers to call are:

Senate President Thomas Birmingham: 722-1500

House Speaker Thomas Finneran: 722-2500

Joint Committee on Health Care: Senate Chairman Sen. Moore: 722-2130; House Chairman Rep. Chandler: 722-2130

Joint Committee on Administration: Senate Chairperson Sen. Wilkerson: 722-2330; House Chairman Rep. Hall: 722-2320

Senate Committee on Ways and Means: Chairman Sen. Montigny: 722-1481

House Committee On Ways and Means: Chairman Rep. Paul Haley of Weymouth: 722-2380

We've all got to work together to keep our hospital open.

Prepare Your Home For Sale

By VIN MOSCARDELLI

Many home sellers underestimate the amount of time it takes to get their home in tip-top shape to sell.

As your ERA real estate specialist, I can sit down with you months in advance to help you comprise a checklist of what needs to be done. I can help you prioritize the list so you can focus your resources on the most important items.

Because first impressions are of the utmost importance, spend much of your attention taking care of how your home looks from the street. Repaint if the exterior is peeling. Put in new sod if the front lawn is in poor condition. Straighten any leaning fence posts. Replace burnt-out porch lights.

VIN MOSCARDELLI

If you feel a certain room is outdated, a coat of neutral-colored paint, a new floor, light fixtures and window coverings are inexpensive ways in which to enliven a tired room's look.

Another great way to make a room look like new is to remove clutter inside your home. Too many personal belongings during showings may cause potential buyers to become distracted.

You may want to consider hiring professional cleaners once your home hits the market, because a spotless home during this time is a must. If you're not sure if your home is in the best possible condition once it goes on the market, well, buyers won't be too sure, either.

If you have any questions about preparing your home for sale, just give me a call. Together, we'll work to get you the best possible deal for your home.

Foley grew up in Roxbury and graduated from Mission High School. He attended Northeastern University and the Lowell Institute (the night program at MIT) where he received his education to become an electrical engineer. By attending night school, Foley said, he acquired "a real sense of the value of education to the individual and to the family by this experience."

He was been associated with Quincy Youth Baseball for more than 40 years, both as a team manager and as a member of the Board of Directors in various capacities.

"Having associated with parents and their children for so many years, I feel I have established a line of communication with them that has lasted beyond the time they participated in the program. My family is also grown and I have this time and inclination to devote to this job," Foley said.

Foley is the father of eight grown children who attended Quincy public schools. He was married to the late Mary F. (Ridge) Foley.

Foley is a past president and business agent for two locals in the Utility Workers of America, AFL-CIO Union. He has 45 years of service with Boston Edison Company.

Cellucci Gets Warm Reception On Seniors Drug Benefit Plan

By CRAIG SALTERS

Gov. Paul Cellucci made a special visit to Quincy last week to promote what he termed a "transitional" drug benefit plan for seniors.

Flanked by Mayor James Sheets and other city officials he told residents at the Fenno House senior facility in Wollaston:

"The cost of pharmaceuticals is the fastest growing portion of the health care industry and today more than half of theses cost are being paid out-of-pocket by seniors."

The plan, meant to bridge the gap between two markedly different versions of the senior drug bills passed by the House and Senate, was unveiled in early July and gives all Massachusetts seniors unlimited access to prescription drug coverage.

Under the plan, low-income seniors who earn at or below 150 percent of the federal poverty level will pay no premiums and have a $750 deductible. Others will pay a $49 monthly premium and have a $1,500 deductible for their prescription needs.

Cellucci stressed that the program, which if approved would become effective Jan. 1 of next year, was meant only as a stopgap measure until Congress could agree on the several proposals being debated in Washington, D.C.

"This is really a federal issue," said the governor, noting that since recent federal law prohibited Massachusetts from enforcing its own law guaranteeing seniors the option of unlimited prescription drug coverage, 61,000 Massachusetts seniors have lost HMO unlimited drug coverage and an additional 116,000 are only receiving limited drug benefits.

A. PAUL CELLUCCI

Cellucci called this, "a crisis."

The first year of this insurance plan would cost roughly $50 million and would come from general funds. Additional years would be funded directly from the state's $8 billion tobacco settlement, which Cellucci and Lieutenant Governor Swift have pledged to commit entirely to health care.

Sheets, and the receptive seniors, gave Cellucci a warm welcome. Sheets said that Cellucci was "more than our governor, he's our friend," citing the governor's support for the reopening of the shipyard and his help in keeping Quincy Hospital open.

The mayor recounted telling Cellucci how vital the hospital was to the city and that, when Sheets asked for $12 million, the governor "did not hesitate." Legislation for $12.1 million in assistance to Quincy Hospital is now pending.

Cellucci thanked Councilors Dan Raymondi, Tim Cahill, and Bruce Ayers for their support of the Quincy Council an Aging and for working on issues such as transportation and nutrition for the elderly. He also thanked the Rev. A. H. Wismar Jr., manager of Fenno House, and administrative assistant Ruth Marocco, as well as Brian Buckley, executive director Quincy Council on Aging, for organizing the event.

Dan Grabauskas, Director of the Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulations, told the Seniors that prescription drug benefits was "the single most important issue" of seniors calling his office.

Ayers assured that prescription drug benefits were a top priority. "No one should have to choose between groceries and high prescription drugs," he said.

The reaction of the seniors to Cellucci's plan was almost entirely positive.

"He's doing the right thing," said Nancy Grasso, who stayed after the presentation to discuss the issue with friends. Leonard Grasso, Nancy's husband of 58 years, voiced the sentiments of many when he said, "Cellucci came here personally, and that's important."

Senior Tina Swan joked that some of the Fenno House residents had been taking bets as to whether Cellucci "would really show up" and many applauded the personal touch of both Cellucci and Sheets.

Ethel Boyne, who attended despite metal pins in her toes from a recent surgery, worried that the deductible was "a bit high" for people on a fixed income but felt at least the issues were being addressed.

Much of the discussion after the speech drifted to long lists of expensive and barely pronounceable drugs as well as the intricacies of various coverage plans, underscoring the charged nature of this issue.

Said Nancy Grasso, "It gives you a little hope."

Granite Kick Off Season Saturday At Veterans Stadium

Roster Includes 24 Football Alumni From Quincy, North

It's only two days away.

After a 30-year absence, semi-professional football returns to Quincy when the Granite tackle the Hingham-based South Shore Stars at Veteran's Memorial Stadium, Saturday at 7 p.m.

Admission is $5 for adults and $2 for children and senior citizens. Tickets can be purchased at the gate before the game.

The last semi-pro team in Quincy was the 1969 Quincy Giants, who played just one season.

The Granite were founded by Sean Halpin (LB) and David Harris (OL/DL) and are coached by Ken McPhee, who stepped down as the North Quincy High School football coach to accept a new position as the Social Health Coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools.

The 50-man roster includes 24 alumni from North Quincy and Quincy high schools.

The former North Quincy players are the following: Tom Burke (OL), Ryan Craig (LB), Paul Doherty (K), Derek Epps (WR), Peter Fitzpatrick (DE), Dan Gilmartin (RB), Jeremy Gott (DB), Nathan Gott (DB), Halpin, Liam Higgins (QB), Duane Holmes (OL), Jeff Powers (TE), Gary Rawdon (LB), Brian Raftery (OL/DL), Dave Raftery (OL/DL), James Rendle (QB).

The following are former Quincy players: Frank Calabro (LB), Dave D'Olympio (DE), Mike Elder (FB), Matt Fratarillo (WR/DB), Jim Hatfield (DB), Peter Kolson (LB), Charlie McCall (WR), Eric Nunez (WR).

The Granite are part of the 12-team New England Football League and will play an eight-game schedule in their inaugural season. So far, they have scrimmaged the Boston Cowboys and Rockingham Cougars, and they competed in the league jamboree last Saturday.

"It was rocking," said Harris. "It showcased all the teams and all the teams looked good."

Thirteen weeks have gone by since the Granite first practiced and they're itching to suit up for the season opener.

"We're fired up," said Harris. "It's going to be a battle Saturday. We've been practicing a long time and we're at the point where we just want to kill somebody."

Noble Interim QHS Head Football Coach

By CHRIS POISSON

Bob Noble of Quincy has been named the interim head coach for Quincy High School.

School Superintendent Eugene Creedon confirmed the appointment Tuesday afternoon as the paper was going to print.

Noble, 48, succeeds Peter Chella who stepped down after four years to take the assistant principal position at Point-Webster.

"It's an honor," said Noble, who has been an assistant coach at Quincy for 14 years. "It's something I've been looking forward to do in my coaching career. I love coaching at Quincy High School and I love the kids at Quincy High School.

"Peter believed in giving his assistant coaches a great deal of responsibility. So in that point of view it's not that much of a change for me."

Noble was given the interim position for this season and then the job will open up at the end of the year, at which time applications for a new coach will take place.

"That's how it's being handled as it stands now," said Noble. "It's too close to the start of the season to do interviews for a new coach, so they decided for interim status. I'm fortunate to be the interim coach and I'll try not to go anywhere. I've coached here for 14 years and I loved every second of it."

BOB NOBLE

Noble is currently a full-time student at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, majoring in history. He played one season of football at Boston University in 1971.

He coached boys track for six years, girls varsity basketball for four years and girls junior varsity basketball for four years. He also has coached the West Quincy Elks of the Quincy Youth Football League for 11 years. And he has been a teaching assistant in the special needs program at Quincy for 12 years.

Noble inherits a Quincy squad that went 0-10 last season, the first time it was winless since the 1985 campaign. The Presidents also had their four-game Thanksgiving Day winning streak snapped with a 21-6 loss to North Quincy.

"I'm stepping into a situation where there is no place to go but up," said Noble. "We got a few kids with experience. Last year we played a lot of young kids and they've learned a lot of valuable lessons. I expect us to win our fair share of games this year."

North Quincy High School also has a new head coach this season, as assistant coach Peter Chrisom, Jr. replaced Ken McPhee, who took a new position as the Social Health Coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools after 18 years at the helm.

"There's two new guys, but in terms of it being new to us - it's not," said Noble. "It's a great rivalry and it's always exciting. I look forward to those Thanksgiving games every year."

Bill Shea Bertoni Memorial Golf Tourney Sept. 13

The Quincy Visiting Nurse Association (QVNA), a department of Quincy Hospital, announces its 11th annual Bill Shea Bertoni Memorial golf tournament will be Monday, Sept. 13 at the Halifax Country Club.

The tournament enables area residents and businesses to show their support for medical assistance to patients in their home, which the QVNA provides to people in Quincy and approximately 20 other communities on the South Shore.

Opportunities for individuals and businesses to get involved include playing golf, sponsorship, or prize donation. Tee-off time for golf, which features an 18-hole course, is at 8 a.m. and costs $110 per golfer. An awards luncheon follows the tournament and prizes will be awarded. Sponsorship opportunities include corporate sponsorship for $1,000; gold hole sponsorship for $625; and hole sponsorship for $150. Prizes, which are awarded to golfers at the luncheon, are needed. These may include gift certificates, sports equipment, or gift and promotional items. All sponsors and donors are listed in the tournament program.

For information about sponsorship opportunities or participation in the day's activities, contact Bill Shea at (617) 479-9130 or Sue Deegan at (617) 376-2001.

A HEADS-UP PLAY

When you buckle up, adjust your vehicle's head restraint as well. Making the proper adjustment helps ensure protection against whiplash, the severe neck injury that may result from a car being rear-ended. The top of the headrest should be parallel with the top of your head and it should sit no more than two inches from the back of your head. If a head restraint resists all efforts to position it properly, at least make sure the center of the headrest more or less meets the center of your head. Do not leave the restraint lower than your head, which invites the head to hyperextend up and over the headrest in a rear-ender to make the injury worse.

The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern equipment and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and re-trained. Comets Come From Behind To Down Duxbury, 4-3

Allison Downs singled to lead off the bottom of the seventh inning, stole second and third, and raced home on an overthrow as the Quincy Comets came from behind to defeat Duxbury, 4-3, in a South Shore League Softball game played recently at Atlantic Middle School.

Duxbury jumped to an early lead in the top of the first inning, scoring three unearned runs. Quincy managed to score a run in its half of the inning when Kathlyn Gates walked, stole second, and scored on Julie Burke's single.

The score remained 3-1 in favor of Duxbury until the bottom of the fifth. Kim Walsh and Kassie Nogler walked. Meghan Driscoll, who had previously singled, ripped a line drive into right field for a triple to tie the game at 3-3.

After the first inning, Sheila Foley blanked Duxbury the rest of the way. She struck out 11, walked two and yielded five hits in her stint from the mound.

Quincy's defense played a strong game. Gates, from her catching position, threw out two runners on attempted steals when the game was tied, erasing Duxbury's potential go-ahead run.

Nogler had seven putouts at first base in her debut at that position.

14-Year-Olds Reach State Semi-Finals

BABE RUTH

After beating a tough Taunton team, 7-6, in nine innings the night before, the Quincy 14-year-old Babe Ruth team was knocked out of the state tournament in the semi-finals by Plymouth, 4-3, at Billings Field in West Roxbury.

"Of course I was disappointed in the results because we had this game won," said manager Steve Pizzi. "We made too many costly mistakes that allowed Plymouth to come back from a 3-0 deficit to beat us. We literally gave the game away.

"You also have to realize that these boys are just 14-years-old and this was the first year our team played this deep into the tournament."

Quincy scored a run in the top of the first inning when starting pitcher Stephen Pizzi doubled to right field to score Chris Dolbeare.

Quincy added two more runs in the second when Brian O'Hanley drilled a triple down the right field line to score Mark Dondero and catcher Ryan Donahue.

Plymouth scored one unearned run in each of the second and fourth innings on fielding miscues, narrowing the score to 3-2. It tied the game in the sixth when Quincy overthrew home plate on a fielder's choice.

In the seventh, Plymouth led with a base hit off relief pitcher O'Hanley and scored the winning run on two Quincy errors.

"We had an outstanding pitching performance by Stephen Pizzi who gave up only two hits and no walks, but we didn't support him with our fielding," said Pizzi. "To our credit the team played well enough to get to the semi's and we expect to be back to this level next year now that the boys know what to expect. I'd like to thank them and their parents for participating in the tournament."

In the Taunton game, Quincy fell behind 1-0 in the first but then scored twice in the fourth to take a 2-1 lead. Ryan Hemphill stroked a two-run single.

Taunton rallied in its half of the inning for two runs on four hits to make it a 3-2 game.

In the fifth, Quincy tied the game when Dolbeare, who hit for the cycle, tripled to score Marc Lopez. Again, Taunton answered immediately with two runs for a 5-3 lead.

Quincy tied the game at 5-5 in the seventh when Dolbeare smashed a two-run home run to deep left-center field.

The two teams remained even until the ninth inning when Quincy scored twice on a O'Hanley single, a double by Dolbeare, a hit batsman and a fielder's choice by Rogers.

Taunton pulled within a run in the ninth and the gamed ended when a runner at third base was tagged out trying to score on a passed ball at home plate.

"I think we were all surprised that they sent the runner home with such a short backstop. But we're thankful for the win," said Pizzi.

This year's roster included: Leo Ahern, Mike DeAngelo, Dolbeare, Donahue, Dondero, Ryan Farnham, Hemphill, Lopez, Paul McAteer, Bob Muollo, O'Hanley, George Phipps, Pizzi, Rogers, Dennis Thomson, and coaches Pizzi and Hank Dondero.

Managing Migraines

(NAPS)—Migraine pain can be a big headache.

An estimated 26 million Americans suffer from migraine headaches and more than 50 percent may go undiagnosed.

Migraines are caused by a drop in the brain chemical serotonin, which induces blood vessels to dilate and, in turn, produces pulsating pain messages.

Fortunately, more and more medications are available to help with the pain. There are also drug-free techniques, including biofeedback and the application of anything cold to the painful area.

"Applying cold helps to constrict dilated blood vessels, block the pain messages traveling to your brain and numb the skin—all of which contribute to the relief of pain for many migraine sufferers," said Dr. Lawrence Newman, director, Headache Institute at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital in NYC.

Before, people who wanted to apply cold for migraine pain relief turned to ice or even a bag of frozen vegetables. This was helpful, but messy, short-lived and inconvenient.

Now, many people are using a new product. Migraine Ice Cooling Headache Pads from Mentholatum provide on-the-spot aid to help reduce pain for up to four hours. Users can put the pads in purses and briefcases to take on the road. The product can also be helpful for young children with migraines.

For more information on Migraine Ice Cooling Headache Pads—and a free brochure with migraine management tips and a $1 coupon—consumers may contact Mentholatum toll-free at 1-877-SOOTHE or visit the Web site at www.migraineice.com.

How To Help Reduce 'Bad Air' In Massachusetts

Bad air. In most cases, you can't see it or smell it, but on a high ozone day you can feel it.

So far this summer, Massachusetts has endured 18 high ozone days -- 50% more than last year now we're in the heart of the ozone season: the month of August.

One in eight Massachusetts residents suffer adverse health effects from ground level ozone. Some will experience irritation and damage to the lungs, eyes and nose; and others will have acute asthma attacks and will require emergency room care. Seniors, children, and those who regularly exercise outdoors are most vulnerable to this man-made pollutant.

Massachusetts residents can help to clean the air we breathe. According to the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, every individual can make a difference by following these simple guidelines:

• Keep cars well maintained. Have our car checked for vapor leaks, properly inflated tires, a clean oil filter, and a trouble free exhaust system.

• Avoid vehicle refueling during daytime. To avoid evaporation, refuel in the evening. Don't top off your gas tank.

• Use electric or chimney-type fire starters instead of lighter fluid at your summer barbecue.

• Avoid oil-based paints or solvents. Use water-based paints instead.

• Limit driving by carpooling, walking, or biking. Combine errands as much as possible.

• Avoid excess vehicle idling.

• Take public transportation when possible.

• Avoid using gasoline-powered lawn and garden equipment.

In Massachusetts, more than half of the emissions that lead to ground level ozone are generated by people performing everyday activities. By following these simple steps, we can all improve air quality while protecting ourselves and future generations from the negative health impacts of ground level ozone.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection monitors ground level ozone statewide and provides a Daily Air Quality report both on a toll-free recording at 1-800-882-1497 and on their Web site at www.state.ma.us/dep.

(Information supplied by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection).

Summer Cooking Well Done

A sure way to eliminate food poisoning at summer barbecues is to take preventative steps throughout the cooking process to destroy harmful bacteria.

Bacteria such as campylobacter, salmonella, e. coli and listeria, found in raw poultry and other meat and dairy products can be destroyed with proper food preparation, handling, cooking and storage.

David Acheson, M.D., director of Food Safety Initiative Program at New England Medical Center, suggests the following tips:

• Wash your hands thoroughly before handling food.

• Ensure that all work surfaces and utensils are clean. Wipe up spills immediately. A solution of one tbsp of chlorine bleach to one gallon of water is most effective.

• Prevent cross contamination. Keep cooked foods separate from raw. Carefully wipe utensils and work spaces that have come in contact with raw food. Do not use the same plate for cooked poultry or meat that was used for raw meat.

• Prevent temperature abuse. Keep hot foots hot and cold foods cold. Perishable groceries should be refrigerated immediately upon purchase. Don't let food cool at room temperature. Thaw food in the refrigerator or thaw pieces by microwaving. Thawing food on the kitchen counter is risky.

• Since potentially harmful bacteria are found on the surface of steak, use tongs instead of a fork when cooking to ensure that bacteria are not pushed through to the middle of the steak. Cook all meat, poultry, fish and dairy products thoroughly.

• High-risk populations, the elderly, young and pregnant women should take extra caution because they are more susceptible to infection.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

From childhood on, every human being likes to be praised for effort and accomplishment. It is a human characteristic that creates confidence and tends to improve personalities. When a job is well done, recognition is appreciated. In the business world, financial benefits, better privileges and promotions speak well understood language of praise. Unfortunately, however, in personal relationships, praise can and does spill over into compromise at times. It occurs when one praises with the expectation to be praised in turn. Such a compromise violates the principle of giving credit where and when credit is due.

An anonymous writer expresses the thought beautifully in these words: "It isn't enough to say in our hearts - that we like a man for his ways ... It isn't enough that we fill our minds - with reams of silent praise ... Nor is it enough that we honor a man - as our confidence upward mounts ... It's going right up to the man himself - and telling him so that counts."

Morrisette Takes Major Step To New Home

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post will have a new home by the end of the year on Liberty Street in South Quincy.

Last week, the conservation commission approved the plan to tear down the building of a former granite cutting business on Liberty Street and construct a 50-90 foot post.

Construction is due to begin in the fall. The hall will have offices and a bar and enough parking spaces for 22 cars.

Since the sale of the former legion post on 54 Miller St. in West Quincy to Saturn of Boston five years ago, members had been meeting at the Sons of Italy Hall on Quarry St., and also at the Torre Dei Passeri on Washington St.

The cost of construction is expected to be between $75 and $100 per square foot.

TURF TOE

Turf toe is an injury related to the large toe joint. It is called turf toe because it is seen often in athlete's who play on artificial turf. In the South Shore, indoor soccer is very popular with several excellent facilities. However, the combination of artificial turf and more flexible, lighter shoes seem to be the culprit, in general, the sport of football seems to create more turf toe than other sports. Movements like running, cutting and quick "push offs" apply great forces against the large toe.

Symptoms of turf toe may include pain, swelling and a decrease in motion of the large toe. The athlete will be aware of the pain as he or she pushes off the toe at the start of sudden movement (like the burst of a block). If the condition is not tended to it may become a serious injury making even walking difficult. Treatment includes rest, ice, compression and possible change , of athletic shoes (stiffer soles).

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

HOCUS-FOCUS

Find at least six differences in details between panels.

CRITIC'S CORNER

AMERICAN PIE: Teenage boys spend a good deal of their time obsessing about all matters sexual. Awakened by their hormones, it seems they somehow lose their minds in the process. Their only goal seems to be to "get lucky."

This rather crude comedy follows the exploits of four such boys. Virgins all, they are determined to rid themselves of their sorry state by prom night. Judging by their personalities, though, they haven't got much of a shot.

Jason Biggs portrays Jim, a good student who is socially inept. He is desperate to lose his virginity. However, he needs some help. Turning to his father (Eugene Levy), he asks for pointers. In answer, Dad joins his son in reading that disgusting rag, Hustler magazine. Anyone who's ever seen that trash realizes that the poor boy hasn't a prayer of learning anything realistic about sex.

Thomas Ian Nicholas is Jim's friend, Kevin. He seems the most likely candidate to achieve his aims since he's going steady with the comely Vicky (Tara Reid). However, the couple thus far has confined themselves to going only as far as "third base."

Oz (Chris Klein) is a good-natured jock, a lacrosse star. However, his social skills are directly opposed to his athletic skills. The poor boy even resorts to joining the glee club in order to meet girls.

Finch (Eddie Kaye Thomas) is probably the least likely to succeed here. He is an obsessive-compulsive neat freak who has to run home every time he needs to use a rest room. He refuses to use the public, "germ-infested" lavatories at the school. Frankly, this guy needs therapy!

There are some genuinely funny moments among the sophomoric humor. However, all in all, I'd say this one isn't worth a trip to the theater. Wait for the video to come out.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Money matters are favored. Seek out financial advisers and look for ways to invest for future profit. Your charisma sweeps others along this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) After a heart-to-heart chat with a confidante, you feel much better. Don't be afraid to mix business with pleasure. Your success is assured.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although you're making headway with big-wigs, don't push it. The rather unorthodox plan you have in mind won't go over well. The weekend promises some social surprises.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A minor problem you've been experiencing on the home front reaches a satisfactory resolution. Couples need some time alone to renew romance. Use the weekend to do this.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's not as if you pay attention to idle gossip, especially such vicious fare as you've been hearing. Put this behind you. Concentrate, instead, on tasks at hand.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Now's the time to feel free to promote your new ideas. Your charisma and magnetic charm are highlighted. There's a bit of confusion over domestic disputes.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Risk-taking isn't favored, whether financially or personally. Your judgment and intuition are sharp, so follow your instincts. A happy missive arrives.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You are on a high with your communication skills. This comes in handy since you find you must rearrange an appointment. Good news arrives this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The stars favor anything of a literary nature. Thus, projects involving research are favored. Someone you're counting on will disappoint you, but this is for a good reason.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While you shouldn't be lured into taking financial risks, you can still accomplish much. Leisure and romance highlight the latter part of the week. Put aside work worries.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your business acumen comes to the fore as you find yourself dealing with some shady, evasive types. Do some inquiring about these people. What you learn is invaluable in the long run.

PISCES (February 19 March 20) The loan you seek for that certain special project is forthcoming. However, be realistic and don't ask for more than you can repay comfortably. This weekend, romance simmers.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: are a rather sensitive soul, and you can't stand to see anyone or anything suffer. Some perceive this as weakness, but you have the heart of a warrior. You enjoy the arts, particularly music and dance, and take much pleasure in these hobbies.

No Council At-Large Preliminary Election

(Cont'd from page 1)

Legislature who has run in the past.

The elimination of a preliminary election for council at-large will save the six remaining candidates money and time on the campaign trail.

However, it deprives them of the opportunity to detect possible weaknesses and trouble spots in their campaigns and to correct them before the final election. Now they won't know until Nov. 2 and if there are problems it will be too late to do anything about them.

This year's at-large results may have a significant impact on Election Year 2000 especially for Cahill and Harold who are seen as determined mayoral candidates.

The top vote-getter will have an advantage in raising money to finance a mayor a mayoral run in 2000.

The preliminary elections Sept. 14 are for the Wards 1 and 6 council seats Kolson and Bruce Ayers are leaving.

The Ward 1 candidates: Gretchen Grant, Greg Hanley, Russell Petten, William Ryan and William Weed.

The Ward 6 candidates: Maryann Mahony, Joseph Newton, James Stamos and Jens Thornton.

Sandra McCauley Resigns From Library Board

(Cont'd from page 1)

McCauley said the board had "specifically told McLaughlin in June 1998 that they did not want Nikkel to do it. He was charging $20,000 plus printing, and McCauley said "We were running short of money."

McCauley said that in her review of trust expenditures, she had discovered that Nikkel has been paid over a period of time after the directors told McLaughlin not to do so.

Sheets said he was supportive of McLaughlin. He was quoted as saying,"I believe she acted in good faith. If she though it was something wrong, she wouldn't have done it.

In her letter of resignation, McCauley said she was "convinced that she could no longer effectively serve on the Library Board of Trustees."

McCauley also stated in her letter to the mayor that she had spoken to him in his office in June and was assured that she had "done the right thing" in informing the mayor of the results of the audit.

In her letter, McCauley said she feels that "neither the mayor, Ms.McLaughlin or fellow trustees, agree with my belief that when liberties have been taken with public funds, it is a violation of public trust."

McCauley, who has served on the board since 1992 said "I'm sorry that I could not stay on the board until the completion of the new building."

Father's Group Protests 'Wrongful' Sentencing

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

About 20 fathers gathered outside Quincy District Court Tuesday protesting what they said was the "wrongful sentencing" of Rev. Harry Stewart, a divorced father who had been sentenced to six months in jail for opening an apartment foyer door violating a restraining order.

Men from the Fatherhood Coaltion were carrying signs which said "Fathers Need Due Process Too; Free Harry; Where Have All The Father's Gone, and finally Jail The Judge.

Stewart's case, which began more than three years ago, is that one day he was taking his children to his wife's home and was supposed to let them off at the sidewalk. However, one of the children fell and hurt their knee. Because Stewart walked to the door of the apartment, to make sure his child was alright, the violation occurred, according to the Fatherhood Coalition.

When he was sentenced, it was conditional on the completion of a so-called "batterer's program," According to Raymond Saulnier of Biddeford, Maine, co-chairman of the Fatherhood Coalition, who said in order to enter the program Stewart had to sign a false confession stating he was an abuser and caused emotional and verbal violence. Claiming that he had never committed an act of violence against his wife, Stewart refused to sign a confession, according to Saulnier.

Saulnier said that the

'No New Money For Other Projects'

Morrissey: Hospital Should Be Top Priority

By CRAIG SALTERS

State Sen. Michael Morrissey wants funding for Quincy Hospital to be Quincy's top priority.

At a meeting with Senate President Thomas Birmingham and Quincy Sun staff Monday, Morrissey said that no new money should be spent on projects such as The USS Salem, Squantum Gardens, the Fore River Shipyard, or the Quincy Concourse while the viability of the hospital remains an issue.

"It's time to circle the wagons and pull out all the stops" Morrissey said after appearing with Birmingham on WJDA's Party Line, a radio call-in show, and visiting The Sun office. Quincy Hospital was the radio program's most discussed topic.

Quincy Hospital is in the process of affiliating with Boston Medical Center in an attempt to remain open. A proposed bill in the House allocates $12.1 million in state aid which Governor Cellucci supports but which faces considerable opposition given the local nature of the issue. The Legislature is also wary of setting the precedent of a long-term financial obligation.

Morrissey explained that the current healthcare crisis makes saving Quincy Hospital a hard sell. He admitted the affiliation plan was a "bailout" but argued that the receivership of Chelsea and the takeover of the Lawrence Public Schools were also bailouts which the state viewed as worthy causes. Beacon Hill lawmakers have had to turn down many healthcare providers in recent years and want to know why Quincy Hospital should be made an exception. Morrissey estimates that the chances for Quincy Hospital's survival at "50/50"

Morrissey also said that, ironically, the affiliation between Boston Medical Center and Quincy Hospital actually limits some of the traditional avenues of financial support, such as the Free Care & Bad Debt or

Birmingham Supports Overriding Cellucci Veto On Church Funds

By CRAIG SALTERS

Senate President Thomas Birmingham, visiting The Quincy Sun Monday, expressed support for overriding Governor Cellucci's veto of funds to repair the United First Parish Church.

"If it comes out of the House, we'll do it," Birmingham said, saying that he was "very confident" that the Senate had the 2/3 majority necessary for an override.

Last week's decision by Governor Cellucci to cut the $291,000 needed for emergency structural repairs was part of a $92 million veto of a $600 million supplemental budget. The governor called many of the local projects in the bill fiscally irresponsible.

Senator Birmingham said a one-time capital investment in the church, coming at a time of budget surpluses and this "best of fiscal times," was a "very prudent" use of funds. He said that he was "mystified" by the governor's veto and called the presidential crypt one of Massachusetts' historical resources, warning that "it's like the extinction of the species...once they're gone, they're gone."

Neighbors Petition Against ENC Athletic Field Projects

A petition opposing three projects proposed by Eastern Nazarene College is being circulated by School Committeewoman Jo-Ann Bragg, her husband Rick and neighbors in the Wollaston area of the college.

The projects were scheduled to be before the Quincy Conservation Commission Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall. Ward 5 Councillor Steve Durkin had called for a neighborhood meeting at 6:30 p.m. at City Hall prior to the Conservation Commission meeting.

Several neighbors have voiced opposition of the proposals at the last two Conservation Commission meetings held July 21 and Aug. 4.

The proposals involve erecting light poles for the college's athletic field, the construction of dugouts and new bleaches and the installation of a new four-foot fence. Petitioners also expressed their opposition to the removal of any additional earth or trees citing a potential flood threat.

JO-ANN BRAGG

"We have collected over 100 signatures on the petition which will present on Wednesday evening to the Conservation Commission," Bragg said Tuesday as The Quincy Sun went to press.

The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned agree to object to the proposals of Eastern Nazarene College to install three 50-foot poles on 10-foot concrete bases with 12 lights on each plus lights on the rear of the gym for the purposes of lighting the athletic field. We feel these lights and night practices will be disruptive to our neighborhood.

"We object to the construction of two 8-foot by 30-foot dugouts, on crushed gravel for the baseball field, and the leveling of property adjacent to Sachem Street, the installation of a 4-foot high fence and construction of new bleachers.

"We the citizens of Quincy are opposed to the removing of any additional each or trees and the construction of any additional facilities in the neighborhood surrounding Eastern Nazarene College. We feel any further construction will increase the flooding our homes now face and possible additional changes to the water table that will increase moisture problems and may further expand the neighborhood homes that fall under the federal flood zone areas.

"These projects will be disruptive to our neighborhood and should not be allowed to go forward. We the undersigned appeal to the City of Quincy's Conservation Commission, Building Department and other departments that fall under the jurisdiction of these developments," the petitioner concludes.

Morrissey, Birmingham Discuss Affordable Housing

The hot topic was housing, and State Senator Michael Morrissey and Senate President Tom Birmingham were made to feel right at home by the residents of 91 Clay St. during a visit there Monday.

Residents at this property, known as Wollaston Manor, welcomed the senators and the opportunity to speak about the pressing issue of affordable housing.

Wollaston Manor residents are concerned that Wollaston Manor, which was launched with public funds and a commitment to affordable housing, could be converted to market rates. The problem is called "expiring use," which describes the fact that the initial provisions for the property end and the tenants face loss of their homes.

"Retaining and increasing affordable housing is crucial to preserving a sense of community, especially in our cities," Birmingham said. "For that reason the Senate has authorized funds and approved legislation to alleviate the expiring use problem."

In last year's Massachusetts housing bond bill, $20 million was authorized to help keep "expiring use" buildings affordable. Senators Morrissey and Birmingham addressed the ability of these dollars to be used to assist tenant and non-profit organization efforts to buy the properties and preserve the commitment to affordable housing.

In addition to these funds, there are also legislative efforts the Senators spoke about with tenants. Earlier this month, the Senate passed legislation to help tenants and keep rents in their units affordable in the future. It allows elected officials in any community to put a question on their local election ballot. If the question passes, the community will be allowed to keep rents affordable in these "expiring use" buildings and to protect these tenants against unfair evictions.

Last year, the Senate and House passed it, too. Gov. Cellucci vetoed the legislation too late in the year for the veto to be overridden. The City Council also recently passed a home-rule petition modeled on this bill, which Morrissey had discussed with the Senate president.

"The challenges of creating and retaining affordable housing have been priorities in the Senate, and today's visit to Wollaston Manor simply reinforces our commitment," Birmingham told resident. He thanked the residents for being so forthright, and he thanked Morrissey for hosting him throughout an informative day in Quincy.

Josiah Quincy House Open Saturdays, Sundays

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, is open for the season.

Through Oct. 15, the Josiah Quincy House will be open Saturdays and Sundays, with tours offered on the hour from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and is free to Quincy residents and SPNEA members.

The Josiah Quincy House is one of Quincy's oldest and most significant historic sites. The Quincy House is a short walk from the Red Line's Wollaston station.

For directions and information, call SPNEA's headquarters at 617-227-3956.

In 1770, Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy built this elegant country estate surrounded by fields and pastures and overlooking Quincy Bay. Tours of the house include a visit to the third floor "monitor," from which vantage point Josiah Quincy could see the Bay. The view today speaks of Quincy's history and development from rural farmland to residential neighborhood.

The house's elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it. For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life in Massachusetts and the nation. The family produced three Boston mayors and a president of Harvard University. The house, considered to be one of the finest extent examples of New England Georgian architecture, is a repository of the Quincy family history.

The Josiah Quincy House is one of 35 historic house museums owned and operated by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. SPNEA, headquarted in Boston, is a museum of cultural history that preserves, interprets and collects buildings, landscapes, and objects reflecting New England life from the 17th century to the present.

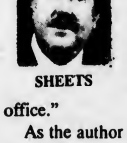
The Mayors Hall Of Fame

Let's see, there's a Hall of Fame for the greats of baseball, football, basketball, hockey, etc.

Now, how about this one: a Quincy Mayoral Hall of Fame.

Who would you like to see inducted?

Frank McCauley, who is writing a "Political History of Quincy" as part of the city's millennium celebration plans to highlight who he considers Quincy's all-time Top Five Mayors in a special Mayor's Hall of Fame segment in the book.



McCAULEY

McCauley will base his choices on what he has learned about the early mayors while doing research for the book and on his personal observations of the later mayors.

But he wouldn't mind a little in-put from residents who might help guide him in the final selection of the top five. And he might add five to make it The Top 10.

Twenty eight men have served as mayor since Quincy became a city in 1889. Twenty seven were Plan A mayors including two--Thomas Burgin and Amelio Della Chiesa--who also served under Plan E. And one, David McIntosh, who served only under Plan E.

McCauley, who was a four-term mayor, is eliminating himself and present Mayor James Sheets from consideration.

SHEETS

"Jim Sheets is still in office," he explains. "He is not through yet to be judged on his over-all performance as mayor. That judgement will have to come later after he leaves office."

As the author of the book and the one making the selection of the top mayors, McCauley diplomatically (and modestly) has taken himself out of any consideration.

"I don't think I was too bad a mayor, though," he laughs. "I called them as I saw them."

And there are thrifty souls out there with an ever eye on their tax bills who would steer some Hall of Fame votes his way.

McCauley pinched municipal pennies as if they were his own, earning him the reputation as the Jack Benny of Quincy politics.

And those pennies added up. When he left office, he left the city a near $9 million surplus.

McCauley says his Mayoral Hall of Fame selections are not going to be popularity oriented.

"The main criteria," he says, "will be the problems and issues the mayors faced during their administrations and how they handled and overcame them. Mayors, you might say, who went above and beyond the call of duty."

Like who?

Could one of them be Charles Porter, a Civil War veteran and Quincy's first mayor who was charged with the task of leading Quincy from a town form of government to that of a city. And trying to keep the historic transition on an even keel and quiet critics who would have preferred that Quincy remained a town.

A similar challenge that the first mayor of Weymouth will soon face.

Or Tom Burgin?

His years in the mayor's office were certainly eventful and challenging to say the least. He was mayor during the Great Depression, the devastating Hurricane of 1938 and the early days of World War II.

BURGIN

Or Amelio Della Chiesa who served 12 years--eight under Plan A and four under Plan E and still holds the mayoral longevity record counting both forms of government. He was a fatherly figure who kept the city pretty much on a peaceful and even keel.

DELLA CHIESA

Or James McIntyre who some see as the mayor who brought the city into modern times with development and the coming of the MBTA?

McINTYRE

Who do you think?

Of the 28 mayors, only five have been full-time.

Walter Hannon was the first in 1972 followed by Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets.

HANNON

Prior to that, Quincy's mayors were usually businessmen who served part-time as mayor or who held another elective office simultaneously.

Being mayor got to be a harder job with more issues and problems as the city grew and times changed, says McCauley.

Quincy could never get by today with a part-time mayor, he says.

"It's definitely a full-time job and a tough one," he says.

McCauley declines to even hint who his Mayoral Hall of Famers might be. He's still working on the selections.

If you have any nominee in mind and why you think they should be in the Mayoral Hall of Fame, he would like to hear from you.

You can reach him at 479-6230 or send the information to him at 210 Manet Ave., or City Hall.

"Would like to hear from you," says McCauley.

Summerfest Continues With Country Western Band

The Summerfest '99 Concert Series continues with the John Penny Country Western Band Wednesday, Aug. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater.

The Infractions return Aug. 25 and the Alumni Big Band Sept. 1.

The remaining concerts will be sponsored by the Cathy Pacific Restaurant, the Derbes Bros. and Quincy First Night.

Concerts postponed due to weather conditions are held on the following evening.

The Quincy South Shore Cultural Commission and the city of Quincy have been providing the concerts to Quincy and neighboring residents since 1983.

This year the Summerfest '99 program has joined several local businesses as a major sponsor of Quincy's new semi pro football team the Quincy Granite.

The words to the Battle Hymn of the Republic were written by Julia Ward Howe in 1861 after visiting army camps around Washington.

Urges Friends Of Faxon House To Help Save Quincy Hospital

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Since 1972, our program has been located on Quincy Hospital grounds.

The Quincy Hospital emergency room has been the salvation of many of our clients for 27 years. I have worked at Quincy Detox/Faxon Recovery since 1980 and personally know many, many men and women who are active and productive South Shore citizens whose lives were saved because the Quincy Hospital was so close by.

I encourage all of our clients whose lives were affected to encourage your families, friends, and Massachusetts state representatives and senators, outside Quincy, to support the supplemental budget request to save Quincy Hospital. I urge our supporters and friends to the "Faxon House" to do the same.

Thanks For Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive Support

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We would like to thank all who donated at the 15th Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive and all who volunteered to help out in other ways. We had a very good year collecting a total of 106 pints of blood. Without donors this would not happen.

We feel the donors are the unsung heroes of the blood drive and we hope they know how much we, The American Red Cross and the recipients of their blood appreciate their rolling up their sleeves and giving to help someone who they do not know. To us this such a selfless action and we respect and admire them for it.

"We would like to thank The Quincy Sun for your continued support of the blood drive. You have been helping us from the beginning and we truly appreciate it.

Women, Infant, Child Program Rated For Exceptional Performance

Quincy Hospital's Women, Infant and Children (WIC) Program, which provides nutrition counseling and food vouchers to local women and children, achieved an exceptional level of performance during a recent review by the Department of Public Health Bureau of Family and Community Health.

The review was based on WIC core service standards and contract performance measures such as guidelines and timelines. Each WIC contract is awarded based on results of the review.

"I am proud of the staff of the Quincy Hospital WIC program for this achievement," said Irene VanRompay, WIC program director.

"They work hard all year long to ensure that we meet and even exceed WIC core standard expectations and the exceptional performance review result is proof of that."

Mayor Makes President Hoover Honorary Citizen

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa made former President Herbert Hoover an honorary citizen for the "City of Presidents" on the occasion of Hoover's 88th birthday.

Aug. 19 - 25
1962
37 Years Ago

The birthday greeting and letter notification of honoree citizenship were sent under separate cover from the honorary citation, with only the letter reaching the former president.

Hoover wrote back thanking Della Chiesa for the special honor, but inquired, "Do I get some evidence of my relation to the city to display in West Branch, Iowa?"

The mayor made quick work of replacing the lost citation with a new one encased in a special leather folder.

1,500 NEW VOTERS REGISTERED

City Clerk John Gillis reported the registration of 1,500 new voters in the city, an impressive number compared to years past. The final registrants clearly were motivated by the upcoming primary election for U.S. Senate where Edward Kennedy was facing Edward McCormack on the Democratic side with George Lodge facing Laurence Curtis on the Republican side, Gillis said. He also noted that the recent defeat of President Kennedy's Medicaid bill motivated a lot of senior citizens to register.

Gillis predicted a 40 percent turnout in the September primary.

REC.-AUDITORIUM COMPLEX PROPOSED

City Council President Charles Shea, who was acting mayor this week, proposed a major sea and shore recreational facility along the Neponset River, with the construction of an auditorium for conventions.

A noted yachtsman, Shea said the complex would provide facilities for both the sea-going and shore-going folks of the city. Under his plan the auditorium would be self supporting. He noted that the land was currently owned by Boston Edison, but it was too big for their needs.

A special committee of the city council was set up to study the plan, headed by Councillor George Burke.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Jonathan's Half-Baked Chicken

When our daughter Nancy's neighbor, Jonathan cooked today's entree he didn't know what to call it so he named it ? chicken. It is really delicious and very easy to prepare. I call it as follows:

Half-Baked Chicken

1 pound boneless chicken breast (thinly sliced)
flour, salt and pepper for coating
2 cloves garlic
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 roasted red pepper (or peppers from a jar)
1/4-1/2 marsala wine or cooking sherry juice of a lemon
smoked mozarella cheese
3-4 slices of prosciutto

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Coat the chicken in the flour, salt and pepper.

On the bottom of a nonstick skillet, heat the oil with the garlic and cook the chicken on one side. When you turn the chicken, add the wine and lemon juice and continue cooking until chicken is done.

In the same pan, on top of each piece of chicken, place a slice of prosciutto, the cheese and some of the pepper slices. Place the skillet in the oven until cheese starts to melt. Serve hot with a side of rise or pasta.

Children Celebrate Arthur's Birthday At Adams Shore Library

Children sang and shouted Happy Birthday to Arthur the Aardvark, the beloved Marc Brown character recently at the Adams Shore branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The event was a collaborative effort of Colleen Monahan of Quincy Family Literacy Network at Snug Harbor School; Isabel Ventre of Quincy Public Schools Homeless Program; Elaine Kline and Julie Rines of Thomas Crane Public Library.

Approximately 100 children and parents attended the event, which featured games, story telling, birthday cake and favors (an Arthur book and glasses to take home).

Children had their picture taken with the guest of honor through a donation by Polaroid. Stop and Shop donated Arthur's birthday cake, and Little Brown Publishers supplied the Arthur costume. Isabel Ventre, director of Education Services for the Homeless for Quincy Public Schools, brought Arthur to life.

Parents from the Quincy Family Literacy Network distributed evaluations to all attendees, and passed out cake and favors. Activities included "Pin the Bow Tie" on Arthur, Throw Pal a Bone, coloring, storytelling and picture taking.

The response of parents and kids was overwhelmingly positive. As one parent, said, "It was way more than we expected. It was well planned and organized. Thanks."

This is the fourth collaborative effort of this group and each year the programs improved and attendance increases. The program was funded through SABES (system of adult education support) and the Massachusetts Department of Education.

ARTHUR THE AARDVARK with Colleen Monahan celebrates his birthday with children at the Adams Shore branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

He added, "She spoke a year ago from this very podium and her spirit is here with us tonight and pleased that a scholarship bearing her name will help the students she loved."

The Woodward Yearbook was dedicated to Mrs. Hayes memory by Mary Nguyen, Class of 1999. Student essays were presented by Melina Palma, Erika Simmons and Audrey Fergason, all of the Class of 2000. Candidate for Ward 6 City Councillor

Dear Voter,

I am a lifelong resident of Ward 6 and attended the Quincy Public Schools. I am a strong advocate for the every day issues that effect the quality of life in our community. I will work hard to ensure that our community decides what happens in our neighborhood. I believe that being your City Councillor is about Public Service, not politics. May I ask you for your vote September 14th.

An eight-foot high section of the roof has been removed from end to end on both sides to allow 16 steel trusses to be rigged in the attic space of the church. Gov. Cellucci's veto of $291,000 has jeopardized the second phase of the repair project: replacing the slate roof.

'IT'S A TRICKY operation," says United First Parish Church Minister Rev. Sheldon Bennett, describing the methodical process of installing 40-foot steel trusses in the church attic space. Here, Ironworker Dave Carter of Wollaston rigs a 1,250-pound half steel truss into the attic space. Without an additional $291,000 to replace the slate roof, Bennett said the church may have to close due to public safety concerns.

Bank Of Canton Advises On Y2K Preparedness

Preparing for Y2K has become an enormous challenge for businesses and individuals, says The Bank of Canton.

These days the talk regarding money centers around whether to withdraw some of your savings from banks in preparation, and essentially in fear of, what could potentially occur after the clock strikes midnight on Dec. 31, 1999.

While not expected to be the disaster often predicted by doomsayers, experts are working hard to make Americans aware that certain precautions should be taken. The Y2K issue should be treated like a long holiday weekend or a bad storm coming through the area. Minor power and telecommunications disruptions should be anticipated and planned for.

However, the question still remains -- is my money safe in our bank? Per the FDIC, your money is safer in an insured bank than almost anywhere else. We at the Bank of Canton, and we presume most other reliable institutions, have tested core processing systems and they are Y2K compliant. And our customers' money is insured in full by the FDIC and DIF.

While Y2K issues have forced many companies to make extensive and often costly modifications to their computer and operating systems, Y2K is an opportunity for criminals and scammers to prey upon individuals and companies, attempting to trick them into allowing their funds to be transferred out of their bank accounts. Our advice: if you should receive a phone call, e-mail, or other form of communication asking you to divulge bank account information, such as account number, PIN number, credit card number, passwords, Social Security number, or other pieces of personal information -- DON'T DO IT! The Bank of Canton, and other reliable Institutions, will never call or e-mail you for such information, and as a general reminder, you should never respond to unsolicited requests for any personal or financial data.

For additional information a helpful resource is the President's Council on Year 2000 Conversion, at 1-888-872-4925, or via the Web at y2k.gov. Also visit the FDIC Web site at www.fdic.gov for information specifically relating to financial matters. Check back next month for more Y2K news and tips, and rest easy knowing that the Bank of Canton has you covered.

Durkin Wants Proper Permits For ENC Improvement Project

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen J. Durkin, in a letter sent this week urged Major James Sheets and Walter White, director of Inspectional Services for the City of Quincy, to make certain that Eastern Nazarene College, seeking to make improvements to its athletic field, is required to apply for building permits and to seek a permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The college intends to construct 50 foot tower lights for its soccer field and dugouts for its baseball field. Since E.N.C's athletic field is subject to flooding, the college is required to submit a Notice of Intent with Quincy's Conservation Commission. That application is currently pending; however, the Conservation Commission is primarily concerned, by law, only with the two projects' impact on the water table and flooding in the area, also an important concern for neighboring residents.

Durkin wrote to Sheets and White that while as an educational entity the college is exempt from zoning laws, E.N.C. is subject to reasonable restrictions "...During asserted that is very questionable whether installing 50 foot lights in the middle of a residential neighborhood is reasonable." "Residents are concerned," Durkin continued, "that the neighborhood will be illuminated as Fenway Park lights up Kenmore Square."

Beechwood Harbor Cruise Aug. 25 To Benefit Elder Services

Beechwood on the Bay's Harbor Cruise Wednesday, Aug. 25 will benefit Quincy's "Older Elders," many of whom have a combination of needs.

The three-hour cruise will board at the Marina Bay dock at 6:30 p.m. and depart at 7 p.m.

"Quincy has a growing senior population as we all know," said Beechwood President Don Uvanitte. Mayor James Sheets and the City Planning Board identify that 27 percent of the city's population is over age 60, with an increasing percentage being "older elders" (75 years and older.)

"These 'older elders' often have special needs. Many 'older elders' have a combination of needs," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood. Mobility, vision, hearing and limiting health problems can make it difficult to live at home independently.

For 15 years, Beechwood has provided special services for seniors "at risk." The Elder Home Repair Program was designed to perform minor home repair enabling seniors to remain independent and in their own homes as long as possible. "Installation of grab bars, railings and minor repairs often make a critical difference," Beals said.

Project S.A.F.E. (Smoke Alarms For Elders) is another service designed to ensure the health and safety of our frailest citizens, Beals said, noting an increasing number of "older elders" are remaining in their own homes longer with in-home assistance.

Requests of services have doubled in recent years at the Community Center. Community fundraising is essential to the continuance of the Alzheimer's Association, the Elder Home Repair Program, and other city-wide services for "older elders" with special needs.

"A successful cruise next week will ensure another year of services for our 'eldest' citizens," Beals said.

Tickets are $35 each and are available at Beechwood and other locations throughout the city.

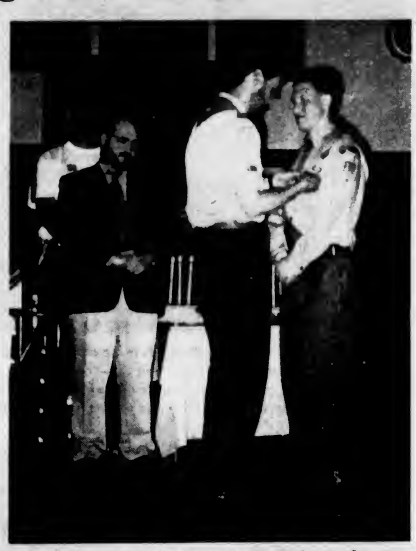
Paul Hession Awarded Eagle Scout Badge



Paul A. Hession of Wollaston was awarded the Eagle Scout badge, the highest rank in Scouting, at a Court of Honor recently at St. Chrysostom's Church in Wollaston.

For his Eagle service project, he enlisted neighbors, family members and fellow scouts to build a library of books, music cassettes and video tapes for residents of Presidential Convalescent Home in Wollaston, and restored a donated bookcase to house the collection.

The Eagle award, the first in Troop 11 since the troop was re-established in 1990, was presented by Scoutmaster James Pratt. Councillors Paul Harold and Steven Durkin presented a citation from the City Council. Letters of congratulations from President Clinton, former President Ford, and other dignitaries were read. Also, in attendance was William Shaw, a neighbor of Paul's and long-time Quincy Scouter who earned the Eagle award in 1933.

Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hession, has been a member of Troop 11, sponsored by St. Chrysostom's Church, for five years, and before that was a member of Troop 21 and Cub Scout Pack 21, chartered to St. Ann's Church. He is also a member of Venturing Crew 11, and co-ed Scouting group for high-school youth which focuses on adventure-oriented outdoor activities. For the past two summers he has served as sports instructor at T.L. Storer Scout Camp in New Hampshire.

Paul is also a rock musician, and an active member of St. Ann's Church. He is a 1999 graduate of North Quincy High School, and will attend Franciscan College in the fall to study computer science.

Quincy Hospital, Manet Center In Boston Medical HealthNet Plan

The Boston Medical Center HealthNet Plan recently received approval from the Massachusetts Department of Medical Assistance to provide services in the Quincy area in conjunction with Quincy Hospital and Manet Community Health Center.

The HealthNet Plan provides MassHealth eligible patients with personalized medical care, a full range of mental health and substance abuse services, as well as special health programs. Quincy Hospital and Manet Community Health Center's three offices in Quincy and one in Hull will begin registering HealthNet patients immediately.

The HealthNet Plan's personalized medical care includes care for the whole family provided by family practitioners. Patients needing further medical care will be referred to specialists at Quincy Hospital and Boston Medical Center where they can access the most advanced technology.

The special health programs offer free prescription and over-the-counter medications (with physician approval) at over 1,000 locations, including Brooks, CVS, Osco and Walgreens. Additionally, participants receive dental care, vision and transportation benefits and access to various health and wellness programs. The Plan provides free car/baby seats, breast pumps, bike helmets, pre-school books and prenatal care for participants.

"We are very excited to be able to offer the HealthNet Plan to the people in this region," said Jeffrey Doran, Quincy Hospital CEO. "There are a lot of people who can benefit from these services on the South Shore and we are glad to be working with Manet Community Health Center and Boston Medical Center to ensure that this vulnerable group has access to care."

"The services and programs offered through Boston Medical Center's HealthNet Plan are completely compatible with the type of services and programs we offer at Manet Community Health Center," stated Ellen Hafer, Executive Director of MCHC. "We are thrilled to have the opportunity to expand services and reach out to more people."

"Boston Medical Center is pleased to bring the HealthNet Plan to the Quincy area," said Elaine Ullian, President and CEO of Boston Medical Center. "We are excited to work with our new partners, Quincy Hospital and Manet Community Health Center, to expand access to healthcare services for area residents."

The HealthNet Plan is available to individuals and families who meet MassHealth eligibility requirements. If you are currently uninsured you may qualify for these or other benefit programs.

For more information about how to apply for the HealthNet Plan, call (800) 792-4355.

HELP FOR CAREGIVERS

About 22 million American households contain caregivers who devote considerable time and energy to looking after a family member. This represents nearly a 300% increase over the number of just over a decade ago. About one in four of the caregivers are women, who are usually caring for their husbands or, less often, a parent. This responsibility can mean not only considerable anxiety, depression and guilt for the caregiver, but also the emotional stress borne of watching someone whom they love deteriorate. At some point, caregivers must realize that they need help. Respite care programs, among others, offer caregivers a chance to get away from their responsibilities every so often. Various forms of other assistance are also available.

Sometimes even a bit of help isn't enough when it comes to caring for someone you love. If you are finding your emotional resources are stretched thin, it's time to consider other options that might provide for the needs of both you and your family member. At Marina Place, a senior living residence, we offer the assistance some seniors need with the independence many are looking for. You won't find a more gracious setting coupled with the proper care and help as you will at Four Seaport Drive. Phone: 617-770-3264.

P.S. When it is no longer feasible for caregivers to continue caring for chronically ill or disabled loved ones at home, alternative care must be considered.

Farmer's Market To Host Summer Harvest Festival

Quincy Farmers' Market at John Hancock Municipal Parking lot on Chestnut St., will celebrate the bounty of summer fruits and vegetables, and invites the public to meet with Mark Hall, Chef of the Elephant Walk Restaurant, and a member of Chef's 2000 Collaborative on Friday, Aug. 27 at noon.

Chef Hall will answer consumer questions on fresh vegetable preparations, and give demonstrations on cooking techniques. Consumers are invited to sample the vegetable.

Mark Hall grew up on a working farm in upstate New York. To this day, he remembers the family's vegetable garden, large plot full of fresh produce. It taught him, he says, a love of the basics that every chef needs to create excellent cuisine. An active member of the national organization, Chef's Collaborative 2000, Hall has remained true to that belief. He strongly supports the organiztion's goal of promoting local farms and organic produce.

As a young man, Hall did not set out to become a chef. While attending a hotel management school, he decided to learn more about what went on in the kitchen. Time spent with a French chef quickly convinced him he belonged in the hotel's kitchen, not in the office, and his passion for cooking took root.

Hall received his degree from Johnson & Wales University in 1985 after completing the school's advanced culinary arts program. He then began work as a rounds cook at Boston's Ritz-Carlton.

In the last 13 years, Hall has worked at some of Boston's finest restaurants., including Salamanders, the Blue Room, Hamersley's Bistro and 29 Newbury. He says he learned from each position and now has developed his own highly creative style. Important in all dishes, he says, is a balance of flavors and textures. His flavors are lean and crisp, reflecting classic French combinations. One way he monitors that is to check with his customers several times each night. Complaints or concerns are followed up immediately. Sometimes, dishes are even dropped from the menu.

Hall assumed the French side of the Elephant Walk in Boston during the summer of 1997. He likens his work to that of a conductor, bringing out the best in a diverse orchestra of talent. The kitchen at the Elephant Walk is a complicated place, creating both a full French and a full Cambodian menu.

"It is a real honor that Mark Hall, distinguished member of Chef's Collaborative 2000 is sharing his talent to Quincy Farmers' Market customers on Aug. 27 to celebrate the National Farmers' Market Week and appreciate our farmers who serve the citizens of Quincy and surrounding towns." said Harry Johnson, Market Manager.

The University of Massachusetts Extension will be on hand Sept. 17 to do a food and nutrition lecture demonstrations.

Quincy Farmers' Market continues until the end of October, Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Manet Community Health Awarded $120,000 Grant

Neighborhood Health Plan, a not-for-profit HMO and an affiliate of Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, announces the award of a grant to Manet Community Health Center, Inc. and its collaborative efforts with Brockton Neighborhood Health Center and Mattapan Community Health Center.

The grant was made through the Community Health Center Enhancement Fund, a program coordinated jointly by Neighborhood Health Plan and the Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers, and administered through the Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Foundation.

A grant of $120,000 for fiscal year 2000 beginning July 1999 was approved by Neighborhood Health Plan's Board of Directors. The grant will help Manet Community Health Center, Inc. enhance its management information system and voice mail, prepare to become accredited by the Joint Commission for Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO), anticipating a December site survey, and introduce the role of a "hospitalist" within their medical staff.

Manet Community Health Center works closely with Neighborhood Health Plan (NHP) and MassHealth to provide outreach to the community for expanded health coverage through the state.

Through this grant, Manet is working collaboratively with Brockton Neighborhood Health Center and Mattapan Community Health Center on the management and development of information and clinical systems focusing on case management and prevention.

"The NHP and Harvard Pilgrim grant is critical to maintaining access to effective patient-centered and preventive care. These funds improve our systems to help our providers focus on patient care," said Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet Community Health Center.

"These funds improve our systems to help our providers focus on patient care as we meet the challenges of improved coordination of care. It is exciting to work with the Brockton and Mattapan Centers to find efficiencies and cost savings with a common commitment to access to care for uninsured and low income populations," Hafer added.

Manet Community Health Center, Inc. received the grants at its Board of Directors meeting Aug. 3. James Hooley, president and CEO of Neighborhood Health Plan, made the presentation to Gertrude Peter, president of the Board of Directors of Manet.

Manet has three sites in Quincy and manages the Hull Medical Center.

The Community Health Center Enhancement Fund is administered by the Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Foundation through Neighborhood Health Plan to make funds available to eligible health centers to improve health care for their communities. The fund is a three-year, $15 million program that will be distributed to 42 eligible community health centers through 2001.

For more information about the program, contact Mel Benson at Neighborhood Health Plan at 617-772-5681, or Pat Edraos at the Massachusetts League of Community Centers at 617-426-2225.

For more information about Manet Community Health Center's programs and services, call Sheila Beilsik, Patient Services and Managed Care, at (617) 376-3030 ext. 240.

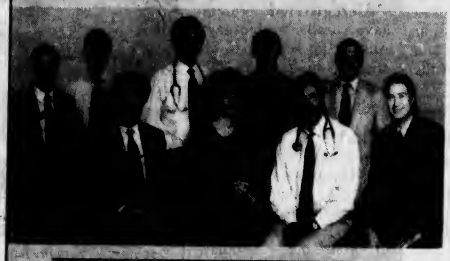
Quincy College Corporate Program Revenue Doubles



The Corporate Training program at Quincy College doubled its gross revenue in fiscal year 1999, reports President G. Jeremiah Ryan.

The program established in 1997, to serve area businesses by offering short-term customized employee education courses, grossed $174,799 this year as compared to $88,336 in fiscal year 1998 and $50,000 in fiscal year 1997.

The Corporate Training program is housed in the Center for Community Development under the direction of Robert Baker.

"Our expectation, with Baker's continued leadership, is that the program will continue to grow at a rapid pace," said Ryan.

It's practices like these that make us the perfect choice in hospitals.

Birmingham Supports Overriding Veto On Church Funds

tower of the Church of the Presidents in plain view, Birmingham stressed the educational, economic, and historic merits of the site, adding, "it's not just about nostalgia." The Senate president compared the current fortunes of Charlestown and his home city of Chelsea, saying that Charlestown's renaissance was due to preserving its "historic texture" while Chelsea's troubles came in part from abandoning it. With that in mind, he called restoring the United First Parish Church's roof "a legitimate presidential preservation project."

The church is currently undergoing a $500,000 structural repair project to replace cracked wooden trusses with steel trusses, $135,000 of which has been provided by the Massachusetts Historical Commission The lost money was intended to pay off a loan the church had taken out to make up the difference between the grants and the actual cost. Without that money, the church must use its own privately raised funds to pay the loan, money originally earmarked for a new slate roof. Paying the loan themselves makes the prospect of building the new roof appear next to impossible.

"It is myopic to see this as a local issue," Birmingham said, pointing out the national significance of the Adams Crypt. He called the veto of the project "penny wise and pound foolish" on the part of the governor and felt that Cellucci's suggestion to finish some local projects with Quincy's share of lottery money was misleading. "That money was coming anyway," he said.

Although Birmingham is confident of an override if the issue reaches the Senate, he did not know if it would ever get that far, nor would he care to speculate. Any override bill first needs a 2/3 majority in the House before it can reach the Senate. Birmingham did say that he was meeting with Speaker of the House Thomas Finneran later that day and would broach the subject with him.

Birmingham is not the only one to take issue with the idea that preserving the burial place of John and John Quincy Adams, as well as their wives, is somehow irresponsible.

"It makes you wonder where their priorities are," said Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church. Referring to a $30,000 dredging project which was spared the ax, Bennett added, "the governor feels that a boat launch is more important than honoring the dignity of two former presidents, two sons of Massachusetts."

Rev. Bennett worried that Cellucci's action might jeopardize public tours at the church in the future. The minister emphasized that construction already contracted (roughly $500,000) would be completed and that this year's tours would continue. However, he said a temporary roof would cause severe water damage and could make the tours unworkable. "We have to re-think our entire strategy," Bennett said.

Tours of the Adams Crypt are held from Presidents' Day to Veteran's day and attract thousands annually. The church had been in the process of general repairs when structural engineers noticed serious flaws in the timber trusses, putting the roof in danger of "imminent and catastrophic collapse" and making an entirely new roof necessary.

Bennett said that his next step is to work with Quincy's legislators for a House override. Failing that, he will speak with Mayor Sheets about use of the city's lottery discretionary fund. Bennett has also spoken with the Massachusetts Historical Commission who said that additional funds were not available at the present time.

Rev. Bennett, who called WJDA's Party Line to speak to Birmingham personally, praised Rep. Steve Tobin and state Sen. Morrissey for their leadership throughout the entire process. This has included meeting with state leaders and urging a phone campaign to Governor Cellucci's office. Both legislators will be instrumental in marshaling enough support for an override.

Besides being the resting place of the Adams, the church is home for an active congregation and is used by Quincy College, the Woodward School, and the Quincy Chorale Society. The church also plays a central role in Quincy's Presidents' Day and First Night celebrations.

"The governor of the Commonwealth ought to be ashamed to snub the presidents," Bennett said.

Wu, a graduate of North Quincy High School, is the daughter of Kose and Yvonne Wu, 164 East Elm Ave. She was a member of the National Honor Society, the Thomas Jefferson Forum and the track and cross country teams.

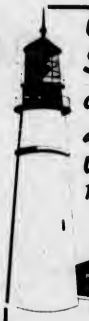
CORNS & CALLUSES

Corns and calluses are common but painful foot ailments that interfere with daily activities. The skin protects itself from pressure on the foot by growing quickly and forming a thick outer layer. When the pressure is too great, the skin gets so thick that it forms a callus, which acts like a foreign body to the skin. Within the callus, pressure in one spot can cause a hard plug of skin, called a core, to develop. Corns and calluses have no root because they form on the skin's dead outer layer. After the cause of the callus is diagnosed, a podiatrist will pare the corn and callus down to the good skin, then devise a treatment plan for the area.

Home treatments for corns and calluses may bring short-term, temporary relief, but medical answers are your best bet for the long-term. Here at 110 West Squantum Street, North Quincy, our aim is to prevent, not just repair. Don't wait for calluses, corns, skin conditions, fungal infections, aches and pains to disappear like magic, because they won't. Call us at 617-472-3466 instead for prompt, personal attention from an outstanding staff of caregivers.



P.S. Treatment plans for corns and calluses often include softening creams, advice on self-care and footwear, pads to take pressure off the painful area, or a prescription for orthotics to help correct a harmful walking pattern.

BACK-TO-SCHOOL

Back-To-School Spending: 101

Teaching Children Financial Lessons

The back-to-school season brings mixed emotions for most parents with school-aged children. Some feel relief, as they realize that the pressure to find new and interesting summer activities will soon end.

But for many families on a budget, the end of August signals a time of increased expenses as they make a mental checklist of the inventory needed to send their kids back to school.

Parents whose children are about to embark on college careers may feel even more burdened, as they face the costs of tuition payments, books and supplies, not to mention the prospect of sending teens into a world where perhaps, for the first time, they will need to manage money on their own.

Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Massachusetts (CCCS) urges parents to turn this August's frenzied back-to-school season into an opportunity to teach kids, no matter what grade level, personal financial management skills.

"The back-to-school season is the ideal time to begin a dialogue with children about financial responsibility," said Mel Stiller, CCCS of Massachusetts executive director. "Kids learn largely by example. By involving them in the budgeting, bargain hunting and purchasing of back-to-school items, you expose them to the planning process behind purchases, and help them to realize that they must differentiate between needs and wants."

Consumer Credit Counseling Services offers three separate back-to-school spending strategies for grade school, high school and college-bound kids.

Strategy 1 - Combating the "I Want" Syndrome.

Merchandisers everywhere capitalize on this particular affliction all the time. Hence, all the Star Wars backpacks, Disney notebooks and colorfully wrapped candy bars are on the bottom shelves, at the direct eye-level of your 8-year-old. Following, are ways to minimize the effects of "I Want" mania.

• Explain what a budget is, in "kids terms." Tell them that you are going shopping for school supplies and that you have a specific amount of money you can spend.

• Making a shopping list. Ask your child to help think of all the things he or she needs for school. Get your child involved in the planning process.

• Go through coupon fliers. Clipping coupons is a great way to find bargains and can be a fun activity to do with young kids. (However, CCCS suggests editing the fliers first, so they don't find an outdoor swing set instead of a magnetic pencil case!)

• Set guidelines for shopping time. With list and coupons in hand, tell your grade schooler that you have "an hour and a half to find all the items on the list." That way, it's fun, challenging and you have a plan. As a reward for making it in under the clock, consider letting your little bargain shopper pick a special treat, within a certain price range, for a job well done.

• Take the kids shopping, separately. Understandably, the tendency is to want to shop for everyone on the same day. But taking siblings shopping at the same time sends "I Want" meters off the charts, particularly for little ones. If possible, plan ahead and take each child on a different day. It avoids chaos, which in turn leads to smarter spending decisions. It's also a nice way to spend some individual "quality" time with each child.

Strategy 2 - Taming the Trend Frenzy

They are teenagers. They have graduated from "I Want" to "I Must Have or I'll Die!" Thus, as parents, you must learn the fine art of negotiation.

• Ask for their help. According to the latest market research, "Gen-Y," as today's teens have been coined, is more financially savvy than its predecessors. In fact, your teens may be better bargain shoppers than you. So ask for their input. You may be surprised at the knowledgeable response you receive. Tell them what they have to spend, and let them point you in the direction of "best buys."

• Make a list of essentials. Sit down with your teens and make a list of all the clothing and supplies they cannot get by without, such as new gym sneakers, a trombone for band or a scientific calculator. Tell them you will pay for these essentials, but any extras are up to them to fund.

If they insist they need the trendier, more expensive items, explain that they must earn the money and buy them on their own. This will teach them a valuable lesson in budgeting, earning and saving towards a goal.

• Let them make some of the spending decisions. Naturally, your impulse is to monitor every purchase to ensure they spend wisely. The best lessons in money management, however, are learned by experience. Although you should direct teens towards making sensible purchases, they should be given the freedom to make some "money mistakes."

Strategy 3 - "Cutting The Card, I Mean Cord!"

Whether your child is going away to college or staying home for school, chances are they will be taking on greater financially responsibility. As back-to-school time approaches, it is important to discuss financial management, including credit card usage, with your college-bound teenager.

• Establish a budget. Together, develop a budget which includes all likely monthly expenses, taking

Hip, Happening School Fashions

(NAPS)—This school year, today's style conscious teens may learn some new words. The words—skant, peek-a-boo shrug and the club look—are all trendy terms that refer to hip and happening fashion trends.

"Today's teens and preteens are extremely fashion conscious. Their goal is to replicate the 'celebrity look' which their movie screen icons are wearing for day and evening," explains T.J. Maxx fashion spokesperson Laura Cervone. "The looks are flattering, futuristic and funky."

Here are just a few of the top new trends:

• Skirt lengths hover at the knee with two distinctive forms. The "club look" features form fitting, clean-front skirts that fall above the knee, while the "utility look" falls below the knee with cargo and kangaroo pockets. Nylon, cotton-twill, rayon and lycra fabric blends are predominant.

To help teens and preteens keep up with the latest styles, it pays to shop off price.

• The must-have skant is a form-fitting skirt atop slim pants. Paired with a soft, sheer pink sweater, the look transforms day to night.

• A major player is the two-piece peek-a-boo shrug, which reveals just a thin line of skin between a tube top and shrug top (sweater which ends under the arm).

• The news in shoes is wedges, Mary Janes with platform soles, mock penny loafers, mules and clogs, all with chunky-soled height.

Additional gal trends include cardigan and pullover shrugs, ¾ length sleeve tops, tubes, "flapped collared" turtlenecks (worn unbuttoned), trouser skirts and anything stretch.

For guys, there's continued interest in sports themes, whether it's v-necked baseball shirts; snowboard or ever military fashions.

Delahunt To Sponsor Service Academies Information Night

Cong. William Delahunt will sponsor an information forum Wednesday, Sept. 22 at 7 p.m. at Marshfield High School for high school students and their families interested in details about higher education at U.S. Service Academies.

The two-hour forum will feature admissions officials from the U.S. Military Academy (West Point), Naval Academy (Annapolis, MD), and Air Force Academy (Colorado Springs, CO), as well as the Coast Guard Academy (New London, CT), Merchant Marine Academy (Kings Point, NY), and Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay.

Also participating will be representatives of the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) scholarship programs. In addition, a Delahunt staffer will outline procedures for pursuing a congressional nomination to the Academies.

In announcing the forum, Delahunt emphasized the application deadline for potential nominees for the academic year 2000-2001 is Nov. 1.

For more information, call Cong. Delahunt's office at 1-800-794-9911.

into account books, supplies and other one-time costs for the year. Establish what your monthly contribution will be and what your teens will need to come up with.

• Set ground rules about credit cards. Having a credit card for emergencies makes sense. However, what constitutes an "emergency," must be defined beforehand. CCCS suggests this rule of thumb: "If you can eat it, drink it or wear it, it's probably not an emergency." Also, decide who will pay the bill and show your child a credit report so they understand that using credit cards irresponsibly, has consequences.

Single-Family Home Sales Remain On Record-Setting Pace

Single-family home sales remained on a record-setting pace in Massachusetts this spring as second quarter sales of detached homes increased a modest 0.5 percent and condominium sales rose 14.7 percent over the comparable period in 1998, according to data issued recently by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

Average selling prices of detached single-family homes and condos also rose steadily in the past year, MAR's report noted, an indication that housing demand continues to outpace suppply, and that trade-up and second home sales have been particularly strong in recent months.

Statewide, the sales data shows 14,532 in the same period a year ago. In addition, 3,838 condominiums were sold from April to June this year vs. 3,346 in the same quarter in 1998.

Furthermore, the MAR report shows sales in the first six months of 1999 are up 3.6 percent in the detached home market, from 22,979 in 1998 to 23,807 this year, and 22.6 percent in the condo market, from 5,104 last year to 6,258 in 1999, making January-June 1999 the most active first half for home sales in state history.

"This has been the busiest spring selling season ever, and neither the rise in interest rates or home prices has slowed activity," said MAR President James C. Dougherty. "Optimism is running high due to the healthy economy and strong growth of the monetary markets, and that has people feeling emotionally and financially secure to make home purchases." In particular, buyers are being drawn into the market by steady income and job growth, attractive interest rates (still historically low at a second quarter average of 7.26% for a 30-year fixed loan), more flexible lending requirements, increased capital gains tax exclusions and strong stock and mutual fund returns. "All of these have helped to increase buying power," he said.

Regionally, during the second quarter, detached home sales increased 12.6 percent on the South Shore and 71/2 percent in greater Boston and Worcester County over the same period a year ago, but elsewhere sales slipped a modest 1-5 percent in the West and Northeast regions while declining 12.9 percent in southeastern Massachusetts and 22.7 percent on Cape Cod and the islands. In the condo market, sales rose steadily in five of seven regions of the state, with double-digit sales gains observed in the South Shore, Southeast, greater Boston and Northeast regions.

"As a whole, the housing market looks to be on solid ground, but some areas appear to be the victims of too much success. In Barnstable, Bristol and Plymouth counties, for example, they simply don't have enough homes to sell to meet buyer demand, and sales are down from year ago levels as a result," Dougherty noted. After 16 consecutive quarters of home sales gains, the inventory of homes for sale statewide has fallen sharply this spring from 42,175 single-family listings in June 1998 to 36,876 this June, a decline of 13.2 percent. Even more pronounced is Cape Cod and the South Shore where single-family listings have declined 30 percent since June 1998, and southeastern Mass. where listings are down 38 percent.

Of course, a decreasein property listings often means more competition for the homes that are for sale, and that's good news for homeowners looking to sell. The MAR mid-year report shows the statewide average selling price for detached single-family homes increased 10.7 percent in the second quarter of 1999 as compared with the same three-month period last year, up from $216,333 in 1998 to $239,552 this year. Also, in the condo market, the average selling price has risen 11.3 percent over the past year, from $135,218 in the second quarter of 1998 to $150,453 from April-June 1999.

"In certain areas, low inventory is putting upward pressure on prices and that's led to some more aggressive appreciation in home values, but it's having little adverse effect on the market. In fact, in Cape Cod and towns south of Boston buyers are arriving from outside the area due to the relative affordability of home prices there." Dougherty said.

During the second quarter, all regions of the state reported increases in single-family average selling prices. Second quarter price gains for detached homes ranged from 1-6 percent in the Southeast, South Shore and West regions to 8-10 in the Central, greater Boston and Northeast regions, while Cape Cod & the islands saw a 23.2 percent jump in average selling price over the second quarter of 1998. In the condo market, most regions observed average selling price increases of 3-7 percent, but prices rose 9.4 percent on the Cape and islands, 13.2 percent in greater Boston, and 52.8 percent in southeastern Mass.

"The price increases of the past year are largely a function of supply and demand, but they also reflect the impact baby-boomers are having on the market," Dougherty said. "As this generation ages, many are trading up to larger homes and vacation property. Such homes often sell in the higher price ranges and tend to drive up average selling prices locally."

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflects transactions occurring through Realtor®-affiliated multiple listing services in the commonwealth, and account for approximately 50 percent of all real estate sales in Massachusetts.

McCauley Wants Number Of Candidates For City Auditor's Post

(Cont'd from page 1)

The "Invitation to Apply" would include the applicant's qualifications in the areas of education and work experience, McCauley said.

"Since the city auditor is chosen by the council it is extremely important that the council have the opportunity to select the applicant best qualified for this most important position."

"It won't hurt us to take a look. We should get as many qualified candidates as possible to pick from."

The next City Council meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 7.

Two names are already being mentioned as strong possibilities as Foy's successor:

One is Michael McFarland, Wollaston businessman and present school committee member, who served as city purchasing agent and executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets.

The other is William Grindlay who was acting auditor for several months in 1982 after Charles Shea retired.

Foy who has been city auditor 17 years, informed the councillors by letter late last month that he will be 73 in September "and it is my desire to retire."

He has served under five mayors: Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets.

"It is very important that a new city auditor be appointed so that there will be a month transition in the office," Foy said.

Delahunt On Youth Violence Study Task Force

The House Speaker and Minority Leader have appointed Cong. Bill Delahunt to serve on a bipartisan congressional task force to study youth violence across the nation.

The 24 members of the panel bring wide-ranging views and experience to this effort to seek consensus on the causes and solutions to violence committed by and against American young people.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

A recent preliminary meeting of the Bipartisan Working Group on Youth Violence, chaired jointly by Speaker Dennis Hastert and Democratic Leader Richard Gephardt, reviewed proposals for breaking the work into sub-groups focusing on a wide variety of influences on youth; including: family life; schools; economic status; faith-based and other non-profit community resources; media and popular culture; health and mental health issues.

Cong. Delahunt--with Reps. Bob Barr (R-GA), Jennifer Dunn (R-WA) and Bobby Scott (D-VA) -- was selected to co-chair the panel's efforts relating to law enforcement. Recommendations of each group will be submitted to the full task force by late October, in hopes that its members can reach agreement on a set of consensus measures.

Task Force preparations were underway today, in the shadow of the yesterday's horrifying shooting at a Los Angeles child care facility -- which Delahunt said underscores the urgency of coordinated efforts at the local, state and federal level.

"While statistics show that youth violence has actually declined in recent years, that is little consolation to the families of Littleton or Paducah," said Delahunt, a former prosecutor. "What the numbers do suggest is that, despite these sensational incidents, local anti-violence efforts are working."

"However, they are working not through political posturing," he said, "but through local, problem-solving strategies in cities like Boston, which bring together police, prosecutors, probation officers, corrections officials, youth and social service personnel, school officials, judges, health professionals, the business community, parents and young people themselves."

"My own objective through this new bipartisan initiative is to help encourage communities to develop these kind of approaches and to see that they receive the resources they need to carry them out," Delahunt said. "It remains to be seen whether there will be consensus on these questions among -- much less between -- Republicans and Democrats.

South Shore, East Bridgewater Co-operative Banks Merge

South Shore Co-operative Bank of Weymouth and East Bridgewater Co-operative Bank have merged.

The merger was effective Aug. 9, said South Shore Co-operative President and Chief Executive Officer John J. O'Brien, Jr. The new, larger entity will carry the South Shore Co-operative Bank name.

"This union brings many added financial products and services to East Bridgewater Co-op customers," O'Brien. "We offer many big bank services," Mrs. O'Brien added, "while always maintaining the principles of friendly, community bank."

Among the new services is small business banking, he said, through South Shore Co-op's commercial department.

The merger is the most recent example of growth at South Shore Co-operative. A new, state-of-the-art branch is scheduled to open in Quincy after the first of the year.

There is a long tradition of hometown service with the two co-operative banks. They have a combined 195 years of community banking on the South Shore.

"We pride ourselves on our high level of personal service," O'Brien said, "and we feel that with the addition of expanded technology and our other resources, East Bridgewater customers will be well served. This merger is good for South Shore Co-operative and good for the families and businesses we now serve."

With the merger, South Shore Co-operative Bank has total assets exceeding $90 million.

As the men gathered Tuesday, Stewart was a few yards away "checking out" other batterer's programs, according to Saulnier, who called it a "monkey dance."

Saulnier said Stewart was featured on a Channel 7 News report on battered husbands. Stewart claims he was repeatedly assaulted and terrorized by his ex-wife.

The Fatherhood Coalition has been in existence for more than four years according to Saulnier, who said he thought Stewart's case was important enough to "travel all the way from Maine."

Granite Rock Solid In Franchise Opener

1,300 Fans On Hand For 25-0 Shutout

By CHRIS POISSON

It couldn't have been scripted any better.

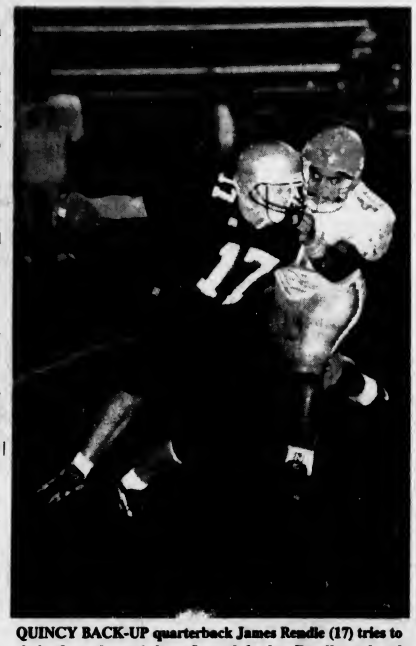
After a 30-year absence, the city of Quincy rocked once again Saturday night with the return of a semi-professional football team to the gridiron.

There was plenty of local flavor as a former North Quincy High School coach paced the sidelines and many former local high school players roamed the field.

And for the 1,300 fans in attendance, the game finished before a torrential downpour flooded the area.

In their franchise opener, the Quincy Granite (1-0) showcased a smothering defense and an opportunistic offense as they rolled to a 25-0 victory against the Hingham-based South Shore Stars (0-1) at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The players and coaches appreciated the fan turnout for their first game in the New England Football League.



"I thought the fan support was great," said coach Ken McPhee. "It was nice. That's what it was like in the old high school days.

We thought the fans were great," said David Harris, the team's co-founder, vice-president and offensive lineman. "I appreciate everybody in the city for all the support they've given us. It feels good to represent the city in the right fashion."

Quincy's performance was not bad for a team that didn't receive its game shirts until an hour before game time.

"I'm glad it's over. The first game is done," said Sean Halpin, the team's co-founder, president and middle linebacker. "Me and Dave had a lot of stuff to do all day today."

Once the shirts were picked up, it was time for business on the field. The Granite got off to a slow start in the first quarter, but their swarming defense, which held the Stars to under 100 total yards, put the offense in good field position in the second.

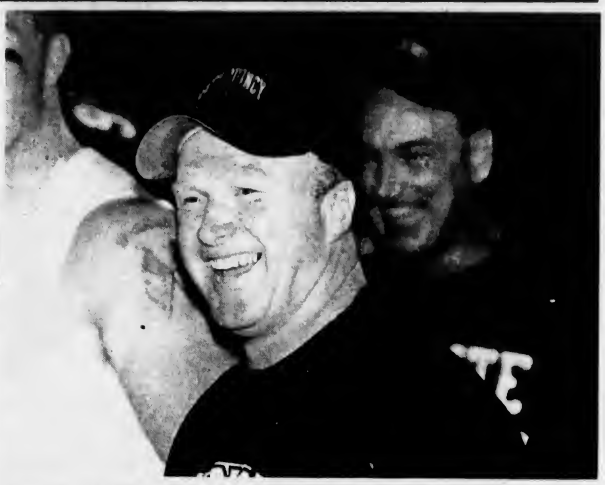
"Oh, man. They were just so good," said McPhee. "I'm so proud of them. The defense really kept us in the game."



"The way we run our defense, we've got everybody coming and swarming to the ball," said linebacker Ryan Craig. "We just play tough."

With 11:27 left in the second, quarterback Liam Higgins uncorked a 39-yard touchdown strike to wide out Bill MacDougall for a 6-0 lead as the extra point was no good.

On the Stars next possession, the quarterback fumbled the ball in his own end and the Granite pounced on it and took over at the 19-yard line.

On the ensuing play, Higgins rolled right and

Formidable Foe For Week 2

With a 25-0 thrashing of the South Shore Stars in their season premier, the Quincy Granite now have a menacing opponent waiting in the on-deck circle for week two.

Saturday, Quincy travels to Lynn Tech Stadium for an afternoon matinee with the Massachusetts Havoc, which captured back-to-back New England Football League championships in 1996 and 1997.

The Havoc went through a rebuilding season last year when they lost several offensive linemen to retirement. But they came out Saturday and pulled out a dramatic come-from-behind win in the fourth quarter against the Tri-Attleboro Rhinos.

"They have a very good defense," said David Harris, the team's vice-president and offensive lineman. "Offensively they're strong, but they're known for their defense.

Against South Shore, Quincy's offense got off to a shaky start in the first half. Offensive linemen Brian Raftery (back) and Joe Glover (knee) were injured and the line struggled, leading to problems in the running and passing game.

"Offensively, we've been getting off to a slow start so we need to pick it up a notch," said Harris. "We can't make the mistakes we made against the Stars because this team will capitalize on them."

Although the Granite faced some offensive obstacles, they were able to make second-half adjustments to produce a potent punch.

And the depth on the roster played a role in that. Quincy, in a similar situation with the Miami Dolphins, is stacked with a talented crop of running backs. The coaching staff has rotated the backs for fresh legs, which should help wear out the Havoc's defense come Saturday.

Tailbacks Will Felix, Dan Abraham, Bernard Lynch, Dan Gilmartin, Greg Hardy and Felipe Ogaldez share the duties in the backfield. Ogaldez, who runs a 4.2/4.3, showed his speed when he busted loose for a 30-plus-yard gain in the fourth quarter. The coaches plan to use him more this week.

Toss in bruising fullbacks Farouk Brown (5-11, 250) and Mike Elder (6-0, 220) and the running game becomes even more lethal.

"The depth and experience definitely holds us on offense, and defense," said Harris. "The rotation allows guys to go in and give good blows for a couple of plays, and you know the next guys will do the same thing.

"This game is going to be a big test for us. It boils down to the coaching, and our coaching staff is the best."

CAR COOLANT CARE

Auto makers typically recommend that car owners flush conventional coolant from their car's coolant systems at least every two years as a means of removing acids, phosphate and silicate gels, rust particles and mineral deposits, as well as replenishing the additives that protect vital cooling-system components. The flushing of conventional coolant is necessary because, while it is formulated with phosphate and silicate additives intended to inhibit pitting and corrosion of aluminum components, these additives fall out of solution over time to form abrasive, damaging, gel-like mixtures. In addition, anti-freeze gradually breaks down to form weak acids that erode aluminum components. Flushing spares such aluminum components as front covers, thermostat housings, cylinder heads, and intake manifolds from electrolytic metal erosion.

found tight end Scott Spaulding wide open for a touchdown and a 12-0 lead as the two-point conversion failed.

Although they scored two TDs, the Granite's offense struggled in the first half as it had problems with its running game and pass routes, which led to a couple of interceptions.

"Overall, I was very happy with our performance," said McPhee. "But I think we still have a ways to go. We have to take care of some things."

"All in all we played good football," said Harris. "The defense came up big today. They actually pulled in a little more than the offense. Offensively, we just need to get a little more cooperation with the line. But we definitely have the right people in the right program over here."

Indeed. In the second half the team made some adjustments to its running game and displayed an all-around attack.

"We made some adjustments," said McPhee. "Tony Green [offensive line coach] came in the locker room at halftime and said, 'Stop putzing around. We're better than they are. Just pour it down their throats.' And we did."

The Granite used several backs in the second half, as they were able to take control and run some time off the clock. They also added two rushing TDs.

Near the end of the third, Quincy's defense forced the Stars to punt from the back of their endzone. The punt was deflected and Quincy's Bob Chiavaroli picked it up and returned it to the 15-yard line. Three plays later Quincy scored.

QUINCY RUNNING BACK Will Felix (8) eludes a would-be Stars tackler. Felix had a four-yard TD run late in the third quarter. (John Black Photo)

Tailback Will Felix reeled off a nine-yard run. Dan Abraham plunged ahead one yard for the first down. Then Felix took a toss to his left and scampered four yards into the endzone with 2:32 left in the quarter. The Granite had an 18-0 lead after missing the two-point conversion.

"In the second half we just came out and wanted to play smash-mouth football," said Harris. "That's what it boils down to. Nothing fancy. Just run straight ahead and try to clean house."

Quincy added the final score halfway through the fourth quarter after the defense stuffed the Stars on a fourth-and-one, giving the ball to the offense at the 34-yard line.

On the first play, Higgins threw to wideout Derek Epps in the flat and he pitched it to Felix, who darted down the left side to the one-yard line. Fullback Mike Elder pounded his way in for the TD. The two-point attempt was good and Quincy had a 25-0 lead, and a win.

"I didn't know what to expect at first," said McPhee. "I think I got a pretty good read on what we're going to be as a football team."

And it's not going to be your typical expansion squad.

Degan Memorial Road Race Sept. 12

The Seventh Annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 12 at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

This 10k & 5k road race is being held in honor of Bill Degan (Deputy, United States Federal Marshal Service, Lieutenant Colonel, U.S. Marine Corp), who was killed in the line of duty in Aug. of 1992 while working for the Marshal Service.

Last year's event had over 1,800 registered runners and the Degan Memorial Committee anticipates over 2,500 this year. Participants include many law enforcement agencies and military personal from different parts of the country.

Degan felt very strongly about drug abuse, education, sports and the community. The Memorial Committee hopes, through annual scholarships and grants to different youth organizations, Degan will be remembered for the "Hero" he was, and some good may come from a terrible tragedy.

The beneficiaries of this year's event will be organizations that Bill would have supported.

The Memorial Committee made a donation to the Steeves Family of Wollaston to help Carol Steeves with the upkeep and maintenance of her power wheelchair.

In a letter to the Degan Memorial Committee, the Steeves family said the following:

"We would like to take this opportunity to thank you again for your more than generous donation to Carol with the proceeds from the Degan Memorial Road Race. This money will help her in countless ways.

"It is really impossible to express in words how grateful we are for your generosity. In Carol's race you have truly been the encouraging presence on the sidelines, the smiling faces who have again taught us all a wonderful lesson about the kindness of 'stranger.' But of course you are no longer strangers to us for the special way you have touched Carol's life and that of our whole family. Thank you again."

Board Names Tennis Tourney Division For Henry McAuliffe

The City of Quincy Park and Recreation Board has voted unanimously to preserve the memory of Quincy tennis legend Henry McAuliffe by naming a division in the annual tennis tournament in his honor.

The board acted at its August meeting on a request by players and the founder of the tournament, that started in 1971.

McAuliffe, who was called "The Master," gave willingly of himself for decades to the Quincy Tennis Community. McAuliffe passed away in February.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, the request was initiated by Kenny Rickson, Joseph Ryan, Michael Kenny and the tournament founder Ken Rickson, Sr. The dedication recognizes McAuliffe's love of the game that touched hundreds of Quincy tennis players.

The Park and Recreation Board agreed with the group that his contributions to the Quincy Tournament and to tennis in general were substantial. He was designated as a "cheerleader, a motivator of youth, a coach, an unofficial host/volunteer curator of the public courts behind the Voc-Tech school."

"Henry was a master of wit as well as tennis, and was always willing to go the extra mile to make our tournament successful," said Welch.

Upon hearing of this request, long time tennis tournament director John Franceschini enthusiastically endorsed the effort to honor McAuliffe. Franceschini recalled the early days of the tournament when McAuliffe would sit for hours in a borrowed lifeguard stand, acting as an announcer and referee for the tournament finals.

The Board voted to honor the winner of the men's doubles event with the "Henry 'The Master' McAuliffe Bowl." The motion will be effective at this fall's tournament.

This is the 29th year of the event, which crowns the top resident tennis players each fall as champions are named in 11 events.

There are two other bowls that carry names awarded in the tournament. The men's singles event honors Lionel "Shine" Buckley, a retired recreation department supervisor. The mixed doubles event is named after the late William F. Ryan, Director of Recreation from 1955-1975.

This year's tournament is sponsored by the Quincy Municipal Credit Union and the Quincy Recreation Department. Applications are currently available for the tournament, which begins Sept. 8.

For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 376-1394.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Improving Air Quality: We Can All Play A Role

By DR. PETER VALBERG

Just a generation ago, the idea that every household should separate its trash for recycling seemed odd, perhaps even a little extreme to most people. But today, nearly every community in Massachusetts maintains active recycling programs. A sharper sense of environmental responsibility encourages us to think and act in ways that decrease harmful impacts to our land and water--and for Massachusetts there has been significant improvement.

The time has come for us to make the same connection to the air we breathe. Unlike land and water pollution, air emissions are quickly mixed and rapidly transported over large areas. Air pollution is largely invisible--but the impact on the environment and our own health is a legitimate concern.

Although invisible, the effects of air pollution present themselves more immediately than far off rain forests or diminishing animal habitats. The effects impact the health of us all--friends, neighbors, family. The adverse health effects can be especially harmful to children, the elderly, and those who suffer from heart or lung ailments.

When most people think of air pollution, they have images of billowing industrial smokestacks, but here's the reality--roughly 40 percent of air pollutants that lead to harmful ground level ozone generated in Massachusetts are from cars, trucks and buses. An additional 14 percent comes from consumer products and appliances, as well as residential lawn mowers and other small engines. Therefore, while industrial emissions that lead to ozone are significant, more than half of ground level ozone comes from people performing common daily activities.

Emissions from these sources include potentially harmful chemicals like Nitrogen Oxides (NOx) and Volatile Organic Compounds (VOC). Each may be toxic in its own right; but when they combine with sunlight on hot summer days they create ground level ozone. Ozone is helpful high above the earth where it shields us from harmful ultraviolet radiation. But at ground level, it can be a potent respiratory irritant. It can decrease lung function and is responsible for many emergency room visits each summer.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health estimates that one in eight Massachusetts residents experience adverse health effects on days when ozone is high. From irritation of the eyes, nose, and throat, to aggravation of asthma, the health risk of ground level ozone can be direct and immediate.

Air quality has improved. And it will continue to improve as industrial emissions standards are toughened and enforced. But in order to do all we can to reduce the health risks associated with air pollution, individuals need to reduce the air pollution they create.

We produce more than half of our ground level ozone by driving our cars, mowing our lawns and using common consumer products like paints and solvents. Just as we create these emissions, we can reduce them.

Keeping our cars in proper working order is one of the most effective ways. Never tamper with your catalytic converter. This important piece of equipment, standard on all cars since 1975, reduces harmful pollutants. If your car exhaust is emitting a dark smoke, have it repaired. Simply keeping tires properly inflated can increase fuel efficiency and, in turn, decrease emissions. Unburned gasoline fumes in the air also add NOx and VOC to the mix, so make sure your gas cap fits tightly.

This June, heatwaves created days with excessive amounts of ozone in Massachusetts. These "unhealthy air days" occur every year, often as a result of air pollution. With two months left in the summer ozone season, we're almost certain to experience more bad air days. By the end of June 1999, Massachusetts had as many unhealthy air days as the entire 1998 season.

On hot days when the air quality is unhealthy, it's especially important to reduce air pollutants. It's also easy, because the best way to reduce pollution is to avoid certain activities. When it's especially hot, don't paint your house or use oil or petroleum-based solvents. Put off using gas-powered lawn mowers or other small engine power equipment until the heat breaks. All the above emit substantial amounts of NOx and VOC into the air.

Avoid unnecessary driving. Try carpooling to work. Every car off the road is a significant reduction of car exhaust. If you must drive, try to consolidate your errands as much as possible. Try to postpone refueling until after sundown.

Reducing air pollution requires that same sense of responsibility. We all contribute to air pollution-- and each of us has a responsibility to help improve the air we breathe.

OSTEOCHONDROMAS

There is a benign (non-cancerous) bone tumor that can be found near a toe or fingernail. The growth is made up of a combination of bone and cartilage. The patient notices a hard growth on the skin that appears to be breaking through the skin or nail bed. Often these appear after a traumatic episode like dropping an object or being stepped on a toe. These growths can be osteochondromas.

X-rays show a bony protrusion usually growing from the end of a phalanx (bone in toe). It can be painful, particularly for an athlete that applies pressure to the area. The author has seen this type of tumor in a runner and a football player. Malignant transformation (the tumor becoming cancerous) is very rare and takes the form of a chondrosarcoma. The treatment of choice is surgical removal. Recurrence is rare if the incision is done according to present standards of care.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Sadness is something that everyone must encounter at some point in life. Perhaps it is designed to teach us lessons which are not or could not be learned in any other way. If one doesn't have a little sadness, how can one know when he is happy? . . . Sadness can be the last chapter or the beginning of a new chapter life, depending on how we react. Remember the old tongue twister, "The bit of bitter butter made the better butter bitter." If one becomes bitter, it closes life to new experiences, but if one faces it with courage, it can teach something and open new channels of life.

Joy is a live, activating force with the power of strengthening one and spreading radiance to everyone around you. It is reaching out to share a part of your life with someone who is sad and discouraged.

You may not know what to say to a friend in his hour of sadness, but your presence will be worth many words. Take sorrow by the hand, shove darkness aside and force in the light. The harvest of joy is most often reaped by the hand of helpfulness.

What we turn to in the hour of sadness is determined in a good measure by what we strive for in our hours of joy.

Get ready - Get Set - GLOW. "Where there is sadness, let me sow joy."

CRITIC'S CORNER

EYES WIDE SHUT: It is considered blasphemy to say a bad word about the venerated, late director Stanley Kubrick. However, I'll take that risk. In fact, grumblings about this, his last movie, have been heard from even his most rabid fans, or so I'm told.

Tom Cruise stars as Dr. Bill Harford, a super-successful, wealthy Manhattan doctor. Nicole Kidman, Cruise's real-life wife, portrays Alice, the good doctor's wife. Together with their young daughter, the three inhabit a Central Park West penthouse that could easily be photographed for Architectural Digest.

The stage is set for what's to come when the shining couple attend the party of a friend, Victor Ziegler (Sydney Pollack). At the party, the doctor and his wife move about, shamelessly flirting with other partygoers. However, watching his wife's antics plants seeds of doubt in th good doctor's mind.

He thus goes on a sexua odyssey of sorts, hoppin into bed with such unlikel characters as the nutty rela tive of a just-decease patient, a willing hooker, nubile, child-like youn woman, ending with bizarre masked-ball orgy.

While the film is rated (I'm told certain scene were altered so that it coul be rated this way here in th U.S.), it's so distasteful, i should have been given the NCR rating. What we have here is nothing short of a pornographic movie. Don't kid yourself!

Those who delight in being titillated in this manner won't be disappointed. There are plenty of shots of the beauteous Kidman baring her bod at every possible turn. Others, like me, will merely be disgusted.

One last caveat: Obviously, this isn't one for the kiddies!

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Travel is favored, both short trips and those of a longer nature. Good news comes your way regarding a situation at a distance. A moody co-worker puts you off.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You shine as your work is recognized and your accomplishments are rewarded. However, a jealous person is looking to trip you up, so stay out of harm's way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You continue on a phase of successfully melding business and pleasure. Take full advantage while it lasts. Someone at home doesn't understand what you're trying to say.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Privacy is your ally when it comes to romance. Creativity is accented and success follows as a result. Discourses this weekend revolve around money and joint finances.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) In some ways, you're very much in the spotlight. This makes you a bit uncomfortable, but try to enjoy it. It seems you can do no wrong in the eyes of others.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You need to make some important financial decisions. Be alert for new opportunities to make more money. Your income is increasingly important.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel and communications are highlighted. Added to that is your personal charm, which is contagious. As a result, you get much done that requires far-reaching decisions.

SCORPIO (October 23 November 21) You can accomplish much on the home front, provided you avoid being overly domineering. A co-worker comes to you with an unbelievable tale. Don't buy it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Those who are waiting for a delivery are in for a long wait. The ultimate accent, though, is on leisure events and romantic encounters. The weekend brings a special surprise.

CAPRICORN (December 22 January 19) A co-worker has someone in mind for you romantically. However, although this person means well, it's not a good idea to go through with this. Try not to rush through work assignments.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're upset with what's going on at home, and this spills over into your work week. However, you need to put the situation in its proper perspective. Changes in plans are to be expected.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Sit down with your mate and talk about finances. Agreements reached are satisfactory to both. Leisure interests beckon, but avoid overspending this weekend.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: appear to be in several places at once as you dash from task to task. You are a veritable dynamo of energy, and it's generally impossible for most people to keep up with you. If not careful, this constant state of activity could jeopardize your health.

Morrissey: Hospital Should Be Top Priority

Intergovernmental Transfer programs. These federal programs award money to existing medical institutions but have a hard spending cap; any additional money Quincy Hospital receives could be at the expense of Boston Medical Center.

The mayor's current plan to save the hospital anticipates $23 million in federal support, $12 million in state support, and $33 million in city spending. Morrissey sees Quincy's all-time high bonded indebtedness, its commitments to numerous projects, and the $8 million in community development block grants potentially tied up in the shipyard, and sees not much maneuverability.

"We can't take road money and give it to health care," Morrissey said when asked about the possibility of redirecting funds from the Quincy Concourse or the repair of the Fore River Bridge. The state senator does see roughly $1 million in Salem money which could be put towards the hospital.

Morrissey wants Quincy to honor its present commitments but said that the survival of Quincy's 282-bed acute care hospital is top priority for all of Quincy's state legislators and for Mayor Sheets.

"We're not asking for anything else except Quincy Hospital," Morrissey said, adding "in these last 45 days all of our attention and resources should be spent on Quincy Hospital." The deadline for the affiliation with BMC is Sept. 30, the end of the federal fiscal year.

Morrissey said that the Home Rule Petition, which allows the affiliation to occur, should pass but that money was the real issue. When asked what the chances of the House approving the funding bill, Morrissey answered, "it's an uphill fight."

Senate President Birmingham, who said he was sympathetic to the issue but wanted to talk to some of his committee chairs before taking sides, called Sen. Morrissey a "dogged advocate" of Quincy Hospital who had articulated its essential role in the city "loudly and clearly."

Both Birmingham and Morrissey pointed out that any bill that reaches the senate might be quite different from the current version in the House, with a possible reduction in money or timeframe (the bill now calls for a direct appropriation for a three year period). That's why Morrissey says Quincy must remain financially flexible.

Morrissey's biggest worry is that the House may kill the proposal before the senators even get a chance to discuss it. "There might be three outs before I even get a chance to bat," Morrissey warned.

Morrissey was asked once again if Quincy Hospital was so important that it put all other projects on the backburner.

"Absolutely," he replied.

Newton Endorsed By Carmen's Union

Joseph Newton, candidate for Ward 6 city councillor, recently received the Boston Carmen's Union endorsement.

Newton said he was extremely pleased to receive the endorsement for a second time and has always been a strong supporter of public transportation.

In 1998, Newton spoke to MBTA officials at Quincy City Hall against bus route cuts. "When cuts are made to public transportation it has a dramatic effect on the people who need it most, the elderly and handicap."

Newton said he hopes MBTA officials will look for ways to promote ridership in Quincy which will in turn assist in alleviating the traffic flow in many of the city's congested areas.

Search For Body Ends As Too Dangerous

Death Quarry May Be Filled In

PEDESTRIANS SCATTERED Tuesday when this car wound up on the sidewalk against the entrance to the Embellish salon on Hancock St., Quincy Sq. The driver, a woman, apparently was uninjured but a woman in a car behind was taken to Quincy Hospital. The door to Embellish and two flower pots were damaged.

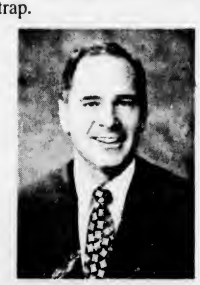
By CRAIG SALTERS

The Granite Rail Quarry in West Quincy, where one body was found and investigators have spent two years and nearly $2 million searching for another, may be filled in, eliminating it as a death trap.

Dist. Atty. William Keating, who has ended the search for the body of a woman reported to be in the quarry, calling it too dangerous to continue even after draining 160 million gallons of water, said he believes the MDC has plans to fill it in.

Keating said if it is to be filled in, he would "leave the door open" in the investigation.



"If they put equipment down there to move debris around before filling the quarry, we would bring in cadaver-sniffing dogs for one last look," he said.

However, MDC officials questioned by The Quincy Sun Tuesday neither confirmed nor denied the quarry would be filled.

But Conan French, MDC chief of staff, did say they would "assess the site as to its future role in the park system."

He also disclosed that the MDC has a contract with consultants to draft a master plan for the quarry site.

In a letter to MDC Commissioner David B. Balfour, Jr., First Asst. Dist. Atty. Dennis Mahoney, noting that the quarry had been drained, said:

WILLIAM KEATING

"We have employed on two different occasions State Police cadaver-sniffing canines and conducted extensive visual inspections of the bottom of the quarry. While no body was found, a mannequin was located and recovered in the general area where divers believed they had observed a body almost two years ago.

"We understand that you will now be taking measures to fill in the quarry at some time in the near future. We would ask that when you do begin this, that you inform

Cites Study Results

Cheney Urges Compromise On Highpoint Development

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Former City Councillor Michael Cheney is urging the city council to reach a compromise with the developer over the size of the Highpoint project to prevent a negative impact on the city.

Cheney, serving as a consultant to the South Shore Building Trades Council, released the results of a study Tuesday underscoring the effects of future municipal budgets if a comprehensive permit is issued for 1,641 units. The comprehensive permit proposal calls for more than 400 affordable housing units which Cheney said would lead to higher school enrollments.

According to the study, the city would have to build at least one new school and add on to an existing middle school. The project would add 798 students within five years to the existing school enrollment, Cheney said.

The study also outlines the effect on the city's budget in future years. According to the report, it would cost the city a minimum of $7,426,429 per year while the city would collect $1,993,900 in taxes leaving the city with a $5,432,529 shortfall. The study was conducted using actual Quincy Housing Authority numbers on subsidized housing units in Quincy as opposed to national or regional statistics, Cheney said.

"I think the City Council should take another look at this. This is going to have long-term impacts on the city budget. I am beginning to feel like they are playing Russian roulette with the taxpayers as the loser here," Cheney said.

"The developer has stated he is willing to meet and work out a compromise. I am wondering what the city is waiting for," Cheney added.

Developer Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, filed a new

Cahill-Union Pre-Trial Conference Reset For Sept. 2

A pre-trial conference on the conflict of interest complaint against City Councilor Tim Cahill has been rescheduled for Thursday, Sept. 2 at Quincy District Court.

The conference, originally scheduled for Aug. 19, was continued by mutual consent of counsel representing Cahill and the Building and Construction Trades Council of Quincy and the South Shore.

Cahill has pleaded innocent to the complaint brought by the union regarding the proposed Highpoint development on Quarry St.

The union claims Cahill was in conflict when he took part in council hearings and discussions and voted on the matter because family members own property near the development site.

City Council Regular September Meetings To Be Held On Tuesdays

The two regular City Council meetings scheduled in September will be held Tuesday evenings instead of Monday.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said the meetings will be Tuesday, Sept. 7 and Tuesday, Sept. 21.

The changes are due, he said, to the Labor Day holiday and the Jewish Holiday of Yom Kippur, both of which are on Mondays.

Commission's Beach Survey Results Available To Public

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission announces the availability of a report summarizing the opinions and desires of Quincy residents relating to city-wide beach and coastal issues.

The results of the report, presented to Mayor James Sheets by the Commission in July, are now available in library branches and community centers throughout the city.

"This report summarizes the collective voices of more than 2,000 Quincy residents," said Leo Kelly, chairman of the city's Beaches and Coastal Commission. "Residents deserve the opportunity to review the collective concerns of city residents as they relate to beach and coastal quality."

The commission is developing beach and coastal recommendations for Mayor Sheets based on survey findings.

The survey collected information on which coastal areas residents visit, how frequently they visit them, as well as what activities, information, and improvements residents would like to see in these areas. Survey highlights reveal most residents want improved water quality, more beach sand, better beach facilities, and curbs on pets and pet waste along beaches and coastal areas.

Other findings include:

• Respondents on average visited Quincy beaches or coastal areas 2 to 3 times each week throughout the calendar year.

• The most popular coastal areas determined by survey respondents in descending order are in Wollaston, Squantum, (Ward 1) peninsula, and Quincy Point.

• Roughly, 44% of people visiting beaches or coastal areas do so to exercise (walk, run, bike or rollerblade).

• Only 7% of respondents claim to swim at Quincy beaches.

• Respondents collectively log 300,000 visits to Quincy beaches and coastal areas each year, with more than 50% at Wollaston Beach.

• Nearly 60% of respondents who frequent beaches outside of Quincy visit beaches on the South Shore (primarily Nantasket), citing water quality and sand.

• 44% of respondents believe the cleanliness of city beaches or coastal areas is below average or poor, while only 19% of respondents consider the cleanliness of these areas good or excellent.

• Swimming or swimming lessons are cited as the most desired activity at Quincy beaches and coastal areas, followed by organized recreational activities, family activities, and boating-related activities.

• Most residents visit the beach they live near with the exception of Wollaston, which attracts residents city-wide.

Residents who wish to have a copy of the report may also contact Chairman Leo Kelly at 773-1534.

Besides Kelly, other Commission members are:

Douglas Gutro, vice chairman; Margaret Milne, secretary; Katie Barrett, Jane Gallahue, Robert Galligan, Robert Lescinkas, Sr., Ann McDonald, Mike Morad, David Murphy, Jack Nigro and Bernie Reisberg.

Quincy 2000 Awards $232,000 In Loans To Tortilla Factory

Quincy 2000, has awarded loans totalling $232,000 to Maria & Ricardo's Tortilla Factory to create manufacturing jobs in the city and to encourage other businesses to locate here.

The business, which makes dozen varieties of flavored flat breads known as "wrappys," in addition to standard corn and flour tortillas, tortilla chips and tostadas, is relocating to Quincy this summer from Jamaica Plain.

"We chose Quincy because of its pro-business atmosphere and easy accessibility to both Boston and the South Shore," said Santiago Villanueva, executive vice president.

"The city is very attractive to businesses. Its economic development organization, Quincy 2000, has been involved with our project from the beginning, helping us with permitting and zoning issues. With the Quincy 2000 funds we are able to complete construction at our facility and buy additional refrigeration equipment that will allow us to increase production and create jobs. We hope to create at least 12 jobs over the next five years."

Steps Down After 7 Years As Director

Cheney Turns First Night Events Over To City

Former City Councillor Michael Cheney, founder of First Night Quincy, is turning the event, which he has headed up for seven years, over to the City of Quincy.

"First Night events have become so large that organizing and running them has become a full time job," Cheney said.

In addition to First Night Quincy, Cheney has organized and managed President's Day Winter Festival, Blacks Creek Muster, a colonial encampment, First Family Day and Arts In The Parks. For the past two years Cheney has assisted in the organizing of Fr. Bill's Food Fest and has made floats for the Christmas and Flag Day Parades.

"I have enjoyed every minute of my service to the families of Quincy and the South Shore. All of the events I have been involved in were designed to bring families together in a non-alcoholic and drug free setting. I think we have accomplished that," Cheney said.

Cheney started organizing events for the city when he was appointed chairmen of the City Council's Tourism Committee. Cheney said the city now has a full time paid events coordinator and that it is only fitting that she take over the responsibilities of running these events.

"I have faith that Ronda Merell will do a good job," he said.

Cheney has met with Mayor James Sheets and Merell to insure that there is a smooth transition.

"I have turned over all of the lists of sponsors, volunteers and vendors to Ronda. We have booked 70% of the event and all the contracts are ready for her to sign. I am preparing an inventory of equipment and resources to turn over to the city," Cheney said. Cheney also noted he will miss the excitement but he will be only a phone call away.

"A few key volunteers will be retiring with me. I think they all need a rest,"

Rabbi Mann: A Quincy Treasure

A cherished Quincy treasure is now 90 years old. Make that 90 years young.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue, dean of the Quincy clergy, reached that milestone the other day.

He is now in his 57th year as spiritual leader at Beth Israel, the longest anyone has served a Quincy house of worship.

MANN

Asked how he was doing, he mused: "I'm doing my age."

He's really doing better than his age.

He came to Beth Israel in 1942 during World War II and is still going strong.

And he is still as humble and as devoted to his congregation and to Quincy.

He's one of those special people you would like to see more of in a world that really needs them.

Quincy is fortunate Rabbi Mann came to Quincy--and decided to stay.

You don't get one like him very often.

SADLY, WE LOST one like Rabbi Mann with the death last week of Dr. Sid Cutler at age 83.

CUTLER

A legendary oral surgeon for 54 years in Quincy Square until he retired last year, he helped send many basketball players at Quincy High School (his alma mater) to college on scholarship.

And he did it quietly, without fanfare--he just wanted to help. But the Quincy High School Basketball Hall of Fame knew what he was doing despite Sid keeping it quiet and inducted him in 1990.

Sid was a rabid sports enthusiast and his favorite pro team was the Celtics.

He started going to the games when the Celtics were just getting started.

"There was no trouble getting a seat back then," he once mused.

He met Red Auerbach in the early days and the two became friends. And Sid later became the Celtics team dentist.

His favorite Celtics: Bill Russell and Bob Cousy. "They really got me interested."

Sid helped make a little history at Quincy Hospital some years ago with anesthetist Naif Simon. He extracted two teeth from a patient who Simon put under hypnosis with her consent instead of administering anesthesia.

It was a surgery first at the hospital. And the patient said she didn't feel a thing.

Sid was soft-spoken, never got angry, and took things in stride. A good family man, a gentle man and a gentleman.

He was born and grew up in Quincy. And although he eventually moved to Braintree, his heart was always here in Quincy. It was an 83-year love affair.

No, you don't get one like him very often, either.

FRANK McCAULEY, city councillor, former mayor, and now -- a romantic.

Yes, that was his ad in last week's Sun. The one that read:

"Thank You, Sandra
for 45 Wonderful Years
Friday, Aug. 13, 1954
Friday, Aug. 13, 1999
Love, Frank."

McCAULEY

Sandra, of course, is his better half and was taken by complete surprise when she saw it.

"It was very thoughtful of him," she says. "I thought it was wonderful."

McCauley has long had a public image of holding onto a buck like he had a hand full of glue.

But that isn't the real Frank, says Sandra.

"He's really a very generous person," she says. "Besides that nice ad in The Sun, he also gave me a sapphire and diamond bracelet."

To which McCauley adds: "Sandra has been a wonderful wife these 45 years. Friday the 13th was my lucky day."

He's not only romantic but sentimental, too.

But that probably won't prevent him from keeping a sharp eye on city spending.

STATE SENATE PRESIDENT Tom Birmingham knows how to dress when he comes to Quincy.

BIRMINGHAM

On stops at Wollaston Manor, WJDA and The Sun last week, he was attired in a neat tan summer suit and a perfect matching historic Quincy necktie. One of the ones that Joanne Dondero has as a feature at Abigail's Crossing in Quincy Square.

Birmingham was escorted by Senator Michael Morrissey who has a Quincy tie but wasn't wearing it.

"I forgot and left it home," he said.

Birmingham said he'd remind him the next time.

RUSSELL PATTEN hopes to follow a family member to City Hall.

PATTEN

Patten, of Babcock St., Houghs Neck, is a candidate for the Ward 1 seat Peter Kolson is leaving to run for councillor at-large.

Patten's great-great-great-grandfather, James Burr, was a member of Quincy's first council in 1889 when Quincy shifted from town to city government.

A fund-raising reception for Patten will be held Thursday, Aug. 26 from 5 to 7 p.m. at The Custom House, 125 Sea St.

As an added attraction, a photo of his great-great-great-grandfather will be on display. Those attending are invited to check it for family resemblance.

Patten hopes the resemblance is also political -- like in city councillor.

Free Smoking Cessation Program At Quincy Hospital

Bay State Community Services is offering a free eight-week smoking cessation program from 6-7:30 p.m. at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

The program will be held Tuesday evenings, starting Sept. 14, through Nov. 2.

America's first daily newspaper, the Pennsylvania Evening Post and Daily Advertiser, was not published until 1783.

Maria Connare, LMHC, CAC will lead the group through the series of eight group smoking cessation counseling sessions that provide education on methods for ceasing tobacco use, supportive counseling during the early quitting period, and referral to individual smoking cessation counseling. All eight weeks of the program should be attended in order to gain maximum benefit.

Call Connare at (617) 472-6027, Ext. 147 to register or for more information about this program.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's real photo postcard view of Billings Road in Norfolk Downs looking east from its intersection with Hancock Street. All the houses to Felton Street on the left and Vane Street on the right were moved to other locations in the Downs to make way for the commercial buildings that now line both sides of this street. The recent streetscape improvements in the Downs have also changed this view quite a bit.

SHINE Has Prescription Help For Senior Citizens

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing to let seniors know about a program which may help them pay for prescription drugs.

When the federal Balanced Budget Act was passed in 1997, Medicare managed care plans (HMO's) in Massachusetts were given the opportunity to change their prescription drug coverage for seniors. As a result, most HMOs reduced their coverage from unlimited (with minimal copayments) to a limited or "capped" amount per quarter (with minimal copayments).

The Medicare HMOs recognized that this reduction would be a hardship for many citizens, so they established transitional pharmacy assistance programs. Unfortunately, we have found that many seniors are not aware they may be eligible for these programs, so they are paying more money out-of-pocket than they need to be doing, or they are not buying the medications they need.

Each Medicare HMO has allocated $2-$5 million dollars to help seniors in 1999 who had purchased drug coverage through a Medicare HMO as of 12/98. Those seniors who are eligible due to low income, or financial hardship, would be expected to contribute $300 after exhausting the allowed quarterly drug benefit. Then the HMO would reimburse the senior until the next quarterly drug coverage begins. This money is only available in 1999, so I encourage anyone who thinks he or she may be eligible, to start saving prescription drug receipts and call his or her HMO plan for an application.

For other information on programs that help pay for prescription drugs, seniors may call their local Council on Aging and ask to speak with a SHINE health benefits counselor, or may call the Regional Program at 1-800-882 2003. SHINE counselors have information on mail-order drug programs, federal and state programs, as well as free drug programs through pharmaceutical companies.

The acronym "SHINE" stands for "Serving Health Information Needs of Elders." The SHINE Program is a free, confidential and unbiased health benefits counseling program for Massachusetts seniors which is funded and managed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. Administered through regional organizations such as the Quincy Elder Services "SHINE" Office in Quincy, counselors work out of local senior centers and area Councils on Aging. Volunteer counselors help seniors understand and assess their health insurance needs, process claims, and resolve health insurance billing problems.

While several legislative proposals are under debate at federal and state levels, implementation of new coverage plans will take time. I encourage seniors and their families to act now to receive the help which is available through their South Shore SHINE volunteer counselors at several South Shore "SHINE" sites. Call the South Shore area SHINE Director for more information at 1-617-376-1247.

Gambling Ship In Quincy?

Editor The Quincy Sun:

I hope not. I hope people who care about Quincy the most, the people who live here, will say "no" to these ships, and vote appropriately to this November referendum.

To those who want these gambling ships because they might be another source of income for Quincy, if we work hard enough, there are better alternate sources. Those who are owners of these ships don't really care about Quincy and its good quality of life; they just want to make money off Quincy, and they probably don't live in Quincy either.

Please don't allow these gambling ships in Quincy; Quincy doesn't deserve the name "city of sin," too.

Council Meets In Secret To Discuss Deegan Letter

By PAUL HAROLD

The city council met in an unprecedented secret meeting to discuss a letter from City Manager William Deegan concerning the fate of the Plan E system.

Aug. 26 - Sept. 1
1950
49 Years Ago

While no one in attendance would comment on the record, Deegan's letter questioned the interference of the council in management issues. If such interference continued, Plan E, the manager form of city government, would be unable to function.

The letter came in reaction to a vote of the council earlier this week, to investigate the investigation the manager was making of the Fire Department. Deegan had hired a consultant to recommend efficiencies in each department, the first one being the Fire Department.

Councillor Frank Orcutt's resolution for the council investigation passed by a 4-2, vote with councillors Edna Austin and Alfred Helfrich voting no.

Deegan responded by saying that if the council investigated every department survey the whole city would be fouled up and the Plan E reforms couldn't be carried out.

H.P. HOOD MODERNIZES TO MEET DEMAND

H.D. Lockhart, manager of the Quincy district of the H.P. Hood Company, said that major improvements were underway at the Quincy facility to ensure milk deliveries to all civilian and military populations.

Lockhart noted the difficulties the company experienced during World War II meeting milk demands. He said that even if the international situation became more serious, the modernization of the plant would prepare them for any eventualities.

1,500 AT RECREATION DEPT. WATER SHOW

An estimated 1,500 people gathered at the Adams Shore Beach for the recreation department's city wide competitions and water show.

The program was under the direction of the recreation department's head of water safety, John Morley. Miss Kathleen McCoy was head of the judging. The program consisted of swimming races, comedy acts, water ballet and life saving demonstrations. The top three winning playgrounds in the combined competitions were Avalon beach, Nickerson Beach and Adams Shore Beach.

SCRABBLE TOURNAMENT TEAMS of Ann Powers and Ellen Ford (left) and Sheila Petruccelli and Elizabeth Watson (right) were among the 22 teams which recently participated in a recent fundraiser for LVA-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library and literacy partner Altrusa International.

Scrabble Tournament A Success

LVA-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library and literacy partner Altrusa International of Quincy recently held its first fundraiser, a Scrabble tournament.

The National Scrabble Association donated 12 deluxe Scrabble games. Barnes and Noble of Braintree and Merrian-Webster, Inc. donated dictionaries for the event. The Common Market, The Chart House and Ann Taylor donated certificates for prizes.

Sue Duggan of Altrusa was moderator for 22 teams who competed, enjoyed refreshments and played several challenging Scrabble games. Hilda Siegal of the National Scrabble Association came to answer questions on disputed words and rules of the game while husband Ted tallied scores.

The winning team of Mary Clark and Claire Brennan received complimentary Harbor Express rides and dinner at the Chart House in Boston. Second place winners Elaine and Tom Meade received gift certificates to Barnes and Noble.

Players enjoyed the evening and requested it be an annual event, with some suggesting a junior Scrabble event for kids. Through sponsors Altrusa International of Quincy, Childs, Bertman and Tseckares, Atlantic Development, and several anonymous donors, the tournament raised funds for the Literacy Project space in the new building.

"This event is so closely tied to our mission of teaching reading and writing and was so well-received that many other LVA affiliates in Massachusetts would also like to have a Scrabble tournament," said Elaine Kline, Literacy Project manager. "An event like this one gives adult who have a hard time with reading a chance to have some fun with words."

People who love to read and love words make great tutors. For more information about tutoring and the Literacy Project, call 376-1314.

Zucchini Parmesan

Although we only have a few tomato plants bearing fruit this year, our daughter Sue brought us a huge zucchini last week.

I usually make a family favorite, zucchini fritters. But with the size of this one, I decided to make it parmesan style without frying!

Zucchini Parmesan
1 zucchini (cut in quarter inch or so slices)
2-3 cups tomato sauce (enough for layering) grated cheese
1/2 cup shredded cheese bread crumbs for coating
1 egg mixed with milk for coating
salt and pepper

First slice the zucchini. Dip each slice in the egg mixture and then the bread crumbs. Place on a slightly greased cookie sheet (I had to use two) and bake in a preheated 350 degree oven turning once until lightly browned.

In a baking pan, place some tomato sauce on the bottom. Layer the zucchini slices with a bit of the shredded cheese, grated cheese and sauce. Top with the two cheeses and bake in a 350 degree oven covered for about 35 minutes. Cool and then serve. They are great the next day (if you have leftovers) in a sandwich.

Over $10,000 Raised For Sailor's Home Cemetery

More than 200 persons attended the recent fundraiser for the Sailor's Home Cemetery Restoration Committee which was deemed a huge success with profits benefiting the restoration and beautification of The Sailor's Home Cemetery located off Fenno St.

The amount of $10,000 plus was raised which was the committee's goal for the event. "The goal is also to share the interesting history of Quincy's past and make the cemetery known to all,:" said Michelle Lydon, chairperson of the committee.

The committee plans to prepare for the repairs of the cemetery as well as a monument which will be erected honoring sailors. The committee hopes that all repairs will be completed by Memorial Day, 2000.

The New England Historic Genealogical Society is currently working on the History of the Brave Sailors.

The committee has incorporated Laurel Oster, the great-great granddaughter of John Powers, one of the men buried at the Sailor's Cemetery.

During the event, which was held at the Bryan Post, the Wollaston Legion Post was honored for their efforts to honor these men every year on Memorial Day.

A PAINTING OF the Sailors Home Cemetery was presented to Michelle Lydon (left), restoration committee chairwoman, by Laurel Kennedy Oster of Quincy, whose great-great-grandfather is buried in the Sailors Home Cemetery.

A SPECIAL AWARD of recognition was presented to the Wollaston Legion Post at the Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration fundraiser held at the Bryan VFW Post. Wollaston Legion was recognized for conducting Memorial Day services at the cemetery for many years. From the left are Bryant Carter, member of the Sailors Cemetery Restoration Committee and whose later father, Bryant Sr., served as commander of the Wollaston Post; Past Commander Arthur Senter, Past Commander Frank Davy and Michelle Lydon, chairwoman of the Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee.

GREATER EXPECTATIONS

The latest government statistics tracking the nation's health reveal that Americans' life expectancy is at an all-time high of 76 1/2 years. the number of years that those born in the United States can expect to live has increased in large part due to declining death rates from major diseases, as well as from accidents, homicides and suicides. African-American males experieced the most dramatic improvement in life expectancy, with an increase of 1.2 years to 67.3 years. Their female counterparts' life expectancy rose half a year to 74.7 years. White females saw their life expectancies rise to 79.3 years (a one-tenth increase), while white males can expect to live 74.3 years(an improvment of four-tenths).

What matters most as we age is quality of life, not just how many years we live. Finding the right support is key to maintaining one's well-being and overall heath.

Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers convenience, a stimulating enviroment and a scenic location. You'll find friends, support and beautiful surroundings at Four Seaport Drive. Our 24-hour emergency call response system means that help is just a moment away. Visit Marina Place and see how you can take advantage of Summer Savings. We are open daily for tours; call us at 617-770-3264.

P.S. While "life expectancy" refers to the number of years that people actually live, "life span" applies to the biological limit of human life, which is 120 years.

Quincy 2000 Awards $232,000 In Loans To Tortilla Factory

ways."

Mexican native Heidi Hartung founded the company in 1987, along with her sister and cousin, and now runs the business with Villanueva and others.

"We started the business because we were unable to find tortillas that we liked in the area," said Hartung. "What makes our tortillas unique is that they are very fresh and soft and come in a variety of flavors. They appeal to a wide audience and can be used for many purposes, such as making roll-up sandwiches."

Hartung is looking forward to doing business in Quincy.

"We are very excited about our new location in what used to be an old bowling alley on Broad Street, which is twice as big as our old space. Our factory will have 14,000 square feet, which gives us plenty of room for our new automated production equipment. When the building renovations are finished and all the equipment is installed, we will have a state-of-the-art tortilla factory."

Marian & Ricardo's is the second food manufacturing business that has relocated to Quincy in the past few years that Quincy 2000 has been able to help with funds for job creation. In 1997, when Boston Bagel moved from Roslindale to Quincy, it received $108,000 from the Loan Pool and $80,000 in Quincy 2000 Job Creation Loans for new equipment. Since that time, that company has created seven new jobs and continues to grow. As traditional manufacturing jobs have left the city over the past decade, it is a priority of Quincy 2000 to attract new businesses to provide low-to-moderate-income residents with job opportunities.

Funding for the job creation program comes from City of Quincy's Community Development Block Grant Program. Recipients must agree to create jobs for low-to-moderate income persons.

For information about the program, contact Quincy 2000 at (617) 847-1454.
